The Trial Chamber also took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact number 1558 on the transportation of Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly from Potočari to Kladanj on 13 and 14 July 1995 reviewed in chapter 7.6. The VRS transferred thousands of Bosnian-Muslim civilians from the Srebrenica enclave.<sup>10877</sup> Women, children, and elderly were bussed out of Potočari to Bosnian Muslim-held territory near Kladanj.<sup>10878</sup> The DK participated in the removal of the Bosnian-Muslim civilians from Potočari following the take-over of Srebrenica.<sup>10879</sup> They coordinated the boarding of the buses by the Bosnian-Muslim refugees.<sup>10880</sup> Some soldiers were hitting and abusing the refugees as they boarded the buses.<sup>10881</sup> Witness RM-268 saw in various instances, civilians being pushed around and on one occasion, he saw Nedeljko Milodragović, an instructor of the Jahorina Detachment, hit a person.<sup>10882</sup> Along the road, some village residents taunted the passengers with the three-fingered Serb salute.<sup>10883</sup> Others threw stones at the passing buses.<sup>10884</sup> Van Duijn testified that in the evening of 12 July 1995 Mane told him that the Serb forces present in Potočari would go back to Bratunac in order to celebrate in Hotel Fontana.<sup>10885</sup> Mane instructed him to clear the asphalt road leading from the north to the south because the Serb forces would need the road to transport troops to the south.<sup>10886</sup> Mane also told him that on the next day, 13 July, they would resume the transport of ‘refugees’ again around 8:30 a.m.<sup>10887</sup>

2536. DutchBat soldiers attempted to escort the buses carrying the Bosnian-Muslim civilians out of Potočari. They succeeded in accompanying the first convoy of refugees on 12 July, but thereafter they were stopped by the VRS who stole 16 to 18 DutchBat jeeps, as well as around 100 small arms, which rendered further DutchBat escorts impossible.<sup>10888</sup> Vincentius Egbers testified that on 12 July 1995, Franken ordered 13 DutchBat soldiers, including the witness, to escort buses with Muslim women and children, to take food, water, and sleeping bags, and to radio any information they may gather about these buses.<sup>10889</sup> Each bus contained about sixty persons.<sup>10890</sup> The buses travelled from Potočari to Bratunac, Konjevic Polje, Nova Kasaba, Milici, Lazenica, and Kladanj.<sup>10891</sup> While escorting the first convoy out of Potočari, the witness saw hundreds of ‘Bosnian Serbs’ celebrating, shouting, and throwing things at the bus in Bratunac.<sup>10892</sup> During the journey, the witness saw VRS infantry firing at the woods facing the enclave.<sup>10893</sup> He testified that VRS infantry stopped the convoy and told him that they were targeting Muslim fighters in the woods and that the convoy would be able to go through once they fire anti-aircraft guns at the woods with grad rockets.<sup>10894</sup> The witness did not hear any return fire from the woods. The witness saw hundreds of VRS infantry, dressed in green and armed with AK-47s, other types of machine-guns and equipped with vehicles with anti-aircraft guns with four barrels, between Sandići, Nova Kasaba, and Milici, in groups of five or six, positioned every 20 metres and facing the woods.<sup>10895</sup> The women, children, and elderly people disembarked the buses in the woods near the confrontation line and had to walk towards Kladanj.<sup>10896</sup> The women and children were terrified and gestured that they would be slaughtered.<sup>10897</sup>

2537. Franken testified that he received reports from the DutchBat escort teams that the initial convoy went well in that the men and women had been transported unharmed to an area near Kladanj, and Franken believed that the second convoy went according to plan as well, and that the situation was reflected in an UNMO report dated 12 July.<sup>10898</sup> After the second convoy, the Serb forces harassed the DutchBat escort teams and robbed them of 16 vehicles, weapons, flak jackets, ammunition, and/or the equipment in their jeeps. Franken believed that the harassment and robbing of the DutchBat escorts was organized in order to deter DutchBat from continuing to escort convoys and 2538. Most of the women, children, and elderly bussed out of Potočari arrived safely at Tišća.<sup>10901</sup> After disembarking, they were forced to continue on foot for several kilometres through the ‘no-man’s land’ between the Bosnian-Serb and Bosnian-Muslim lines to Kladanj.<sup>10902</sup> The removal of the Bosnian-Muslim civilian population from Potočari was completed on the evening of 13 July by 8 p.m.<sup>10903</sup> Witness RM-268 stated that the transportation of Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari continued until 10 or 11 p.m.<sup>10904</sup> The witness and those members of the Jahorina Detachment who had been present in Potočari left for Bjelovac.<sup>10905</sup> The witness further stated that on 13 July 1995, after he had met with Borovčanin in Bratunac, members of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade participated in the evacuation of ‘civilians’ out of Potočari.<sup>10906</sup>

2539. Šehra Ibišević stated that on 12 July 1995, buses and trucks were organized to transport the ‘refugees’.<sup>10907</sup> She further stated that ‘Chetnik’ soldiers often stopped the bus to remove people or search for gold and money, and she specifically remembered a Serb soldier stopping the bus in Kravica and an incident in which ‘Chetniks’ took two girls who were not heard from again.<sup>10908</sup> Eight male members of Ibišević’s family did not survive the fall of Srebrenica.<sup>10909</sup> The houses of two of her relatives in Kutlići were burned or destroyed by explosives.<sup>10910</sup>

UN flak jackets and carried weapons of the Dutch soldiers.<sup>10911</sup> The witness managed to slip past a 'Chetnik checkpoint' and boarded a bus.<sup>10912</sup> There were approximately 60 women and children, one elderly man, and the witness with his daughter on the bus.<sup>10913</sup> The bus travelled from Potočari to Luke, close to the separation line via Bratunac, Kravica, Konjevic Polje, Milici, and Vlasenica.<sup>10914</sup> In the village of Magašaći the bus stopped and somebody asked whether there were any men on the bus.<sup>10915</sup> The two men on the bus went unnoticed and the bus was permitted to continue. The bus was stopped approximately nine or ten more times before reaching Luke. While passing through Kravica, the women in the bus started screaming as they recognised some of the men outside.<sup>10916</sup> The witness saw groups of 10 to 15 bodies in civilian clothing lying in the meadows on both sides of the road.<sup>10917</sup> He also saw groups of men walking towards the centre of Kravica, escorted by 'Chetnik' soldiers who wore camouflage uniforms and carried automatic weapons.<sup>10918</sup> The witness testified that the transportation of civilians out of Potočari was against the will of the Muslim population.<sup>10919</sup>

the military police, drove to Konjević Polje in a white Dutchbat APC bearing the UN sign.<sup>10924</sup> Shortly before the APC took off, Mladić walked up to Popović and started shouting.<sup>10925</sup> Upon arrival in Konjević Polje, the APC was parked at the intersection of the Bratunac and Kravica road.<sup>10926</sup> Two armed Dutchbat soldiers emerged from the forest and asked whether they could join.<sup>10927</sup> They were allowed to board the APC, which subsequently started driving very slowly towards Bratunac, following a blue-white police car with a male voice coming out of a loud-speaker.<sup>10928</sup> On board of the APC at that time were Janković, Nikolić, Petrović and the two Dutchbat soldiers.<sup>10929</sup> After the convoy drove for three kilometres along the Bratunac-Konjević Polje road, they made a U-turn and returned to Konjević Polje.<sup>10930</sup> En route, two ‘civilians’, who the witness believed were Muslims, boarded the APC and returned with it to Konjević Polje.<sup>10931</sup> Upon its return to Konjević Polje, the APC parked again at the intersection.<sup>10932</sup> The two DutchBat soldiers boarded a vehicle in an approaching convoy with women and children headed by a white UN jeep and left into the direction of Milici.<sup>10933</sup> In the late afternoon, Janković, Nikolić and Petrović returned to Bratunac in the APC.<sup>10934</sup> The witness saw between 500 to 1,000 Muslims escorted by about ten Serb soldiers walking in a column towards Konjević Polje.<sup>10935</sup>

2544. According to an Annex to a UN daily report of 13 July 1995 from Akashi to Annan, UNMOs observed 34 to 46 full buses heading from Kladanj to Tuzla.<sup>10941</sup> At Kladanj, no males over the age of 12 with the exception of a few over 60, were observed.<sup>10942</sup> The 'refugees' present in Kladanj on 13 July 1995 told UNMOs that they had witnessed that men had been separated from others and were severely beaten, stoned, and sometimes stabbed.<sup>10943</sup> By 5:15 p.m. on 13 July 1995, the transport of all refugees from outside the compound had been completed and transport then focussed on those inside the compound.<sup>10944</sup> By 9:50 p.m. all refugees had left the compound, except for a few patients in the hospital within the compound.<sup>10945</sup> According to the UN daily report of 13 July 1995 from Akashi to Annan, as of the morning of 14 July 1995, 15,000 displaced persons had arrived in Tuzla, 3,000 were on their way on VRS buses, and another 3,000 were about to leave the DutchBat base in Srebrenica.<sup>10946</sup>

They noted that the State Security Department had provided them with an opinion indicating that Karadžić had allegedly 'abolished' all local staff of UNPROFOR.<sup>10948</sup> Nikolić explained that abolished meant that Karadžić had pardoned or amnestied these persons.<sup>10949</sup> They proposed that the local staff should not be held.<sup>10950</sup> The witness explained that this meant that the local staff should be allowed to leave Potočari along with their employers and go wherever they chose.<sup>10951</sup> Janković told the witness that the local staff had been allowed to leave Potočari together with the DutchBat convoy.<sup>10952</sup>

2546. Franken testified that the only people left at the DutchBat base were MSF personnel with their patients, Mandžić, UNHCR personnel, interpreters, DutchBat and its local staff, and the UNMOs. The DutchBat personnel who had been held in Bratunac were sent home directly from Bratunac and did not come back to the base.<sup>10953</sup> There were also 59 wounded whom DutchBat had tried to evacuate during the transportation of ‘civilians’ out of Potočari, but who were sent back from the area of Kladanj and placed in the hospital in Bratunac.<sup>10954</sup> Franken tried to evacuate the wounded using a Norwegian medevac company stationed near Tuzla, but that company did not succeed in reaching the enclave. The Bosnian Serbs told Franken that he could hand over the wounded to them, but Franken chose to arrange an evacuation by the ICRC through MSF.<sup>10955</sup>

2547. On 17 July, the VRS and Serb civilian officials arrived for a meeting to coordinate the details of evacuating the wounded from Potočari and Bratunac.<sup>10956</sup> The delegation was led by Janković and included Major Nikolić and his bodyguard, a staff officer of the Bratunac Brigade, a lieutenant-colonel who said that he was a lawyer, a civilian who later on appeared to be the new mayor of Srebrenica, and someone that Franken described as a Mladić look-alike.<sup>10957</sup>

2548. During the meeting, Janković asked Mandžić and Franken to sign a declaration stating that the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari had been performed in a proper and humanitarian way in accordance with international law.<sup>10958</sup> Franken added a clause stating that the transportation was carried out in accordance with the law only ‘as far as convoys actually escorted by UN forces [were] concerned’ because DutchBat was not able to confirm that this was the case for any of the other convoys.<sup>10959</sup> Witness RM-294 testified that Mandžić and Major Franken agreed that the evacuation did not take place the way described in the statement, and for this reason it was added in handwriting that the affirmation only concerned the convoys escorted by UN forces.<sup>10960</sup> The witness confirmed that this related to only a few dozens of people that were escorted by UNPROFOR vehicles and soldiers to Bosnian Muslim-held territory, while it was incorrect for the rest of the evacuation.<sup>10961</sup> Franken testified that Janković smiled upon reading Franken's addition, but the colonel lawyer became angry.<sup>10962</sup> Franken signed and witnessed the signing of the document by the other two signatories together with his addition because Janković had made it clear that signing would positively influence the evacuation of the wounded from the DutchBat compound and Bratunac.<sup>10963</sup> The part of the agreement stating that the evacuation, and more particularly the supervision and the escort of Bosnian Muslims, was to be carried out by the VRS and the MUP was correct in theory. However, this cooperation did not happen during the whole process as illustrated by the difficulties encountered by DutchBat escorts.<sup>10964</sup> Franken further testified that the part of the document stating that the population could remain in the enclave or evacuate was nonsense, because the population did not have a choice to stay or move in any direction because they were tired, afraid, surrounded by Serbs, and did not have any medical care or means to survive.<sup>10965</sup> Franken testified that their only choice was to die slowly or get out.<sup>10966</sup>

2549. Witness RM-294 testified that the declaration did not reflect the reality in that no one was given a choice either to remain or be evacuated; to the contrary there were killings not far from the DutchBat base so that people would be frightened and the deportation would be quicker, the conditions of the evacuation were never discussed but instead the evacuation was imposed and that document which had been prepared in advance by the military or civilian authorities was put to Mandžić for his signature on 17 July 1995 in circumstances in which very few persons remained in the compound and these were intimidated by the VRS.<sup>10967</sup> Killings took near the DutchBat compound to intimidate and frighten the remaining people in the compound and Camila Osmanović, member of the Bosnian 'delegation' at the Hotel Fontana, tried to kill herself.<sup>10968</sup> Only about 25 people were left in the DutchBat compound after 13 July and they were ordered by the commander of the VRS not to go anywhere, but to stay there 'to the end'.<sup>10969</sup> VRS soldiers came inside the DutchBat compound to intimidate them.<sup>10970</sup>

2550. Deronjić stated that certain portions of the declaration were not a truthful reflection of the situation on the ground between 12 and 17 July 1995.<sup>10971</sup> In his view, it was impossible for any Muslim inhabitant of Srebrenica to remain in Srebrenica even if they had expressed a wish to do so; the circumstances at that time, especially after the take-over of Srebrenica by the VRS, simply did not leave such possibility open.<sup>10972</sup> According to Deronjić, it would have been impossible to provide security to Muslims who wanted to stay in Srebrenica during that period of time.<sup>10973</sup>

2551. Rave testified that on 17 July 1995, Janković and Nikolić came to the UN compound in Potočari, accompanied by an interpreter, and selected seven wounded men that were to be taken to Bratunac hospital and treated separately. These men were to be treated as 'POWs'.<sup>10974</sup> On the same day people from the ICRC arrived to evacuate the remaining wounded persons to Bratunac Hospital.<sup>10975</sup> In Bratunac, a Dutch doctor called Schouten took care of the wounded. Schouten later informed the witness that while he was away for lunch or dinner, several wounded persons had disappeared from the Bratunac hospital.<sup>10976</sup>

2552. Franken testified that on 17 July 1995, he handed over the wounded to the ICRC and Nikolić insisted that the wounded be inspected, so the ICRC went to the hospital together with Nikolić and a security squad from DutchBat.<sup>10977</sup> Nikolić identified seven of the wounded men as soldiers and agreed with the ICRC that they would be treated as POWs and transferred to the Bosnian Serbs. These seven men were transferred to the hospital in Bratunac and the ICRC told Franken that they would monitor them and Franken had one of his DutchBat surgeons stay with them to make sure they were treated as wounded. The surgeon was called away to arrange something and reported that when he returned, the wounded men were gone.<sup>10978</sup> The remaining wounded left the UNPROFOR base the same day.<sup>10979</sup>

2553. In the course of events surrounding the signing of the document and transportation of the wounded, Colonel Janković appeared to Franken to be in charge: he was the only one who spoke with Franken and had sent Nikolić away at one point. Janković was also able to have an ICRC truck with emergency supplies released from the Serbian border after a short phone conversation with whom Franken concluded were members of the Serbian border troops.<sup>10980</sup> Between 13 July and 21 July when DutchBat withdrew from the base, they did not have any freedom of movement and Janković had made it clear that they were supposed to remain in the compound.<sup>10981</sup>

The Trial Chamber's findings

2555. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Mladenović, Janjić, Đurić, Kovačević, and Witness RM-333 that the Bosnian Muslims were not abused and maltreated nor separated on 12 July 1995 in Potočari. The Trial Chamber considers that this may reflect the observations of these witnesses. However, since they were not present in Potočari all the time, it finds that this evidence does not contradict Adjudicated Facts number 1401, 1402, and 1403 on the treatment and separation of Bosnian Muslims in Potočari on that day.

Transportation of Bosnian Muslims out of the enclave

2556. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that from 12 to 14 July 1995, the VRS, and more particularly the DK, assisted by members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police and of the MUP Special Police Brigade, including the Jahorina Detachment, transferred about 25,000 Bosnian-Muslim, mostly women, children, and elderly, out of the enclave of Srebrenica to the territory under ABiH control in buses and trucks.

2557. The people boarding the convoys were told that the men would follow later. Initially, they were allowed to board the buses themselves but after a while soldiers forced those who did not want to leave onto the buses. Some soldiers, as well as one member of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, hit and abused the Bosnian Muslims as they boarded the buses and called them names. The Bosnian Muslims were restless, partly due to the separation of the mothers from their children. Many people became ill and the babies of ill mothers were abandoned. UNPROFOR soldiers assisted in loading women and children into the vehicles. Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police coordinated the boarding of the buses by the Bosnian Muslims. Members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP Special Police Brigade, including members of the Jahorina Detachment, assisted the boarding process pursuant to Borovčanin's order. On 12 July 1995, a bus driver from a private company was asked by his supervisor to transport Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari. DK Command officers and units were present in Potočari. They monitored the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims out of the area on 12 and 13 July 1995. They secured the road along which the buses would travel to Kladanj and supervised the transportation operation. DutchBat soldiers attempted to escort the buses. They succeeded in accompanying the first convoys on 12 July 1995, but thereafter they were stopped by the VRS who stole 16 to 18 DutchBat jeeps, as well as around 100 small arms and equipment, which rendered further DutchBat escorts impossible.

2558. Most of the women, children, and elderly bussed out of Potočari arrived at Tišća. After disembarking, they were forced to continue on foot for several kilometres through 'no-man's land' between the Bosnian-Serb and Bosnian-Muslim lines to Kladanj. Around 14 July 1995, no males over the age of 12 with the exception of a few over 60, were observed in Kladanj.

2559. The removal of the Bosnian-Muslim civilian population from Potočari was completed on the evening of 13 July 1995. Towards the end of the day, Colonel Janković ordered a member of the Military Police Platoon of the Bratunac Brigade to drive towards Srebrenica Town and inform the Bosnian Muslims they might encounter en route that they should go to Potočari and wait there until they would be driven away on the next day. As of the morning of 14 July 1995, 15,000 people had arrived in Tuzla and 3,000 were still on their way on VRS buses. On 17 July 1995, Janković asked Mandžić and Franken to sign a declaration stating that the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari had been performed in a proper and humanitarian way in accordance with international law. Franken added a clause stating that the transportation was carried out in accordance with the law only 'as far as convoys actually escorted by UN forces [were] concerned' because DutchBat was not able to confirm that this was the case for any of the other convoys. The wounded remaining at the UNPROFOR compound were handed over to the ICRC on 17 July 1995, in agreement with Janković, and evacuated towards Bratunac Hospital. Some of the wounded later disappeared from the hospital.

Organisation of the transportation of Bosnian Muslims out of the enclave

2560. The DK procured buses and other vehicles that were then used to transport Bosnian-Muslim women, children and elderly out of the Potočari DutchBat compound on 12 and 13 July 1995, as well as the fuel needed to accomplish this task. On 12 July 1995, in response to a request from the DK, the Bosnian-Serb MoD sent three orders to its local secretariats directing them to procure buses and to send them to Bratunac. On the same day, dozens of buses and trucks arrived in Potočari. The Bratunac Brigade monitored fuel allocation to buses and trucks on 12 and 13 July. It also provided two buses and fuel, and regulated traffic as the buses passed through Bratunac on their way to Konjević Polje.

2561. On 12 July 1995, members of the Bratunac Brigade military police, the 2nd Infantry Battalion, the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment from Nova Kasaba, a unit which carried out an attack from the area of Pribičevac, the Drina Wolves from the Zvornik Brigade, the 10th Sabotage Detachment as well as police units, including members of the Bratunac SJB, the 1st Company of the Special Police Brigade, and a company of the PJP were present in Potočari and assisted with the evacuation of Bosnian Muslims. On 12 and 13 July 1995, the 1st Company of the Special Police Brigade was tasked to secure a road close to the UN compound and ensure the safe transportation of civilians. Traffic police and the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment were tasked with monitoring the movement of the buses from the DK area to the SRK area.

Separation of Bosnian-Muslim men from the rest of the population in Potočari 2562. In the afternoon of 12 July 1995, the first convoy, which included men, left Potočari. The convoy was filmed and the footage was later broadcast by a press service of the DK Command. The men on the first convoy were separated at checkpoints, including the Tišća checkpoint, before reaching Kladanj and taken away by VRS soldiers in execution of Major Sarkić's, the Chief of Staff of the Milići Brigade, order. Sarkić and his troops were present at the Tišća checkpoint on that day pursuant to orders from the DK Command. General Krstić, in particular, had issued orders to DK units to secure a stretch of the road from Vlasenica up to Tišća where the civilians disembarked.

2563. As the Bosnian Muslims later began boarding the buses in Potočari, Bosnian-Serb soldiers systematically separated out men of military age who were trying to get onboard. Some of the separated males were as young as 12 years old and others were older and over 60 years old. Some of the males were unarmed and some were wearing military clothing. The separations were frequently aggressive. Some of the males were beaten, stoned, insulted, spat on, and sometimes stabbed. DutchBat members protested, especially when the men were too young or too old to reasonably be screened for war criminals or to be considered members of the military, and when the soldiers were being violent. The separations caused fear among the families. When a Bosnian-Muslim woman asked a soldier to stay with her husband as he was being separated from her on 13 July 1995, the soldier replied: 'You can stay, but you'll meet the same fate as he!'. The woman subsequently fainted and was taken onboard a truck by relatives.

2566. Beginning on the afternoon of 12 July and continuing throughout 13 July 1995, males detained in the White House, numbering approximately 1,000, were placed on separate buses from the women and the majority of children and elderly and were taken out of the Potočari DutchBat compound to detention sites in Bratunac in execution of VRS orders. Military policemen from the Bratunac Brigade escorted the buses. Soldiers kicked and hit the males with rifle butts while loading them onto the buses and ordered them to keep their heads down. DutchBat ordered one of the jeeps to escort the buses but the VRS stopped the escort. The buses came back soon after empty. The males were subsequently joined by Bosnian-Muslim men captured from the column. No discernible effort was made to keep the detainees from Potočari and the men captured from the column separate. Ultimately, they were all taken to the Zvornik Brigade area of responsibility. These men were held in various locations, such as an abandoned warehouse, an old school, and even in the buses and trucks that had brought them there. The Bosnian-Muslim men from Potočari as well as from Sandići and Nova Kasaba who had spent the night on 13 July in Bratunac Town went in a long column of buses the following day to various temporary detention facilities and execution sites in Bratunac and Zvornik Municipalities. Identification papers and personal belongings, including money, were taken away from Bosnian-Muslim males, before entering the White House in Potočari, as well as from the men captured from the column; their papers and belongings were piled up and eventually burnt by the VRS. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Miladin Mladenović that he did not see any personal items or luggage on the grounds of the White House on 13 July 1995. As this may reflect the observations of this witness at the time he was present in Potočari, the Trial Chamber finds that this evidence does not contradict Adjudicated Facts numbers 1489 and 1499 on the appropriation and destruction of belongings of Bosnian Muslims. On 12 July 1995 in Potočari, a soldier told a Bosnian-Muslim woman, who had been separated from her brother, that she did not need to bring her brother's bag to him as he would not need it anymore. When she tried to follow her brother, a soldier pulled her hair, pushed her to the ground and kicked her with his army boots. In the evening of 12 July 1995, one of the Bosnian-Muslim 'representatives' asked Franken for the transportation to be stopped because he feared for the fate of Bosnian-Muslim males. On 13 July 1995, the Bosnian-Muslim 'representatives' in Potočari stopped the process of registration of Bosnian-Muslim men for the UN because they were intimidated by the Serb forces to the extent that a female in the group had a nervous breakdown and had to be taken to the hospital.

2567. Bosnian-Muslim men were transported to detention and execution sites in buses procured by the DK. Buses from private companies drove Bosnian Muslims to Bratunac and other locations. From 13 July 1995, the Zvornik Brigade began identifying detention sites for the Bosnian-Muslim men.

2568. As early as 14 July 1995, reports of missing Bosnian-Muslim men from Srebrenica began to surface in the international media. On that day, the UNSC expressed concern about the forced relocation of civilians from the Srebrenica 'safe area' by the Bosnian Serbs, asserting it was a clear violation of their human rights.

2569. The evidence on the fate of the separated Bosnian-Muslim men will be reviewed, along with additional evidence, in chapters 7.2-7.14.

2570. The Trial Chamber will address the evidence and make findings on the alleged incidents of killings, ill-treatment, and forcible transfer and deportation in chapters 7.2-7.17.

2571. The Trial Chamber will address the evidence and make findings related to the alleged Srebrenica JCE and, in particular, the Accused's alleged responsibility (some of which has been reviewed above in this chapter) in chapter 9.

7.1.6 The column

2572. In this chapter, the Trial Chamber will review the evidence and make findings concerning the column of people attempting to leave Srebrenica Town and the Srebrenica enclave in the aftermath of the VRS attack and takeover of the enclave between 6 and 12 July 1995 (discussed in chapter 7.1.3). The Defence submitted that the civilian status of the victims has not been established and that any deaths were the result of combat, minefields, suicides, or in-fighting amongst those in the column.<sup>10987</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts relating to these events. It further received evidence from Witness RM-336, a Serb policeman from the Ugljevik SJB in Bijeljina Municipality;<sup>10988</sup> Witness RM-253, Witness RM-256, Witness RM-346, and Reif Mehmedović, all Bosnian-Muslim ABiH soldiers from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>10989</sup> Witness RM-301, a Bosnian-Muslim soldier from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>10990</sup> Witness RM-257, Witness RM-204, Mevludin Orić, Salih Mehmedović, and Sulejman Buljubašić, all Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>10991</sup> Ramiz Husić, a Bosnian Muslim from Brezovica who moved to Srebrenica in 1993 and who was 18 years old in July 1995;<sup>10992</sup> Mujo Subašić, a Bosnian Muslim from Podžeplje, Han Pijesak Municipality, who worked as a nurse in the Srebrenica hospital from April 1993 until 11 July 1995;<sup>10993</sup> Witness RM-314, a

The formation of the column

2573. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the fall of Srebrenica in chapter 7.1.3. Witness RM-297 testified that Mladić called “‘Srebrenica Srpska’, Serbian Srebrenica, and he promised to take revenge on the Turks and the janissaries’.<sup>11021</sup> At around 10 p.m. on 11 July 1995, the ‘division command’, together with the Bosnian-Muslim municipal authorities of Srebrenica, made the decision to form the column.<sup>11022</sup> The young men were afraid they would be killed if they fell into Bosnian-Serb hands in Potočari and believed that they stood a better chance of surviving by trying to escape through the woods to Tuzla.<sup>11023</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that all ‘military-aged men and any other men who could walk’ were ordered to go to Šušnjari and all women and children were to go to the UNPROFOR base in Potočari.<sup>11024</sup> Witness RM-256 testified

Composition of the column

2574. The Trial Chamber received evidence from a number of witnesses regarding the estimated number of people in the column, as well as about the composition of the column. These estimates ranged from 10,000 to 15,000 people.<sup>11032</sup> Witness RM-358 provided a slightly higher estimate, stating that on 11 July 1995 he and his unit joined between 17,000 and 18,000 people in the column.<sup>11033</sup>

Military action in relation to the column

2578. In the afternoon of 12 July 1995, Ljubiša Borovčanin received information from state security employees that approximately 12,000 to 15,000 able-bodied, mostly armed Bosnian Muslims were moving from Srebrenica towards Konjević Polje, Cerska, and Tuzla.<sup>11046</sup> On the same day, Borovčanin received an order from Mladić to send half of his men and available technical equipment to the Konjevic Polje-Cerska axis to block the area and fight the formation.<sup>11047</sup> The 2nd Special Police Detachment and the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP deployed along the Kravica-Sandići-Pervani-Hričići road, with a launcher for Malyutka missiles, a praga self-propelled anti-aircraft gun, and a mortar platoon.<sup>11048</sup> Simultaneously, the 2nd Company of the Zvornik PJP was sent to Srebrenica to form an SJB and set up checkpoints in order to secure the town.<sup>11049</sup> Richard Butler testified that on or around 12 July 1995, the Zvornik and Birač Infantry Brigades and the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade engaged in sweeping the terrain west of Srebrenica.<sup>11050</sup>

2579. As the Bosnian-Muslim column attempted to break out of the enclave, it first moved through the area of responsibility of the Bratunac Brigade.<sup>11051</sup> Leaving the area of the Bratunac Brigade, the column moved up towards the Zvornik Brigade's zone of responsibility.<sup>11052</sup> The DK's subordinate Brigades, particularly the Bratunac and Zvornik Brigades, engaged in combat with the column as it attempted to break through to Bosnian Muslim-held territory.<sup>11053</sup> In the days following the 11 and 12 July meetings at the Hotel Fontana, VRS units, including units of the DK that were not engaged in the Žepa campaign, were assigned to block the column.<sup>11054</sup> In addition to these DK units, non-DK units, including the MUP Special Police Brigade, elements of the Military

2580. Mirko Perić testified that sometime between 10 and 13 July 1995 a group of Bosnian-Serb soldiers arrived at a Bosnian-Serb police checkpoint in Konjević Polje leading between four and seven men including Resid Sinanović, a Muslim and former Chief of the Bratunac police station, who was holding a stick with a white T-shirt.<sup>11056</sup>

The witness had been told to contact the police station if somebody they knew came to surrender.<sup>11057</sup> Milos Mitrović testified that on 13 July 1995 at around 10 or 11 a.m., Dragan Jevtić (introduced in chapter 3.1.2) ordered him to go to the Standard military barracks to join the Logistics Unit and, then, to go to Snagovo.<sup>11058</sup>

2581. Milenko Pepić testified that on 14 July 1995, he was sent by his commander Rade Čturić, a.k.a. Oficir, of the 2nd Šekovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, (introduced in chapter 3.4) from Konjević Polje to Zvornik and then to the Baljkovica sector.<sup>11059</sup> The witness's group, comprising himself from the 2nd 'Šekovići' Platoon of the 2nd Šekovići Special Police Detachment which was subordinated to a VRS Special Police Brigade, and members of the 1st and 2nd Police Detachments, reached Baljkovica on 15 July 1995.<sup>11060</sup> At this position, they received an order to abort all combat activities and withdraw in order to create a passage for the Muslim civilians and soldiers to pass through.<sup>11061</sup>

2582. Nedo Jovičić testified that on 15 July 1995, following a meeting between 'Chief Vasić' and Borovčanin (introduced in chapter 3.4) in Zvornik, a large part of the police force was sent to Baljkovica to block the area and protect Zvornik from an attack by the 28th ABiH Division, which was breaking through towards Tuzla from the direction of Srebrenica.<sup>11062</sup> On that day, an offensive MUP combat group composed of the 2nd and 4th Special Police Units, the latter being led by Miodrag Vikić, equipped with a tank and one praga, a mortar platoon and the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP was sent in the

Attacks on the column on 12-13 July 1995

2583. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Facts and received evidence in relation to various ambushes on the column on 12 and 13 July 1995. On 12 July 1995, Bosnian-Serb forces launched an artillery attack against the column which was crossing an asphalt road between the area of Konjević Polje and Nova Kasaba en route to Tuzla.<sup>11064</sup> Only about one third of the men successfully made it across the asphalt road and the column was split in two parts.<sup>11065</sup> Heavy shooting and shelling continued against the remainder of the column throughout the day and during the night.<sup>11066</sup> Witness RM-257, Sulejman Buljubašić, Witness RM-301, and Witness RM-358 stated that the column was fired at by Pragas, tanks, mortars, shells, fired from hand-held rocket launchers, machine-guns, anti-aircraft machine-guns, and M-53 firearms.<sup>11067</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that the shelling would take place for 15 minutes, pause briefly and then start again.<sup>11068</sup>

2584. Witness RM-358 stated that after an attack on the column the smoke generated by the explosion was very thick and the witness was afraid it may have contained some kind of poison.<sup>11069</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that his group, with wounded at the front, came under sporadic shooting and people's eyes started to burn, which the witness believed was result of tear or some other chemical gas.<sup>11070</sup> Another witness, Witness RM-254, testified that during the night of 13 July 1995, he saw a helicopter dropping an 'agent' of blue powder on the part of the column he was in on several occasions in different areas of the column.<sup>11071</sup> The men who were affected choked as they fell whilst their eyes turned red, their faces turned blue, and their legs jerked.<sup>11072</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that heavy shelling followed immediately, and the witness heard a loud explosion and the sounds of anti-aircraft fire and Howitzers.<sup>11073</sup> Witness RM-314, Witness RM-257, Ramiz Husić, Witness RM-204, Subašić, Witness RM-358, Orić, Witness RM-256, Witness RM-253, Witness RM-297, Witness RM-301, Buljubašić, and Witness RM-346 described ambushes and firing on the column and that they saw many dead and wounded people resulting from the attacks on the column on 12-13 July 1995.<sup>11074</sup> Buljubašić stated that shortly after the ambush in Pobučka Kamenica, the column was surrounded by ‘Chetniks’ dressed in plain clothes who said that the group from the column should line up by brigade and bring their wounded in the direction of the asphalt. As a result, five or six groups with wounded people moved towards the asphalt and the witness saw these groups being fired upon as they reached the edge of the woods, not far from where he was. One of the ‘Chetniks’ referred to himself as the ‘Chetnik Duke from Mostar’.<sup>11075</sup> At around 4 a.m., the witness and some others escaped from the clearing where the ‘Chetniks’ had surrounded them, and he climbed up a tree and hid.<sup>11076</sup> From a distance of around 50 metres, he saw the ‘Chetniks’ ordering Sabo Alić to come down from another tree in which he was hiding, and when Alić refused, the witness heard the sound of a single shot.<sup>11077</sup>

2585. Witness RM-253 testified that during an ambush some people were yelling at the ‘Chetniks’ to stop shooting and negotiate with them and that during the stretch from Jagličići to Kamenica hill, he did not hear anyone from the column return fire.<sup>11078</sup> Subašić stated that near the Nova Kasaba-Konjević Polje asphalt road he heard strong fire from different kinds of weapons and artillery and people screaming and saying 'don't shoot, we surrender'.<sup>11079</sup> Witness RM-257 stated that during the time he was in the woods, he did not see any ABiH soldiers returning fire at the Serbs.<sup>11080</sup> Witness RM-301 testified that in the aftermath of an ambush he heard cries for help and moaning for about 15 minutes before members of the column began shooting back.<sup>11081</sup> Along the way, the witness saw men panicking and shooting at their own group while shouting nonsense.<sup>11082</sup> The witness saw people who were unable to walk committing suicide using hand grenades or guns.<sup>11083</sup> Bojan Subotić testified that some of the men who surrendered to him said that the Muslims hiding in the woods were arguing and killing one another because some were in favour of surrendering while others were not.<sup>11084</sup> Upon request of some Muslim soldiers who had surrendered, the witness entered the woods where the Muslims were, and saw 500 dead people, including people who had been hanged, wounded by hand grenades or shells, or bombs allegedly thrown at those who tried to surrender by those who objected.<sup>11085</sup> The witness was bandaging five or six survivors, when he heard via radio that a group of 200 Muslim soldiers had surrendered to two of the witness's soldiers.<sup>11086</sup> The witness was confronted by another group of 200 Muslim soldiers who surrendered and followed the witness to the Nova Kasaba football stadium.<sup>11087</sup> The seriously injured Muslims were taken to Milići Hospital, under the authority of the civilian police.<sup>11088</sup> Witnesses RM-358, Subašić, Witness RM-297, and Witness RM-253 also provided evidence that people from the column were committing suicide and killing one another.<sup>11089</sup> Husić stated that three unidentified men, two of whom wore new camouflage uniforms and one of whom wore civilian clothing, told him and approximately 50 other individuals to surrender to the Serbs.<sup>11090</sup> An unidentified young man in the group said that the three men were ‘Chetniks’ and opened fire killing the two men in uniform and wounding the man in civilian clothing. The witness, armed with a rifle given to him by the young man who had opened fire on the three unidentified individuals, left the group and went to check if there were Serbs in the vicinity. He met a group of men who advised him that the three men that had been shot at were members of the ABiH Mountain Battalion.<sup>11091</sup>

2586. Orić stated that ‘Chetniks’, following negotiations with members of the column, agreed to allow the column to proceed, and that the wounded should go first.<sup>11092</sup> Having collected the wounded and set off across a meadow, the column was subsequently fired upon from all sides, which led to many casualties and the wounded being abandoned.<sup>11093</sup> On another occasion, upon being told to surrender and not to run away, the witness’s group was fired upon by the ‘Chetniks’ using artillery weapons and anti-aircraft guns.<sup>11094</sup>

The capture of Bosnian Muslims from the column

2587. Mendeljev Đurić stated that on 12 July 1995, Duško Jević ordered him to re-deploy his company, the 1st Company of the Special Police Brigade of the Jahorina Training Centre, along the Konjević Polje-Bratunac road to prevent incursions from Bosnian-Muslim men from Srebrenica, who were not in Potočari, into Srebrenica town.<sup>11095</sup> The witness confirmed deployment of his company up to Glogova on the Konjević Polje-Bratunac road during the night of 12 July 1995.<sup>11096</sup> According to a MUP Special Police Brigade dispatch, during combat in the direction of Konjević Polje on the night of 12 July 1995, 200 Muslim soldiers were killed and 1,500 Muslim soldiers were captured or had surrendered with that number increasing by the hour.<sup>11097</sup>

2589. The DK was well aware of the presence of MUP units within its zone of responsibility, as well as the action being taken by MUP units to block and capture Bosnian-Muslim men in the column.<sup>11111</sup> The DK Command knew that thousands of Bosnian-Muslim prisoners had been captured along the Bratunac-Konjević Polje Road on 13 July 1995.<sup>11112</sup>

2590. In some places, Bosnian-Serb forces fired into the woods with anti-aircraft guns and other weapons, or used stolen UN equipment to deceive the Bosnian-Muslim men into believing that the UN or the Red Cross were present to monitor the treatment accorded to them upon capture.<sup>11113</sup>

2591. Mile Petrović testified that sometime after 12 or 1 p.m. on 13 July 1995, Momir Nikolić ordered Mirko Janković to drive a stolen UN APC from Bratunac to Konjević Polje with Nikolić, Janković, and the witness on board.<sup>11114</sup> On the way, the witness saw between 50 and 100 Muslim men who had surrendered on both sides of the road going from Bratunac to Konjević Polje as well as civilian policemen talking into a megaphone.<sup>11115</sup> In Konjević Polje, Nikolić instructed the witness to give a lift to two UN soldiers, who were present there, to a destination of their choice.<sup>11116</sup> After a few kilometres and at the request of the soldiers, the witness drove them back to Konjević Polje.<sup>11117</sup> Husić stated that at approximately 10 a.m. on 13 July 1995, Serbs called upon the group he was with to surrender and advised that UNPROFOR was waiting to take them to Tuzla to exchange them for Serb soldiers.<sup>11118</sup> He later realized that UNPROFOR was not there but instead Serb soldiers wearing UN helmets, which he concluded must have been a ploy to get Muslims to surrender.<sup>11119</sup>

2592. The Trial Chamber received evidence from a number of witnesses about messages conveyed to the Bosnian Muslims from the column who were hiding in the woods between 12 and 15 July 1995, and what was said to them to encourage their surrender. The people using the megaphones who were often located on the asphalt road were described as Serbs, Bosnian-Serbs, Serbian soldiers, ‘Chetniks’, ‘the aggressors’, Members of the Special Police Forces, and a man nicknamed ‘Zijo’.<sup>11120</sup> The messages conveyed included to surrender or else shelling and shooting would commence; that if they surrendered they would not be harmed and would be taken by bus to Tuzla, but that if they did not surrender, the women and children in Potočari would be harmed; informing them that they would be exchanged; that many of their group had been killed during the night; that no one would be harmed and that they would be treated according to the ‘Geneva Convention’; that they should surrender because ‘tomorrow would be too late’; that if they did not surrender they would open fire and release poison; that they would be kept alive; to ‘come down Turks and surrender’ and that those that surrendered would be safe; telling them to surrender or they would start shooting at them; and that the ICRC were there to help them.<sup>11121</sup> Some witnesses provided evidence that during this time there was sporadic shooting.<sup>11122</sup> Witnesses provided evidence that hundreds of Bosnian-Muslim soldiers and civilians from the column surrendered.<sup>11123</sup>

2593. With regard to the circumstances after their surrender, Witness RM-358 stated that one group that surrendered were ordered to take off their shirts, pile them, and line up in rows. The ‘Chetniks’ then opened fire on them from the military vehicles with automatic firearms including anti-aircraft machineguns. During the night the witness’s group came across the asphalt road where there were about 35 corpses, which appeared to have been driven over.<sup>11124</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that small groups of armed soldiers wearing light green camouflage uniforms were waiting for those who had surrendered as a result of the ultimatums.<sup>11125</sup> The soldiers started beating the witness’s group as soon as they surrendered.<sup>11126</sup> Some of the soldiers said they were civilian police and searched the captives, ordered them to hand over their money, jewellery and weapons, and beat up several people.<sup>11127</sup> Everyone in the group was in civilian clothing and most of them were unarmed.<sup>11128</sup> The civilian police ordered the captives to walk with their hands above their heads towards Konjević Polje. After about a kilometre they were taken over by another group of soldiers in dark green camouflage uniforms, who, according to the civilian police, were military police. The military police cursed, insulted and threatened the detainees, and told them to carry their wounded.<sup>11129</sup> Witness RM-297 stated that his group decided to surrender and went down to the Bosnian-Serb positions and saw VRS soldiers in camouflage uniforms, tanks, armoured transports, and howitzers parked in a group.<sup>11130</sup> One VRS soldier was wearing a ‘Sajkaca’ cap with a ‘kokarda’ on it, and later the unit guarding them was replaced by a new unit that the guards said was comprised of Arkan’s troops who wore new camouflage uniforms and carried the same kind of equipment as the VRS soldiers.<sup>11131</sup> The soldiers asked the men to give them money and threatened to kill any of them if they were later found to have money on them.<sup>11132</sup> Witness RM-256 testified that on 13 July 1995 after being called upon to surrender he and others were shot at and they dispersed and ran towards a meadow.<sup>11133</sup> The witness observed two men being shot.<sup>11134</sup> As the ‘Chetniks’ came closer, some men took off their white T-shirts, placed them on sticks, and shouted that they wanted to surrender.<sup>11135</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that the group he was with was instructed to form a column, gather their wounded – who would allegedly be treated – and make their way to the road.<sup>11136</sup> The ‘aggressors’ then fired at them.<sup>11137</sup>

2594. Witness RM-204 stated that in the morning of 13 July 1995 he recognised the village of Kamenica and saw one tank and other vehicles with weapons ‘mounted on it [sic]’ near the road behind the bridge.<sup>11138</sup> The witness thought that the tank was painted in olive green colours and the other vehicles in camouflage.<sup>11139</sup> There were five or six ‘Chetniks’ on the bridge and one by the tank, armed with automatic rifles, similar to those the witness saw the ABiH carrying. The ‘Chetniks’ told them to leave any weapons and money, or they would be killed. Those who had surrendered were lined up in rows and soldiers who arrived in a police vehicle and a civilian vehicle, and some of whom wore blue camouflaged patterned uniforms pointed their weapons at those who were lined up on the road. Some of the soldiers said ‘Balijs put your arms up higher, now we are going to show you’. The witness saw Kraljica Smrt (Queen of Death) written on the tank. The soldiers ordered them to put their hands in the air and run side-by-side along the road with three fingers raised. They continued running for about one kilometre towards Kravica and passed a column of ‘Chetniks’ who fired a few rounds into the air.<sup>11140</sup>

2595. Witness RM-333 testified that around 13 July 1995 in late afternoon, a company from the Jahorina Training Centre received an order from an unidentified MUP officer to relieve police forces deployed on a stretch of the road between Konjevic Polje and Kravica, a couple of kilometres away from Kravica.<sup>11141</sup> A tank and an anti-aircraft vehicle were stationed there.<sup>11142</sup> The new company was deployed along a stretch of the road, a couple of hundred metres away from the meadow and tasked with collecting

2596. Dušan Mičić testified that around 13 July 1995, his PJM unit was sent to Baljkovica located approximately 20 kilometres from Zvornik in the direction of Tuzla in order to support an army unit that was surrounded by Muslims from the column.<sup>11148</sup>

2598. Husić stated that during his journey towards Kravica, he saw both wounded and dead individuals.<sup>11150</sup> He also observed several individuals in the column committing suicide and one individual killing four others with a grenade.<sup>11151</sup>

2600. Nebojša Jeremić testified that he learned from military policemen, who were on the ground in July 1995, that some Bosnian-Muslim men from the column had been captured and were being detained in the Zvornik Brigade barracks; the witness estimated the numbers to have been between 80 to 100 men.<sup>11154</sup> The detainees were later put onto trucks and driven away from the barracks; it was rumoured that they were being driven to Batković to be exchanged.<sup>11155</sup> The witness further testified that a few days after the fall of Srebrenica, the chief of security of the Zvornik Brigade, Drago Nikolić, came to his office in the Standard Barracks and informed him that two Serbs and four Bosnian-Muslims would be brought in.<sup>11156</sup> The Serbs were suspected of having assisted Muslim soldiers to cross the front line.<sup>11157</sup> The witness and his colleagues were instructed to interrogate all six individuals.<sup>11158</sup> According to statements made to the Zvornik Military Police in July 1995 concerning the surrender and capture of six individuals the captives were in a column of civilians and soldiers when fighting with the VRS broke out.<sup>11159</sup> The column scattered into many groups, after which they got lost and surrendered in a Serb village and were then brought to the Zvornik Brigade Command.<sup>11160</sup>

2601. Several thousand Bosnian-Muslim men from the column who were captured on 13 July 1995 were collected in or near the Sandići meadow and on the Nova Kasaba football field (see chapter 7.5 Schedule E.4.1).<sup>11161</sup> The soldiers guarding the men at these locations forced them to turn over their valuables and abandon their belongings.<sup>11162</sup> The Trial Chamber has reviewed further evidence related to captured men at Sandići Meadow in chapter 7.5 Schedule E.4.1. In this section the Trial Chamber will focus only on the gathering of Bosnian Muslims at the Nova Kasaba football field.

2602. The Trial Chamber received evidence from several witnesses present at the Nova Kasaba football field on 13 July 1995 about the arrival of Bosnian Muslims, their numbers, and the units present. Witness RM-346 testified that he was captured on the morning of 13 July 1995,<sup>11163</sup> ordered to walk together with other detainees towards a football pitch located right outside of Nova Kasaba.<sup>11164</sup> Dragomir Keserović testified that on 12 or 13 July 1995, Colonel Malinić told him that there were approximately 2,500 disarmed and captured Muslims, fighters and ‘civilians’ from Srebrenica, who came along the road between Kasaba and Konjević Polje.<sup>11165</sup> In execution of Colonel Beara’s order, Malinić gathered them on the football pitch.<sup>11166</sup>

2603. Regarding the number of detainees at Nova Kasaba, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Witness RM-253 who estimated that 1,500 to 2,000 men, many from Srebrenica, were gathered at the stadium at that point, some of whom were already there when the witness arrived.<sup>11167</sup> Armed Serb soldiers had secured the stadium, ten of whom were at the gates.<sup>11168</sup> Witness RM-346 testified that about 1,500 to 2,000 Bosnian-Muslim men were already sitting on the football pitch, surrounded by armed Serb soldiers.<sup>11169</sup> He also saw one UN vehicle.<sup>11170</sup> More Bosnian-Muslim men were arriving by foot from Konjević Polje and some were brought from the woods.<sup>11171</sup> The number of people grew to approximately 2,000 to 4,000.<sup>11172</sup> Mladen Blagojević testified that on 13 July 1995, there were about 1,000 Muslims from the column at the Nova Kasaba football stadium and were guarded by the VRS and the civilian police.<sup>11173</sup> Pero Andrić testified that at the time Mladić addressed the men, they were between 300 and 500 and were guarded by men in camouflage uniforms.<sup>11174</sup> Subotić testified that on 13 July 1995 the number of Muslims present in the stadium did not exceed 1,200.<sup>11175</sup> According to a transcript of an intercepted conversation on a telephone line to an extension matching that of the commander of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment and dated 13 July 1995, 1,500 men were confirmed to be present at the stadium in the presence of Malinić's unit.<sup>11176</sup> In addition, a military police platoon, four military police companies, including an anti-terrorist company and a company of armoured vehicles, also of the military police of the 65th Protection Regiment, were present at the football field.<sup>11177</sup> During the day, several press teams and film crews, including from the Bosnian-Serb Republic news agency and from the VRS press centre, took footage of the Muslims gathered at the football field and also interviewed the witness.<sup>11178</sup> Malinić ordered Subotić not to interfere with their work.<sup>11179</sup>

2604. 2606. The Trial Chamber received evidence from a number of witnesses about the events surrounding Mladić's presence at Nova Kasaba. Witness RM-346 testified that one of the detainees got up and the Serb soldiers beat him with their rifle butts, following which one soldier shot him dead with his pistol, while Mladić was present.<sup>11198</sup> The soldiers told the detainees that if anyone else behaved like this, they would be killed.<sup>11199</sup> Mladić did not respond in any way.<sup>11200</sup> Zoran Malinić testified that he had heard that a killing took place at the stadium: a member of the Military Police Battalion was attacked by a detainee and killed him in self defence.<sup>11201</sup> The witness further testified that as far he knew 'there was no [sic] a single killing in Nova Kasaba', 'any shooting or killing of prisoners, no'.<sup>11202</sup> Andrić, Witness RM-253, and Blagojević testified that they did not see any mistreatment or killings in Nova Kasaba, including during Mladić's speech.<sup>11203</sup>

2607. Regarding the registration of the detainees at Nova Kasaba, Keserović testified that he started the registration process when the detainees were gathered on the football pitch.<sup>11204</sup> Upon his arrival at the football pitch, Mladić instructed Malinić to stop with the registration and told the detainees that they would be transferred to Tuzla.<sup>11205</sup> The detainees were put on buses and taken to Bratunac under a military police escort.<sup>11206</sup> Witness RM-346 testified that when the list of captured people was finished, Mladić left towards Konjević Polje.<sup>11207</sup> Subotić testified that a member of the platoon took down the details of the Muslims.<sup>11208</sup> At around 10 or 11 a.m., buses with civilian registration plates full of women, children, and the elderly from Srebrenica passed by the football field and stopped.<sup>11209</sup> Some men gathered on the football field recognised relatives on the buses and managed to get on board.<sup>11210</sup>

2608. The Bosnian-Muslim men who had surrendered or had been captured were also detained in buses and trucks.<sup>11211</sup> As Witness RM-253 and other detainees were leaving the stadium to be put onto trucks, he heard a Serb soldier tell a detainee that he would not get his bag back because he would not need it anymore.<sup>11212</sup> From this, the witness concluded that the detainees would be executed.<sup>11213</sup> In Kravica, some trucks stopped by a supermarket on 13 July.<sup>11214</sup> Around 119 men were detained in one truck.<sup>11215</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that the Serb soldiers loaded the detainees onto five or six military trucks, the witness's truck holding about 100 men, and they headed towards Kravica, where they arrived at around 5 p.m. that day.<sup>11216</sup> The men were detained in the trucks overnight outside the Kravica supermarket, with neither food nor water – some started fainting and others screamed out for water.<sup>11217</sup> During the night of 13 July, and the morning of 14 July 1995, armed soldiers in camouflage uniforms came to ask whether

2610. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Momir Nikolić and Bruce Bursik about an encounter of Nikolić with Mladić. Nikolić testified that in the afternoon of 13 July 1995, he met Mladić at the crossroads in Konjević Polje.<sup>11223</sup> Nikolić reported to Mladić that the road was secure.<sup>11224</sup> There were prisoners visibly present at Konjević Polje that afternoon, at the time when Mladić was present.<sup>11225</sup> Mladić exited his vehicle, approached a group of detainees and addressed them, stating that everything would be all right, that they should not worry and would soon be taken wherever they pleased.<sup>11226</sup> Returning to the vehicle, the witness asked Mladić what would really happen to the detainees.<sup>11227</sup> Mladić responded by smiling and making a sweeping

In 2003, Nikolić described to Bruce Bursik, an investigator for the Prosecution, his encounter with Mladić in Konjević Polje on 13 July 1995, during which Mladić turned and gestured with his hand with a flat wave which was understood by Nikolić to mean that the detainees were to be killed.<sup>11230</sup> Nikolić was in Konjević Polje as he had the duty of checking if the road Mladić was to pass through was operative, passable and secure.<sup>11231</sup> Bursik testified that with regard to the killings on 12 and 13 July 1995, Nikolić stated that he never gave the orders for the killings, but knew that soldiers were carrying out ‘unauthorised killings’ of men.<sup>11232</sup>

2615. Between 12 and 17 July 1995, the DK carried out searches of the area with the purpose of capturing the men from the column.<sup>11238</sup> Witness RM-336 stated that he was deployed to the area of Snagovo to mop up the area in mid-July 1995, in execution of Commander Kulić's order and that another police unit from the Ugljevik SJB was on assignment in Konjević Polje between 13 and 21 July 1995.<sup>11239</sup>

2616. On 13 July 1995, Milan Gvero issued a series of orders to engage all available men fit for military service in their respective areas of responsibility to detect, block and capture Bosnian-Muslim groups and prevent them from crossing over to the Bosnian-Muslim territory towards Tuzla and Kladanj. Gvero indicated that the orders were issued to protect the Serbian population from the Bosnian-Muslim groups from the Srebrenica enclave, which included 'inveterate criminals and villains who will stop at nothing just to avoid being captured and reach[ing] Muslim controlled territory'. He ordered the Corps and Brigade Commands to detain the captured and disarmed Bosnian Muslims in facilities that could be secured by fewer troops. He also ordered the MUP to engage in the coordination of these tasks and that manpower be made available by the Commands of the DK, Zvornik Infantry Brigade, Birač Infantry Brigade, and Vlasenica Light Infantry Brigade and the other competent authorities.<sup>11240</sup> That same day, Zdravko Tolimir advised Gvero that space had been arranged for 800 'POWs' in the 1st Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade premises in Sjemeč. Tolimir stated that the 'POWs' accommodated in Sjemeč would be used for agricultural work, namely maintaining the horse, pig, and sheep farm. He specified that the transport of these 'POWs' must be done at night using the 1st Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade.<sup>11241</sup> Further, he preferred that this new group of 'POWs' had no contact with other 'POWs'.<sup>11242</sup> According to a VRS Main Staff order dated 13 July 1995, sent to the DK, the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment, and other units, Mladić ordered a ban on the giving of information to the media on the course, situation and results of combat operations and overall activities in this area particularly on 'POWs', evacuated civilians and escapees.<sup>11243</sup> In

2617. Pursuant to a 14 July 1995 order by Vidoje Blagojević (introduced in chapter 3.1.2 as Commander of the 1st Bratunac Light Infantry Brigade), based on an order from the DK Command dated 13 July 1995, between 14 and 16 July 1995 the four infantry battalions of the Bratunac Brigade were tasked to search the terrain of the Srebrenica enclave, including Sandići, the Bratunac-Konjević Polje-Kasaba axis, and the right bank of the Zeleni Jadar river.<sup>11245</sup> Mičo Gavrić testified that during the night of the 14 to 15 July 1995, Blagojević, pursuant to an order from the superior command, ordered a mixed artillery unit from the Bratunac Brigade, to assist the Zvornik Brigade against a large concentration of Muslim forces in the area.<sup>11246</sup> The unit went to the Zvornik Brigade Command where it remained until the following day when it was relieved by Major Eškić and Zoran Kovačević, Commander of the 1st Company of the 2nd Battalion, as well as approximately 80 soldiers from the Bratunac Brigade.<sup>11247</sup> Sometime before noon, the witness saw policemen and members of the Bratunac Brigade guarding the Konjević Polje-Bratunac road at Sandići hill.<sup>11248</sup> Witness RM-268 testified that on 15 July 1995, Borovčanin ordered the MUP Special Police Brigade to continue securing the Bratunac-Konjević Polje road.<sup>11249</sup>

At a meeting held at the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters on 16 July, part of the MUP force was deployed to search the terrain between Srebrenica and Konjević Polje.<sup>11252</sup> On that day, Colonel Blagojević reported that he had visited all units involved in blocking the enemy, including the MUP, and that he had 'defined their tasks, and organised their joint actions and communications.'<sup>11253</sup>

2620. In the evening of 16 July 1995, Borovčanin, Deputy Commander of the Special Police Brigade, (introduced in chapter 3.4) or Sarić, Special Police Brigade Commander, (introduced in chapter 3.4) ordered the Assistant Commander for operations and training to report to Momir Nikolić at the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters.<sup>11254</sup> In the morning of 17 July 1995, a briefing was held at the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters which was attended by, inter alios, Nikolić.<sup>11255</sup> During the briefing, military and police units, including the Milići Brigade, and the MUP Special Police Forces were assigned the task of searching for Bosnian-Muslim forces in the area and de-mining the territory.<sup>11256</sup> The search operation was commanded by a person with the last name Gavrić from the Bratunac Brigade through whom all the reports to the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters were sent.<sup>11257</sup> Gavrić testified that Blagojević commanded and organised the cooperation of the units deployed east of the Kasaba-Drnjača road by 16 July 1995, in conformity with Colonel Ignjat Milanović's proposal to the DK Command.<sup>11258</sup> According to daily combat reports from the Bratunac Brigade and a report by Colonel Ignjat Malanović, on 15 and 16 July 1995, large groups of 'enemy soldiers' were present east of the Milići-Konjević Polje-Bratunac road, and in particular about 2,000 in the Pobude area.<sup>11259</sup>

2621. In the morning of 17 July the search commenced in Kravica, moving in the direction of Konjević Polje.<sup>11260</sup> By the evening, about 200 Bosnian Muslims had surrendered, including four children.<sup>11261</sup> The 5th Special Police Detachment, led by Stjepan Pepić, in coordination with the intervention units of the Zvornik Brigade, combed the area towards Crni Vrh.<sup>11262</sup> Gavrić testified that pursuant to an order from Blagojević dated 17 July 1995, he was tasked to assist the Bratunac Brigade's 3rd Infantry Battalion, commanded by Dragan Zekić, and the Special Police Detachment, commanded by Dusko Jević, in searching the terrain for enemy soldiers to the left of the Sandići-Kamenica-Gornji Bratunac-Konjević Polje road and act as a coordinator between the units.<sup>11263</sup> There was an organised system of communication between the commanders.<sup>11264</sup> Units from the Milići Brigade, commanded by Nastić, were deployed on their left flank.<sup>11265</sup> In Kamenica, the witness saw several hundred corpses along the road, a large number of them were dressed in military uniforms while others wore civilian clothing.<sup>11266</sup> According to the witness, many of them killed themselves by activating hand grenades, with their weapons, or by hanging themselves.<sup>11267</sup> At around 5 p.m., Zekić told the witness that he received information via radio that resistance had been met.<sup>11268</sup> At the suggestion of the witness, Zekić conveyed to his subordinates that instead of rushing they should go slowly and call people to surrender.<sup>11269</sup> The shooting stopped and a child holding up a white t-shirt walked towards them.<sup>11270</sup> Soldiers from the 3rd Infantry Battalion captured Bosnian-Muslim men, who surrendered in the Burnice village area.<sup>11271</sup> The witness counted the people and ordered that their hands be

2623. On 18 July 1995, the Zvornik Public Security Centre reported to the MUP by way of dispatch that units of the Special Police Detachment and PJP of the MUP of the Bosnian-Serb Republic ‘very successfully’ searched the terrain to the right of the Milići-Drinjača road, including in Cerska and Udrič territories, in order to liquidate the remains of infiltrated groups from Srebrenica.<sup>11282</sup>

Ambushes on the remaining column and the column reaching Bosnian-Muslim held territory

2625. On 13 July, the head of the column continued its journey up along the Kalesija-Zvornik road, where they too were caught in ambushes and suffered further casualties.<sup>11284</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Facts and received evidence from several witnesses concerning additional ambushes on the column between 14 and 17 July 1995. Subašić stated that the column was ambushed twice on 14 July 1995, the first time with heavy fire.<sup>11285</sup> Following this ambush, the witness saw a man activate a hand grenade thereby killing himself and wounding others.<sup>11286</sup> The second ambush resulted in Serb soldiers being taken prisoner by the men in the column.<sup>11287</sup> The column established radio contact with the Serbs in the evening requesting to pass through to free territory and announcing, in the alternative, their intent to break through the Serb lines.<sup>11288</sup> The group continued to Baljkovica where it met about 1,000 people from the column, the majority of whom turned back towards Žepa, saying it was impossible to go further.<sup>11289</sup>

2626. Various VRS and MUP units were present in the Zvornik area on 15 and 16 July 1995. Milenko Todorović testified that on 15 July 1995, according to the IBK command Duty Operations Book, the VRS Main Staff ordered the IBK to 'round up the men and send them to Pandurević in the DK pursuant to an order from General Miletić.<sup>11290</sup> General Simić sent a message back to Miletić saying that he could not do this, but later on the same day, General Gavrić, the Deputy Commander and the Chief of Staff of the IBK, ordered Captain Dragisa Vulin, the unit commander, to prepare 50 military policemen to go to Zvornik on 16 July 1995.<sup>11291</sup> These men were to report to the commander of the Zvornik Brigade and would act as a regular combat unit, carrying out operations for the Brigade.<sup>11292</sup> According to the Zvornik Brigade's Duty Officer Notebook, on 16 July 1995, 35 military policemen from the IBK arrived in Zvornik.<sup>11293</sup> According to a report by Radislav Krstić dated 18 July 1995 and a command readiness report from November 1995, these men took part in active combat with the 1st Zvornik Infantry Brigade, a company from the 16th Krajina Brigade, and a platoon from the 1st Vlasenica Light Infantry Brigade on 16 July 1995 in the areas of Planinci, Crni Vrh, Kamenica, and Križevići and helped secure Tuzla road in Zvornik, although the witness denied knowledge of this and attributed the reports to errors by drafting personnel of lower-rank.<sup>11294</sup> According to a report on the combat engagement of police forces, on 16 July 1995, there was fierce fighting with Muslim forces in the areas of Križevići, Tisova Kosa, and Baljkovica during which intervention units of the DK, such as the Drina wolves and members of the military police, fought alongside MUP forces against the Muslim forces.<sup>11295</sup>

2627. After one unsuccessful attempt to move forward to the Bosnian-Muslim front lines on 15 July 1995, the head of the column finally managed to break through to Bosnian Muslim-held territory on 16 July 1995.<sup>11296</sup> ABiH forces attacking from the direction of Tuzla assisted by piercing a line of about one-and-a-half kilometres for the emerging column.<sup>11297</sup> Subašić stated that on that day the Serbs attacked the column in the area of Baljkovica, using heavy mortar shelling.<sup>11298</sup> Thirty men were killed, including one of the ABiH commanders, and many were wounded as a result of this attack.<sup>11299</sup>

2628. At 1 p.m. on 16 July 1995, an agreement was reached between Pandurević and Šemso Muminović, Commander of the Muslim forces, that a one-kilometre wide corridor would be opened for 48 hours in the area of Parlog and Baljkovica to allow Muslim soldiers to get out.<sup>11300</sup> After this members of the VRS would again take up their positions.<sup>11301</sup>

2629. Survivors from the column were filmed upon their arrival in Nezuk on 16 July 1995.<sup>11302</sup> One of the survivors said that it was a very difficult journey; they had not eaten bread in six days.<sup>11303</sup> Members of the Brdksi Battalion, the headquarters support Brigade, and the ABiH 284th Brigade were towards, or at, the head of the column.<sup>11304</sup> Other members of the column, such as Salih Mehmedović, arrived in Bosnian-Muslim held territory on 19 July 1995.<sup>11305</sup>

2630. Reif Mehmedović stated that on 15 July 1995 in the afternoon he saw a group from the column coming under fire as they tried to cross the road, after he had heard some 'Serbian soldiers' with a Motorola radio saying 'they are trying to cross the road'. The group the witness was with, also tried to cross the road and came under fire. The Serb soldiers searched the terrain and the witness saw that one of them placed an anti-personnel mine into the ground at the riverbank. When the witness's group reached Pobuđe village he was informed that the 'Serbian soldiers' had blocked the asphalt road from Nova Kasaba to Kuslat. The witness could see soldiers dispersed along the road about a kilometre away and a helicopter patrolling three times a day. The witness also saw a Praga firing rounds generally into the hills.<sup>11306</sup>

On 17 July 1995 near Baljkovica, Witness RM-301 the group from the column that the witness was with captured by 'Serbs' dressed in camouflage.<sup>11307</sup> The 'Serbs' beat the men while taking them to another location. The witness stated that he was beaten more than others because he was wearing a green shirt. While beating him the 'Serbs' shouted that he was a real 'Alinovac', a member of Alija's army. A man the 'Serbs' called 'Stari' was called from another location by Motorola and appeared to be the commander of the group. The witness stated that ‘Stari’ wore camouflage with a yellow insignia reading ‘KRAJISNICI’ on his left sleeve. Velaga and Faro Zukić, who had been at the front of the small group when it came under fire, were not present. The ‘Serbs’ told ‘Stari’ that the two men had committed suicide to avoid being arrested.<sup>11308</sup> The witness later made his way to free territory arriving on 20 July 1995.<sup>11309</sup> The Trial Chamber also considered additional evidence of Witness RM-301, which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D.

2632. Witness RM-358 stated that his part of the column came under fire when attempting to cross the reserve line in the afternoon of 17 July 1995, though no one was killed.<sup>11310</sup> The next day, ‘Chetniks’ asked them to surrender and opened fire repeatedly from 20 metres away.<sup>11311</sup> The witness heard the soldiers refer to this location on the radio as Tisova Kosa.<sup>11312</sup> The witness and five others surrendered, while those who remained in the grass were fired upon.<sup>11313</sup> The witness was searched and beaten, and when the commander asked him if he was a soldier he replied that he was.<sup>11314</sup> While the commander interrogated the witness, one of the soldiers came to him and asked the commander if he could use his bayonet to kill one of the captives. The commander said that he could choose anyone. The soldier then chose the witness.<sup>11315</sup> These soldiers wore camouflage uniforms bearing insignia with the Serbian flag and a spread eagle, four Cyrillic Ss, and the name of the VRS.<sup>11316</sup> They were armed with M-84 machine guns, automatic rifles, and sniper rifles.<sup>11317</sup> One of them told the witness that they were ‘Krajišnici’.<sup>11318</sup> The captives were forced to lie down and the commander ordered the soldiers to shoot them in the back one at a time.<sup>11319</sup> The five others who had surrendered were shot one at a time, however before it was the witness’s turn to be executed the commander spoke on his radio to another commander and ordered the

A member of the VRS, Tomislav Savkić, testified that several days after 13 July 1995, while moving along the route of the column of the Muslim soldiers from the graveyard in Gornji Mratinjci, he saw ‘hundreds’ of Muslim bodies in the Bokićin Potok area.<sup>11332</sup> While moving through Gornji Mratinjci, Bokićin Potok, towards Pervani and Sandići, he saw more than 2,000 Muslim bodies along the road, some of which had been blown up by hand grenades.<sup>11333</sup> Most of the bodies were dressed in military uniforms, some wore blue Civilian Protection uniforms, and some were dressed in civilian clothes.<sup>11334</sup>

2635. The Trial Chamber recalls its review of Nikolić’s evidence on the reporting of military operations in the Srebrenica enclave to the MUP on 12 July 1995 in chapter 7.1.5. The Trial Chamber further recalls its review of Franken’s evidence on the capture of ‘POWs’ by the VRS around 13 July 1995 in chapter 7.1.5. The Trial Chamber also recalls its review of Egbers’s evidence on VRS attacks on the woods facing the enclave on 12 July 1995 in chapter 7.1.5. The Trial Chamber also recalls its review of exhibit P3518 in chapter 7.4 Schedule E.3.1.

2636. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Mendeljev Đurić which appeared to contrast with Adjudicated Fact 1462. Adjudicated Fact 1462 provides that on 13 July 1995 MUP forces were deployed along the stretch of road between Konjević Polje and Bratunac, where the bulk of Bosnian-Muslim detainees were captured from the column. Đurić stated that while his company, the 1st Company of the Special Police Brigade at the Jahorina Training Centre, was deployed along the Konjević Polje-Bratunac road during the nights of 12 and 13 July 1995 he did not see and could not recall having received any information of Bosnian Muslims surrendering or being captured along the road during the days or nights of 12 and 13 July 1995. The Trial Chamber notes that the witness’s evidence pertains only to what he observed on the stretch of the road to which he was deployed during the nights of 12 and 13 July. That he testified that he did not recall receiving any information about the surrender of Bosnian Muslims along the road during the days of 12 and 13 July 1995 does not mean that Bosnian Muslims were not captured nor surrendered there. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that this evidence does not contradict Adjudicated Facts 1462.

The Trial Chamber's findings

The formation and composition of the column

2637. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that with regard to the formation of the column, on 11 July 1995, after Srebrenica town fell to the VRS, the Command of the 28th Division of the ABiH and the Bosnian-Muslim municipal authorities decided to form a column.<sup>11335</sup> Military-aged men and men able to walk were ordered to go to Šušnjari. The Bosnian-Muslim men of the enclave feared that they would be killed by Bosnian Serbs if they went to the UNPROFOR base in Potočari, and thought that they had a better chance of survival by trying to escape through the woods towards Tuzla. The column gathered near the villages of Jagličići and Šušnjari and started moving north, along the axis between Konjević Polje and Bratunac, around midnight on 11 July 1995.

2638. With regard to the composition of the column the Trial Chamber finds that it comprised approximately 15,000 people, the majority of whom were Bosnian-Muslim boys and men between the ages of 16 and 65.<sup>11336</sup> A small number of women, children, and elderly also joined the column. When it set out, the column was approximately ten kilometres in length.

<sup>11335</sup> Witness RM-297 testified that the movement of the column out of Srebrenica was not organised by anyone. While the Trial Chamber notes that this appears to contrast with Adjudicated Fact 1440 which provides that a decision was taken to form the column, the Trial Chamber finds that the decision to form a column does not necessarily mean that the movement of the column was organised. Further, given the size of the column, the witness provided an account of his personal experience within a part of the column. Therefore the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Witness' RM-297's evidence does not contrast with Adjudicated Fact 1440.

<sup>11336</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while it received estimated figures that put the number of people at the slightly lower figure of 10,000-12,000, and one slightly higher estimate of 17,000-18,000 people, it received overwhelming evidence placing the estimated number of people in the column at 15,000 and has therefore relied on these estimates to establish the number of people in the column. Further, the Trial Chamber notes that Mevudin Orić testified that some people in the column were as young as 14 and as old as 70, which appears to contrast with Adjudicated Fact 1444. However, given that the Adjudicated Fact refers to boys and men in addition to an age range of between 16 and 65, it finds that it does not exclude the possibility that males younger than 16 and older than 65 were also in the column and that there is no contradiction with Adjudicated Fact 1444.

2639. Around one third of the men in the column were Bosnian-Muslim soldiers from the ABiH 28th Division, although not all of the soldiers were armed. The head of the column was comprised of units of the 28th Division, then civilians mixed with soldiers, and the rear of the column comprised members of the Independent Battalion of the 28th Division. Some of the men carried their own hunting rifles while others had hand grenades. Some men carried pistols. Many of the armed men were wearing civilian clothes.

2640. The Defence submits in its Final Brief that Witness RM-314's evidence is not credible for a variety of reasons.<sup>11337</sup> In this regard the Trial Chamber recalls its assessment of the reliability and credibility of some portions of the witness's evidence in chapter 7.2 Schedule E.1.1. The Trial Chamber will now address the Defence's arguments relevant to this chapter. With respect to the Defence submission that the witness made inconsistent statements in relation to whether or not Osman Suljić, a man who led parts of the column, was wearing a uniform and was armed, the Trial Chamber notes that it did not consider the evidence of Witness RM-314 in this regard and that the Trial Chamber's assessment as to the affiliation of men leading the column and the composition of the column rests on evidence from other witnesses and Adjudicated Facts.<sup>11338</sup> The Defence further submits that Witness RM-314 repeatedly denied his status as a combatant and 'avoided providing truthful testimony' on the nature of the column.<sup>11339</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider Witness RM-314's testimony to be ambiguous in relation to his status in the TO. Moreover, the presence of some armed ABiH personnel in the column is uncontested and judicially noticed as Adjudicated Fact 1450. Therefore the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's arguments in this regard.

units, were assigned to block the column. Milan Gvero, Vidoje Blagojević, Commander of the 1st Bratunac Light Infantry Brigade (introduced in chapter 3.1.2), Rade Čuturić, a.k.a. Oficir, Commander of the 2nd Šekovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade (introduced in chapter 3.4), and Dragan Jevtić, Commander of the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Unit (introduced in chapter 3.1.2), issued deployment orders. On 13 July 1995, Gvero issued orders aimed at preventing Bosnian Muslims from crossing over into the Bosnian-Muslim territory towards Tuzla and Kladanj in order to protect the Serbian population from Bosnian-Muslims, who included 'inveterate criminals and villains'. His orders further directed the detention of the captured and disarmed Bosnian-Muslims in facilities that could be secured by fewer troops. Further, he ordered the MUP to engage in the coordination of these tasks, and that the manpower be made available by the Commands of the DK and other VRS units. Blagojević commanded and organised the cooperation of the units deployed east of the Kasaba-Drnjača road by 16 July 1995. Four infantry battalions of the Bratunac Brigade were tasked to search the Sandići area, Bratunac-Konjević Polje-Kasaba axis, and the right bank of the Zeleni Jadar River between 14 and 17 July 1995. On 17 July 1995, Momir Nikolić, together with a member of the MUP Special Police Brigade, attended a briefing at the Bratunac Brigade headquarters, during which military and police units, including the Milići Brigade and the MUP Special Police Forces were assigned the task of searching for Bosnian-Muslim forces in the area and de-mining the territory. Between 12 and 17 July 1995, the DK and units from the Milići Brigade commanded by Nastić carried out searches of the area with the purpose of capturing the men from the column. The Bratunac and Zvornik brigades engaged in combat with the column as it attempted to break through to Bosnian-Muslim territory between 10 and 15 July 1995. Members of the Zvornik Brigade swept the terrain on 18 and 19 July 1995.

2642. In addition to these DK units, the Trial Chamber finds that between 12 and 17 July 1995, other units, including the MUP Special Police Brigade, elements of the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Protection Regiment, and subsequently elements of the municipal police, also took action to block the column. On 12 July 1995, Borovčanin (introduced in chapter 3.4) received an order from Mladić to send half of his men and available technical equipment to the Konjevic Polje-Cerska axis to block the area and fight the column. The 2nd Special Police Detachment and the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP, deployed along the Kravica-Sandići-Pervani-Hričići road, were equipped with a launcher for Malyutka missiles, a praga self-propelled anti-aircraft gun, and a mortar platoon. On 15 July 1995, Borovčanin ordered the MUP Special Police Brigade to continue securing the Bratunac-Konjević Polje road. On that day, the MUP 1st Company of the Jahorina Training Centre swept the terrain between Kravica and Konjević Polje with the Bratunac Brigade.

2643. On 15 July 1995, following a meeting between Chief Vasić and Borovčanin, a large part of the police force was sent to Baljkovica near Zvornik to block the column. Around 15 or 17 July 1995, a PJP unit was also sent to Baljkovica to support an army unit which was surrounded by Bosnian Muslims from the column. On 16 July 1995, 35 military policemen from the IBK were deployed to Zvornik and participated in active combat with the 1st Zvornik Infantry Brigade, a company from the 16th Krajina Brigade, and a platoon from the 1st Vlasenica Light Infantry Brigade in the areas of Planici, Crni Vrh, Kamenica, and Križevici, and helped secure the Tuzla Road in Zvornik. During an attack on the column in the area of Baljkovica on 15 July, Serbs used heavy mortar shelling.

2644. At a meeting held at the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters on 16 July, part of the MUP force was deployed to search the terrain between Srebrenica and Konjević Polje. On the same day, Borovčanin ordered the MUP Special Police Brigade to report to Momir Nikolić at the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters where the brigade, along with the Milići Brigade, was assigned to search the area for Bosnian-Muslims. The operation was commanded by Gavrić from the Bratunac Brigade. Around 16 July, policemen and members of the Bratunac Brigade guarded the Konjević Polje-Bratunac road at Sandići Hill. On 17 July 1995, the 5th Special Police Detachment led by Stjepan Pepić, in coordination with the intervention units of the Zvornik Brigade, combed the area towards Crni Vrh. On 17 July 1995 pursuant to an order from Blagojević, the chief of artillery of the Bratunac Brigade was tasked to assist the Bratunac Brigade's 3rd Infantry Battalion, commanded by Dragan Zekić, and the Special Police Detachment, commanded by Dusko Jević, in searching the terrain for enemy soldiers to the left of the Sandići-Kamenica-Gornji Bratunac-Konjević Polje road and act as a coordinator between the units. Police units from Ugljevik SJB were also deployed in mid-July 1995 to Snagovo to mop-up the area in execution of Commander Kulić's order, and were on assignment in Konjević Polje between 13 and 21 July 1995.

2645. With regard to reporting, the Trial Chamber finds that between 12 and 18 July 1995, the Zvornik and Bratunac Brigades continuously reported to the DK Command on column-related matters. On 12 and 18 July 1995, Vasić, chief of the Zvornik Public Security Centre, reported to the MUP that military operations were proceeding to plan: the 'Turks' were fleeing towards Sućeska and units of the Special Police Detachment and of the PJP had successfully searched the terrain. Further, on 16 July 1995, Colonel Blagojević reported that he had visited all units involved in blocking the enemy, including the MUP, and that he had 'defined their tasks, and organised their joint actions and communications'.

The circumstances of the surrender and capture of Bosnian Muslims from the column between 12 and 17 July 1995

2646. The Trial Chamber finds that between 12 and 15 July 1995, tanks, lorries, an UNPROFOR carrier, Pragas, APCs resembling those used by the former JNA, an anti-aircraft tank, armoured transports, and howitzers were placed along the road between Konjević Polje and Bratunac.

2647. By the morning of 13 July, a group of approximately 2,000 to 3,000 Bosnian-Muslims from the column, some of whom were members of the ABiH, had reached an area between Konjević Polje and Nova Kasaba. On that day, MUP forces, including a company from the Jahorina Training Centre, were deployed along the stretch of road between Konjević Polje and Bratunac where the bulk of the Bosnian-Muslim detainees were captured from the column. Malinić, Commander of the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Motorized Protection Regiment, ordered members of a platoon of the military police battalion of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment to patrol an area of the road, and they engaged in an exchange of fire with about 1,000 Bosnian Muslims from the 28th Division and fired gas canisters into the woods.

2648. Between 12 and 15 July 1995, VRS soldiers and members of the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment, and members of the civilian police used loudspeakers or megaphones to call on the Bosnian-Muslims hidden in the woods to surrender. Those using the loudspeakers or megaphones threatened that if they did not surrender, the women and children at Potočari would be harmed. Some announcements were made that the ICRC were there to help them and promises were made that no one would be harmed; that they would all stay alive; that they would be safe; and that they would be exchanged as prisoners and treated according to the Geneva Conventions. Serb soldiers offered some of the Bosnian Muslims transportation by bus to Tuzla in exchange for their surrender, and on another occasion they said that UNPROFOR would take them to Tuzla to be exchanged for Serb soldiers. They were given warnings and ultimatums, and there was sporadic shooting.

2649. Further attacks by Serb forces took place on 14 and 15 July 1995, resulting in human losses. In some places, Bosnian-Serb forces fired into the woods with anti-aircraft guns and other weapons, or used stolen UN equipment to deceive the Bosnian-Muslim men into believing that the UN or the Red Cross were present. Some of the Bosnian Muslims who surrendered had abandoned their weapons while others were still armed. Others surrendered after being called to surrender over a loudspeaker while others surrendered when they encountered the military police after entering the woods. On 13 July 1995, Momir Nikolić, Commander for Intelligence and Security of the Bratunac Brigade from November 1992 to at least October 1995 (introduced in chapter 3.1.2), ordered Mirko Janković, Commander of the Bratunac Brigade military police platoon from April 1995 (introduced in chapter 3.1.2), to drive a stolen UN APC from Bratunac to Konjević Polje with Nikolić, Janković, and Mile Petrović, Deputy Commander of the Bratunac Brigade military police platoon (introduced in chapter 3.1.2), on board. On the same day, a group of 200 people surrendered, and after having been ordered to take off their shirts and line up in rows, were fired upon by automatic firearms including anti-aircraft machineguns. Some of those who surrendered placed their white T-shirts on sticks, and shouted that they wanted to surrender. Serbs described as 'chetniks' told a group from the column that they should leave any weapons or money or they would be killed, and told them to line up on the asphalt road in five rows of approximately 100 meters, with wounded people lying on the road between those standing. Some of the soldiers pointed their weapons at them and said 'Balija's put your arms up higher, now we are going to show you'. They were made to run along the road with their hands in the air and with three fingers raised. The head of the column continued its journey up along the Kalesija-Zvornik road, where they too were caught in ambushes and suffered further casualties. Some detainees were transported to Tuzla to be exchanged. Members of the civilian police searched some of the captives, ordered them to hand over their money, jewellery, and weapons, and beat up several people.

2650. In the context of the circumstances surrounding surrender described above, between 13 and 17 July 1995, a number of Bosnian Muslims from the column committed suicide. The civilian police, military police and VRS soldiers guarded some of those that surrendered. On 12 July 1995, VRS soldiers demanded money from some Bosnian Muslims who had surrendered, and threatened to kill them if they later found money on them. On 13 July 1995, the military police cursed, insulted, and threatened some of those who had surrendered and told the captives to carry their wounded. On that same day approximately 1000 of the detainees were placed under the control of the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment at Nova Kasaba.

Attacks on the column on 12-13 July 1995

2651. In relation to attacks on the column, the Trial Chamber finds that on 12 July 1995, MUP Special Police Brigade units launched an artillery attack against the column that was crossing an asphalt road between the area of Konjević Polje and Nova Kasaba. Only about one third of the men successfully made it across the asphalt road and the column was split in two parts. Heavy shooting and shelling continued against the remainder of the column throughout the day and during the night. The shelling would take place for 15 minutes, pause briefly, and then start again. Different parts of the column were ambushed and attacked with artillery, including anti-aircraft guns. At one point a group experienced what they thought was some kind of tear gas. Another group experienced very thick smoke caused by an explosion, which they thought may have contained some kind of poison. On another occasion a helicopter was seen dropping blue powder on part of the column which affected the men who experienced choking with their eyes turning red, their faces turning blue, and their legs jerked.

2652. During an attack near the Nova Kasaba-Konjević-Polje asphalt road people were heard screaming and saying 'don't shoot, we surrender'. During another attack on the stretch between Jagličići to Kamenica Hill, no one was heard returning fire from the column. In the context of the attacks some members of the column were seen committing suicide by using guns, detonating hand grenades, or hanging themselves, and they were also seen shooting one another.

2653. Several thousand Bosnian-Muslim men from the column who were captured on 13 July 1995 were collected in or near Sandići Meadow and on the Nova Kasaba football field. VRS soldiers or members of the civilian police guarding the men at Nova Kasaba football field forced them to turn over their valuables and abandon their belongings. The Trial Chamber received evidence from various witnesses on various ranges concerning the number of Bosnian Muslims at the football field in Nova Kasaba: these numbers ranged from 300 to 4,000. The Trial Chamber notes that the number of Bosnian Muslims may have fluctuated throughout the day, and given the circumstances it may have been difficult to estimate their exact number. The Trial Chamber further notes that several witnesses testified that about 1,500 Bosnian Muslims were detained at the stadium. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that at least at one point on 13 July 1995, 1,500 Bosnian-Muslim men were kept at the Nova Kasaba football field. VRS soldiers, including members of the battalion of the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment commanded by Malinić, four military police companies including an anti-terrorist company and a company of armoured vehicles, and civilian police were present at the football field. Before entering the field, some Bosnian Muslims were ordered to throw their weapons to the side of the road and they complied. Serb soldiers provided first aid to wounded Bosnian Muslims. During the day, several press teams and film crews, including from the Bosnian-Serb Republic news agency and from the VRS press centre, filmed the Bosnian Muslims gathered at the field. Still on the same day, Malinić ordered the commander of a military police platoon in the military police battalion of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment not to interfere with the work of the press teams and films crews, including those from the Bosnian-Serb Republic news agency and from the VRS press centre. Serb civilians arrived at the field and cursed and threw bricks and stones at the Bosnian-Muslims.

2654. The Trial Chamber notes that it received evidence from a number of witnesses with regard to the alleged killing of a detainee at the Nova Kasaba football field on 13 July 1995. Pero Andrić and Mladen Blagojević, both members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon which was escorting Mladić that day, provided evidence that there was no mistreatment of detainees, and no one was killed. Zoran Malinić provided hearsay evidence about the killing. Further, there were two witnesses, Witness RM-346 and Witness RM-253, who were present at the field, in close proximity to Mladić. Witness RM-346 provided evidence that VRS soldiers or members of the civilian police present at Nova Kasaba football field beat up one Bosnian-Muslim male detainee with their rifle butts and then shot him with a pistol in Mladić's presence because he had stood up. Witness RM-253 testified that he did not observe anyone being harmed or killed at the location. Both witnesses were in close enough proximity to Mladić to hear his speech to the detainees. The Trial Chamber has considered the Defence's argument that Witness RM-346's evidence is unreliable due to, inter alia, inconsistencies between the testimony and a prior statement given to the Bosnian authorities.<sup>11340</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the witness's evidence on this event bore some minor inconsistencies, for instance, whether the detainee was shot with a pistol or a rifle.<sup>11341</sup> The Trial Chamber found no internal inconsistencies in Witness RM-253's evidence in relation to this incident. The Trial Chamber has taken into consideration the Prosecution's argument that Zoran Malinić's evidence corroborates Witness RM-346's evidence.<sup>11342</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes the internal inconsistencies in Malinić's evidence that during his testimony in the Tolimir case in 2011 he said that he had heard of the killing, whereas in his 2005 statement to the Prosecution he said that no one was killed at the Nova Kasaba football field. The Trial Chamber finds that these internal inconsistencies combined with the hearsay nature of Malinić's evidence render his evidence unreliable in this regard, and therefore will not rely on his evidence with regard to this alleged incident. Based on all of this, the Trial Chamber finds that it has not been demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that the alleged incident took place and will therefore not consider this incident further.

The transportation of Bosnian Muslims to various locations from the Nova Kasaba football field, including Kravica

2655. With regard to the transportation of Bosnian Muslims to various locations, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian-Muslim men who had surrendered or had been captured were also detained in buses and trucks. Buses carrying Bosnian-Muslim detainees left the football field and headed towards Bratunac or Zvornik. In Kravica, some trucks stopped by a supermarket on 13 July at around 5 p.m. and the men were kept in the trucks overnight, without food or water. Around 119 men were detained in one truck. During the night of 13 July 1995 and the morning of 14 July 1995, VRS soldiers, among them a man called Radovan Grujčić from Orahovica in Srebrenica Municipality, shot and killed at least 15 Bosnian-Muslim detainees who were being held in trucks escorted by the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Motorized Protection Regiment outside of the supermarket at Kravica. The soldiers selected some men from among the detainees after asking whether they were from certain villages and threatened, beat, and shot them dead. Before Witness RM-253 boarded the trucks he had heard a Serb soldier tell another detainee that he would not get his bag back because he would not need it anymore.

2656. The evidence on the whereabouts of some of the men transported towards Bratunac and Zvornik, and, for some, to alleged execution sites will be reviewed, along with additional evidence, in chapters 7.2 to 7.15.

The safe passage agreement and the arrival of the column in Bosnian Muslim-held territory

2657. With regard to the safe passage agreement and the arrival of the column in Bosnian Muslim-held territory, the Trial Chamber finds that after one unsuccessful attempt to move forward to the Bosnian-Muslim front lines on 15 July 1995, the head of the column finally managed to break through to Bosnian Muslim-held territory on 16 July 1995. Survivors from the column said that it had been a very difficult journey and that they had not eaten bread for six days. ABiH forces attacking from the direction of Tuzla assisted by piercing a line of about one-and-a-half kilometres for the emerging column and members of the ABiH 284th Brigade, the Brdksi Battalion, and the headquarters support Brigade were towards, or at, the head of the column. Pursuant to an agreement between Vinko Pandurević, Commander of the Zvornik Brigade, and Šemso Muminović, Commander of the Muslim forces, a one-kilometre wide corridor was opened for 48 hours in the area of Parlog and Baljkovica to allow the Bosnian Muslims to get out. On that same day, some police detachments positioned at Baljkovica received orders to abort all combat activities and withdraw to the nearby hills in order to create a passage for the Muslim civilians and soldiers to pass through.

Searches of the terrain and capture of Bosnian Muslims from the column on 17-20 July 1995

2658. With regard to searches of the terrain and the resulting capture of the Bosnian Muslims, the Trial Chamber finds that on 17 July 1995, a search operation commanded by Mićo Gavrić from the Bratunac Brigade, commenced in Kravica, moving in the direction of Konjević Polje. All the reports to the Bratunac Brigade headquarters were sent through Gavrić. By the evening, about 200 Bosnian Muslims had surrendered, including four children. Before being capture, one of the children had walked towards Zekić and Gavrić with a white T-shirt in his hands. Gavrić ordered that the hands of the captured be tied with pieces of string. The children were put into Gavrić's care and brought to the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters, where he ordered that they be fed and well treated. On 18 July 1995, Ljubisa Borovčanin asked Gavrić to arrange the exchange of the children, who were then handed over to a man sent by Borovčanin and were exchanged for nine policemen captured near Zvornik. On 17 July 1995, Momir Nikolić, chief of Security at the Bratunac Brigade Command ordered Gavrić to hand the rest of those captured over to Jević, a.k.a. Stalin, so that he could take them to Konjević Polje.

The killing of persons captured from the column around 18 July 1995

2659. With regard to the killing of people who were captured from the column around 18 July 1995, the Trial Chamber finds that on or about 18 July 1995, VRS soldiers shot and killed four Bosnian Muslims, including a 15-year-old boy, whom they had captured at Tisova Kosa. They beat the Bosnian Muslims and referred to one as 'Alinovac' (member of Alija's army) and 'Balija'. They forced the Bosnian Muslims to lie down, and 'Stari', the commander of the group, ordered his soldiers to shoot them in the back one at a time. While the commander was interrogating Witness RM-358, one of the soldiers came to him and asked the commander if he could use his bayonet to kill one of the captives. The commander answered that he could choose anyone after which the soldier chose the witness. The soldier who had wanted to use the bayonet was not pleased when the commander ordered his men not to kill the witness because as a soldier he could be used for exchange purposes.

2660. The Trial Chamber received evidence from a number of witnesses pertaining to dead bodies seen along the path the column took. The Trial Chamber also received evidence from a number of witnesses that people in the column were committing suicide and killing one another. Due to a lack of specificity with regard to the status of the victims and the manner in which these people died, the Trial Chamber has not considered these incidents in the context of killings as charged in the Indictment.

2661. The Trial Chamber will address the above-mentioned findings and the evidence related to the alleged Srebrenica JCE and, in particular, the Accused's alleged responsibility (some of which has been reviewed above in this chapter) in chapters 7.15, 7.16, 7.17, 9.3.4, and 9.7.

7.2 Jadar River (Schedule E.1.1)

2662. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of approximately 15 Bosnian-Muslim men in an isolated area on the bank of the Jadar River on 13 July 1995, at 11 a.m.<sup>11343</sup> The Defence submitted that Witness RM-314's evidence is not credible, that medical records demonstrate his wound was caused by shrapnel rather than a bullet, and that there is insufficient evidence to conclude that the perpetrators of this alleged incident were members of the VRS.<sup>11344</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 1357 with regard to this incident. Further, it received evidence from Witness RM-314, a Bosnian-Muslim TO member who worked in Srebrenica during the war;<sup>11345</sup> Mujo Subašić, a Bosnian Muslim from Podžeplje, Han Pijesak Municipality, who worked as a nurse in the Srebrenica hospital from April 1993 until 11 July 1995;<sup>11346</sup> Mirko Perić, a reserve policeman mobilized into the Bratunac police between 1992 and 1995;<sup>11347</sup> Momir Nikolić the Assistant Commander for Intelligence and Security of the Bratunac Brigade from November 1992 to at least October 1995;<sup>11348</sup> Nenad Deronjić, a Serb policeman in Bratunac and Srebrenica from 1991 until 1996;<sup>11349</sup> Slavoljub Mladenović, a Serb and the Commander of the 2nd Company of the Zvornik CSB from mid-1994;<sup>11350</sup> Mile Petrović, a member of the Bratunac Brigade military police platoon in July 1995;<sup>11351</sup> Zoran Stanković, a specialist in forensic medicine;<sup>11352</sup> and Milan Pejić, Director of Blažuj Military Hospital from approximately 8 May 1992 until at least 14 October 1993,<sup>11353</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

2663. Witness RM-314 testified that at around 5 a.m. on 13 July 1995, he was discovered by five or six men in blue Bosnian-Serb police uniforms at the intersection called Konjević Polje.<sup>11354</sup> The witness was handed over to a former police inspector in Srebrenica whom the witness knew from before the war.<sup>11355</sup> The former police inspector brought the witness to a guard house next to a school and told the soldiers there not to mistreat him.<sup>11356</sup> Inside the house there were two other detainees: Hamed Omerović from Glogova in Bratunac Municipality, who was dressed in civilian clothes, and Azem Mujić from Rijeke in Han Pijesak Municipality, who was wearing one piece of military clothing.<sup>11357</sup> After about 20 minutes, the former police inspector took the three detainees to a nearby house for interrogation.<sup>11358</sup>

2664. Later, the former police inspector took the detainees to another house, where they were joined by four other detainees: a young boy about 14 years old from Sućeska; Hasan Salihović from Potočari, who used to be a policeman and knew the former police inspector well; Rešid Sinanović, former Chief of the SUP in Bratunac who left Srebrenica in the same group as the witness; and a man named Hamdija from Konjević Polje who knew one of the policemen and was taken away shortly after he was brought in.<sup>11359</sup>

2665. A Serb man in civilian clothes named Mirko, who before the war had worked for the police but had been fired, ordered Salihović and Sinanović to stay at the house and took the witness, Omerović, Mujić, and the 14-year-old boy to a building near the Konjević Polje intersection.<sup>11360</sup> When the detainees arrived at the building, a young police officer informed an individual, later identified by the witness as Nenad Deronjić, that one of his colleagues was upstairs. The witness was not certain that the individual in question was Deronjić until October 1995, when Salihović's mother visited him and described Deronjić. Salihović's mother knew what Deronjić, her son's colleague, looked like because he had visited her home.<sup>11361</sup> The witness identified Deronjić in his

2666. Inside the building, the detainees were taken to a room where there were twelve Bosnian-Muslim men who were naked except for their underwear.<sup>11364</sup> They were guarded by four soldiers, including the man later identified by the witness as Deronjić, all of whom wore green camouflage uniforms without insignia and carried automatic rifles.<sup>11365</sup> The soldiers ordered the four arriving detainees to take off their clothes and stand in line with the twelve other detainees. The soldiers then threw the detainees on the floor and beat them up with their fists and kicked them in the head with their boots.<sup>11366</sup> The witness was beaten by all four soldiers.<sup>11367</sup> After some time, a young man in a blue uniform with a beret cap came in and asked why the detainees' clothes had been taken off. He told the detainees that they were supposed to be exchanged together with others and that earlier a large group of approximately 1,000 people had surrendered. One of the uniformed men told the young man in a blue uniform that there would be no exchange for the detainees and that the young man knew very well whom he had buried 45 days earlier. He added something that the witness understood to mean that he wanted to kill the detainees.<sup>11368</sup> The young man answered that if there was somebody there who should kill the detainees, it was him because of the person he himself had to bury.<sup>11369</sup> The two of them went out and, shortly afterwards, another uniformed man came in and ordered the detainees to put their clothes back on. They were brought into a larger room where the four soldiers hit them again; the witness was hit in the back of his head with a rifle butt.<sup>11370</sup>

2668. With regard to the units present at and in the vicinity of the Konjević Polje checkpoint, the Trial Chamber notes that MUP units were placed along the Bratunac-Konjević Polje road, where they engaged in blocking and capturing large numbers of men from the Bosnian-Muslim column on 13 July 1995.<sup>11387</sup> Mirko Perić testified that he manned the only checkpoint in Konjević Polje for three or four days around 10 to 13 July 1995 along with other Bratunac police officers dressed in camouflage police uniforms with full equipment, including belts, handcuffs, truncheons, and weapons, as well as members of the military police.<sup>11388</sup> The witness recalled seeing Momir Nikolić at the checkpoint on two occasions, and he testified that he never saw Nenad Deronjić, one of his colleagues, at Konjević Polje.<sup>11389</sup> Throughout the time that the witness was responsible for manning the checkpoint, he left Konjević Polje only once and was away for five or six hours to attend a funeral.<sup>11390</sup> Momir Nikolić testified that he arrived in Konjević Polje on 13 July 1995 at approximately 12:30 p.m. and that there was a civilian police checkpoint at the intersection in Konjević Polje manned by members of the Bratunac SJB. The witness saw both Nenad Deronjić and Mirko Perić, both members of the Bratunac SJB, engaged at the checkpoint that day.<sup>11391</sup>

Upon their entering the vehicle, Nikolić hit one of the two men on the head with a rifle butt.<sup>11393</sup> In Konjević Polje, Nikolić interrogated the two men in an unfinished house.<sup>11394</sup> After the interrogation, Nikolić ordered the witness to take the two men to a building across the road where other prisoners were held. 2671. Slavoljub Mladenović testified that he and other members of the 2nd and 3rd Companies of the Zvornik PJP, including Nenad Deronjić, complied with an order to report to Srebrenica to provide security on 12 July 1995.<sup>11403</sup> The witness was on duty from 7 a.m. on 13 July to 7 a.m. on 14 July 1995 but travelled to Bratunac Municipality on 13 July to console the family of a policeman who had been killed.<sup>11404</sup> The witness was physically present at the Srebrenica police station ‘as necessary to be briefed’ throughout his shift and was never away from the police station for more than five hours at a time.<sup>11405</sup> Every time he was at the Srebrenica police station that day, the witness observed Deronjić.<sup>11406</sup> The witness testified that Ravni Buljim is located between Jaglici and Konjević Polje and that ‘there’s no chance that anyone of my platoons was in that area’ around 12 July 1995.<sup>11407</sup> According to the witness, on 13 July 1995, the 2nd Company was in Srebrenica.<sup>11408</sup>

2672. According to a report of the Zvornik CSB to the Headquarters of the MUP in Bijeljina on 12 July 1995, the 2nd company of the Zvornik PJP (60 men) was dispatched to Srebrenica with the task of securing all facilities of vital importance in the town and protect them from being looted, pursuant to Karadžić’s order.<sup>11409</sup> A platoon of this company was ordered to lie in ambush at Ravni Buljim, where Muslim groups had been spotted fleeing.<sup>11410</sup> It would carry out its task without the cooperation with the military police.<sup>11411</sup>

2673. With regard to Witness RM-314’s evidence on the presence of Deronjić at the scene of the killings on 13 July 1995, the Trial Chamber notes that although the witness named Deronjić as one of the perpetrators in his testimony before the Trial Chamber, he specified that he was unable to identify him at the time of the killings. The witness’s first two statements, given on 16 August 1995 and 8 June 1999, do not name Deronjić as one of the perpetrators. Deronjić is first identified as a perpetrator in the witness's 14 June 1999 statement, although the witness testified that he mentioned Deronjić when he gave his first statement in 1995. Finally, the witness's identification of Deronjić is based on an oral description of Deronjić that he heard approximately three months after the incident. This description was provided by Salihović's mother, who knew Deronjić, but there is no evidence as to what her description entailed or how detailed it was. In light of these concerns, the Trial Chamber will not rely on the witness's evidence on this issue.

2674. With respect to the Defence submission that Witness RM-314 was not credible, the Defence more specifically submits that the witness has 'disavowed/recanted' portions of his witness statements and 'corrected/changed' portions of his testimony in prior proceedings before the Tribunal.<sup>11412</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the witness's medical record corroborates his testimony that he was injured. The Trial Chamber further notes that none of the instances flagged by the Defence pertain to the witness's testimony regarding the alleged killing incident at the Jadar River on 13 July 1995, and that Witness RM-314's account of this incident is internally consistent and consistent with the account provided by Subašić. With respect to the Defence submission that Witness RM-314's injury was the result of shrapnel rather than gunfire, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the use of the term 'explosive' in the witness's medical record is not inconsistent with him having suffered a gunshot wound. The Trial Chamber thus finds the evidence of Witness RM-314 reliable.

2675. The Trial Chamber notes the Defence submission that Witness RM-314 has given contradictory evidence regarding the content of a statement he made to an individual wearing ABiH insignia on 27 July 1995.<sup>11413</sup> The witness testified that this individual visited him while he was 'in a psychological condition' in hospital, pressured him to falsely state that he had been injured in Karakaj, and forced him to give a statement under duress.<sup>11414</sup> The Defence submits that the witness has given evidence both that he did and that he did not accede to this individual's pressure to state that he had been injured in Karakaj.<sup>11415</sup> As the witness has reliably testified that this statement was taken under duress, and as the witness has consistently given evidence that he was injured at the Jadar River, the Trial Chamber does not consider this matter to affect the credibility of the witness.

2676. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that, on the morning of 13 July 1995, four individuals in green camouflage uniforms shot and killed 15 Bosnian-Muslim male detainees, including a 14-year-old boy, one man wearing civilian clothing, and one man wearing a piece of military clothing, after lining them up on the bank of the Jadar River. The men had been detained at a building near the Konjević Polje intersection before being killed. With regard to the perpetrators, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 1357 and received evidence on the units present at the relevant time at and around the Konjević Polje checkpoint, located in the immediate vicinity of the building from which the perpetrators and the victims departed prior to the killing. Based on this, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators were members of the police or the VRS military police.<sup>11416</sup> The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8, below.

<sup>11416</sup> With respect to the Defence submission that Witness RM-314's identification of the perpetrators wearing camouflage uniforms without insignia is insufficient to determine their affiliation (Defence Final Brief, para. 2997), the Trial Chamber notes that its finding as to the affiliation of the perpetrators rests on Adjudicated Fact 1357 and the reliable evidence of Witness RM-314, Perić, Nikolić, and Deronjić, and therefore rejects the Defence submission.

7.3 Cerska Valley (Schedule E.2.1)

2677. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing and subsequent burial of approximately 150 Bosnian-Muslim men in an area along a dirt road in the Cerska valley about three kilometres from Konjević Polje, between 13 and 17 July 1995.<sup>11417</sup> The Defence submitted that the VRS conducted legitimate military operations in the Cerska valley area, including the collecting of information on remaining ABiH combatants in the area on 17 July 1995.<sup>11418</sup> The Defence also submitted that the victims of this alleged incident may have died during combat, internal ABiH clashes, or committed suicide.<sup>11419</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts related to this incident. It also received evidence from William Haglund, a forensic anthropologist;<sup>11420</sup> and Dušan Janc, an investigator,<sup>11421</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>11422</sup> The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Reif Mehmedović, a Bosnian-Muslim soldier in the ABiH 284th Brigade in July 1995;<sup>11423</sup> Sulejman Buljubašić, a Bosnian from Ljeskovik in Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>11424</sup> Mičo Gavrić, Chief of Artillery in the Bratunac Brigade from 14 November 1992 until the end of the war;<sup>11425</sup> Witness RM-336, a Serb policeman from the Ugljevik SJB;<sup>11426</sup> and Dragomir Keserović, a desk officer for the military police in the security administration of the Main Staff of the VRS from 1995 and commander of an armoured brigade in the 1KK;<sup>11427</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

the asphalt road about one and a half kilometres away.<sup>11428</sup> The vehicles were coming from the direction of Konjević Polje and turned right onto the macadam road heading towards Cerska.<sup>11429</sup> There were eight vehicles in total: first an olive-green APC, then three trucks covered with tarpaulin, followed by three buses of which the third looked overloaded as it was closer to the ground and going slower than the others, and finally a yellow excavator.<sup>11430</sup> Later, the witness heard a detonation coming from the area the convoy had headed towards, followed by small arms fire for three to four minutes. At around 7 p.m., the witness saw the excavator and a bus turning from the macadam road onto the asphalt road towards Konjević Polje.<sup>11431</sup> Sulejman Buljubašić was also present in the area at the time. He stated that on 17 or 18 July 1995, on his way to Cerska, he stopped in Kaldrmice. There, around 9:30 a.m., he saw 'Chetniks' arriving from the direction of Nova Kasaba in a convoy of three buses with detainees, two trucks, one passenger car, and two transporters, all heading in the direction of Cerska.<sup>11432</sup> He saw the 'Chetniks' exit one of the trucks and deploy in a sweep-and-clear formation, moving in the direction of Cerska. He later heard the sound of shooting coming from the direction the convoy had gone to. Some time later, he saw the vehicles from the convoy return, and an excavator, a Lada Niva, and another passenger vehicle drive in the direction of Cerska. The excavator and the passenger vehicle stayed there for approximately one hour. Around 3:30 p.m., the witness left towards Kamenica.<sup>11433</sup>

2679. Mehmedović stated that on the morning of 17 July 1995, the day after he had seen the vehicles going towards Cerska, he and two other men went closer to the road.<sup>11434</sup> At around 8 p.m., the witness and the other two crossed the road running from Nova Kasaba to Konjević Polje and crossed the bridge over the Jadar River near to the mill where the convoy had driven to. They went up the track towards Cerska for about three kilometres and came upon some disturbed earth less than a metre from the left side

2680. Keserović testified that the next morning, on his way to Bratunac, he saw Major Malinić along the road in Nova Kasaba.<sup>11438</sup> Malinić told him that most of the military police battalion of the protection regiment was deployed on the front lines around Sarajevo and that the company undergoing training in Nova Kasaba was deployed along the road in the area of a blockade from Kasaba to Konjević Polje.<sup>11439</sup> The witness met with Colonel Blagojević at his command post around 11 a.m.<sup>11440</sup> Blagojević informed him that the implementation of the sweeping task continued and that MUP units from Bratunac and Srebrenica were on their way to join the operation.<sup>11441</sup> According to the witness, the intercept of a communication dated 17 July 1995 between Mičić and Badem, code name for the command of the Bratunac brigade, mentioning the departure of 400 in seven buses at 11:30 a.m., headed by Blagojević, referred to a unit of the Bratunac brigade which set off in the direction of Žepa.<sup>11442</sup>

2682. Between 7 and 18 July 1996, investigators from the Prosecution, in conjunction with a team from Physicians for Human Rights, exhumed a mass grave to the southwest of the road through the Cerska valley from the main road from Konjević Polje to Nova Kasaba.<sup>11447</sup> One hundred and fifty bodies were recovered from a mass grave near Cerska, and the cause of death for 149 was determined to be gunshot wounds.<sup>11448</sup> All of the bodies exhumed were male, with a mean age from 14 to 50.<sup>11449</sup> Of the bodies exhumed, 147 were wearing civilian clothes.<sup>11450</sup> Forty-eight wire ligatures were recovered from the grave, about half of which were still in place binding the victims' hands behind their backs.<sup>11451</sup> Investigation into the cartridges discovered at the grave site revealed that the cartridges found in the grave itself matched with those found along the road at the gravesite, indicating that the victims in the grave were shot at the gravesite.<sup>11452</sup> Haglund testified that cartridges were moved to the grave, together with the soil, when it was removed from the side of the road where the killing took place.<sup>11453</sup> The bodies of the victims had been covered by transferring earth moved from the roadside opposite to the burial site, using earthmoving equipment.<sup>11454</sup> Haglund testified that Muslim paraphernalia, including official papers of the Islamic Community of Sarajevo and prayer beads, were found on nine corpses.<sup>11455</sup> Identifying information for some victims was recovered. irrelevant for this incident. With regard to the Defence's argument concerning VRS operations in the area on 17 July 1995, the Trial Chamber notes that the VRS activities, mentioned in Gavrić's evidence, went beyond the mere collection of information on the presence of remaining ABiH members in the Cerska area and involved the capture of Bosnian Muslims. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the legitimacy of the operation in which this capture took place is not relevant to the analysis of this alleged incident.

2684. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on or around 17 July 1995, 'Chetniks' killed 150 non-Serb males, of whom at least 149 were shot, including minors, some as young as 14 years old, in an area along the road from Nova Kasaba to Konjević Polje, near Cerska.<sup>11457</sup> Considering Keserović's evidence reviewed above as well as the evidence reviewed in chapters 7.1.6 and 9.7 the Trial Chamber finds that these perpetrators included members of the Special Police Detachment and Special Police Unit of the MUP. The perpetrators subsequently buried them in a mass grave to the southwest of the road. Civilian clothes were found on all but three of the victims and some of them were found with their hands tied behind their backs.<sup>11458</sup> The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

<sup>11457</sup> The Trial Chamber noticed slight differences in the account of the incident in the evidence of Reif Mehmedović and Sulejman Buljubašić. In particular, it noted differences concerning the exact date of the incident and the composition of the convoy and its route. However, the Trial Chamber does not find these differences to be so considerable as to affect the outcome of its finding.

<sup>11458</sup> In this regard, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Adjudicated Fact 1527, and in particular the reference to the ligatures found on the victims' hands, establishes that the 150 Bosnian-Muslim men were executed and rejects the Defence's argument that the victims may have died in combat or committed suicide. With regard to the other cause of death proposed by the Defence, namely internal ABiH clashes, the Trial Chamber has received no evidence in this regard and is satisfied on the basis of the evidence reviewed, including Buljubašić's evidence, that 'Chetniks' killed the 150 Bosnian-Muslim men.

2685. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of over 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim men in a large warehouse in the village of Kravica on 13 July 1995.<sup>11459</sup> The bodies of the victims were transported to two large mass graves located in the nearby villages of Glogova and Ravnice on 14 July 1995.<sup>11460</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts in relation to this incident. on the afternoon of 13 July 1995.<sup>11500</sup> Witness RM-274 estimated that on the same day and within two hours of his arrival at the warehouse around 2,500 to 3,000 other men arrived at the warehouse and were ordered to sit in the same section of the building as he was sitting. They were so tightly packed that they were almost suffocating.<sup>11501</sup> A number of guards would occasionally go in and out of the warehouse, and the Serb soldiers there wore new, multi-coloured and green camouflage uniforms.<sup>11502</sup> One of the soldiers also wore a blue UN helmet.<sup>11503</sup> The guards ordered the men to surrender any money, jewellery, or other valuables and told the men that the items would eventually be returned.<sup>11504</sup> When the guards brought in a bucket of water, a fight to get it almost broke out among the exhausted men.<sup>11505</sup> At one point, a frightened man ran outside and the guards killed him in front of the entrance. They told the men that if anyone else tried to escape, he would be shot just like this man.<sup>11506</sup> Shortly thereafter, the Serb soldiers became agitated and angry, and the witness heard shooting outside from tanks, automatic rifles, and other weapons, as well as hand grenade detonations.<sup>11507</sup>

2689. Witness RM-254 testified that he was brought to the warehouse by five or six Serb soldiers with automatic rifles, wearing olive-drab uniforms and red arm bands with the word 'Yugoslavia' on them.<sup>11510</sup> They cursed the witness's 'balija mother', and asked where Naser Orić was now to defend them. the witness was ordered to stay outside.<sup>11511</sup> Ten detainees were already in front of the warehouse and the ‘Chetniks’ kept bringing new groups of captured men.<sup>11512</sup> Serb soldiers in dark green camouflage and black uniforms lined up a group of seven to ten men in plain clothes and executed them with automatic rifles.<sup>11513</sup> A 15 or 16-year-old boy called Nermin Nukić was shot in the legs by a Serb soldier wearing a black uniform.<sup>11514</sup> One of the soldiers said that Nukić required help and first aid, and he was carried behind the warehouse by two soldiers. The witness kept quiet pretending to be dead, and the soldier left.<sup>11529</sup>

After a minute, the soldier went back into the cornfield.<sup>11530</sup> While lying under the window he heard more men being shot and soldiers saying of the wounded, 'This one seems to be still alive. Burnt-hands incident

2696. Milenko Pepić testified that after he received the order to stop the traffic, he heard gunfire and bomb detonations coming from the direction of Kravica Warehouse lasting around an hour, with the gunfire having been louder, stronger, and more frequent than the shooting he heard from the woods earlier that day.<sup>11561</sup> The witness added that the sound of gunfire appeared to be one-sided, without any return fire.<sup>11562</sup> The witness later heard Čturić say, over the communications system, possibly to Borovčanin, that a member of the 3rd Skelani Platoon with the first name Krsto, a.k.a. Krle, had been killed.<sup>11563</sup> Ten minutes later, Čturić drove to the bridge and told the witness that the Muslims had snatched Krle's rifle from him and killed him with it, and that at that moment, the Muslims were being fired at.<sup>11564</sup> Čturić, who had grabbed the gun by the barrel, had his burnt hands in bandages and was on his way to the infirmary.<sup>11565</sup> Nedo Jovičić testified that on 13 July 1995, on his way from Sandići to Konjević Polje with Ljubiša Borovčanin, the latter received a call from Mišo Stupar requesting that they come immediately to Kravica Warehouse as one of their members had been killed and another one was wounded.<sup>11566</sup> During a radio exchange on 13 July 1995 at 4:48 p.m., between, inter alios, Ljubiša Borovčanin and an unidentified male referred to as 'Officer', Borovčanin ordered the officer to stop the traffic behind him.<sup>11567</sup> The officer replied that a man named Kovač said he would do it.<sup>11568</sup> At the warehouse, they found the wounded man, called 'Officir', put him in a car and drove him to the Bratunac

One of the armed men firing through the door of the warehouse shot at them. The witness dropped down to avoid being shot at but saw that the two men who were running out of the warehouse were eventually hit by bullets and fell to the ground.<sup>11571</sup> Right after, he drove back to Bratunac and reported the incident to Borovčanin.<sup>11572</sup> Together they then went to the SDS premises and reported the incident to Deronjić asking him to take action.<sup>11573</sup> The following day, on 14 July 1995, the witness accompanied Deronjić to a meeting with Karadžić in Pale.<sup>11574</sup>

2700. Between 14 and 16 July, the bodies of the Bosnian-Muslim men were taken in trucks from the warehouse to be buried at grave sites in Glogova and Ravnice.<sup>11591</sup>

Witness RM-306 testified that on 14 July 1995, workers from the utility company dug out a grave in Glogova with a loader excavator from the Brickworks Bratunac Company.<sup>11592</sup> Later that day, a backhoe excavator arrived and during the following days three more pits were dug out and in total between 400 and 500 bodies, all Muslims, were buried in the graves in Glogova.<sup>11593</sup> On 14 July 1995, members of the Bratunac Brigade participated in the burial of the victims.<sup>11594</sup> A loader of the Rad Utilities Company was used to load the bodies onto the trucks. It was operated by two members of the Bratunac Brigade.<sup>11595</sup> Witness RM-260 stated that the eyes of the workers were bloody and they seemed to be very tired.<sup>11596</sup> The witness recognized the drivers Radomir Djurković and a man named Simić.<sup>11597</sup> He further recognized Dragan Mirković and Momir Nikolić, and he saw 20 to 30 soldiers with automatic rifles.<sup>11598</sup> On 15 July 1995, members of the Engineering Company of the Zvornik Brigade participated in the burial operation at Glogova following the mass executions.<sup>11599</sup>

2701. The Trial Chamber also considered additional evidence of Witness RM-260 on the burial and reburial operations, which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D.

and floors of the building.<sup>11600</sup> Dušan Janc testified that, based on DNA analysis, the victims of this scheduled incident were buried in the primary mass graves of Glogova 1 and 2 and Ravnice 1 and 2.<sup>11601</sup> Bodies from the Glogova 1 and 2 primary mass graves were subsequently reburied in the secondary mass graves of Zeleni Jadar 1A, 1B, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6; Blječeva 1, 2, and 3; Zalazje 1 and 2; and Budak 1 and 2.<sup>11602</sup>

2703. The Glogova 2 gravesite was exhumed by the Prosecution between 11 September and 22 October 1999.<sup>11603</sup> The victims predominantly died of gunshot wounds and in 22 cases there was evidence of charring to the bodies. No ligatures or blindfolds were uncovered.<sup>11604</sup> Exhumations were conducted at Glogova 1 between 7 August and 20 October 2000.<sup>11605</sup> The primary gravesite at Glogova 1 is less than 400 metres from the command post of the 1st Infantry Battalion of the Bratunac Brigade.<sup>11606</sup> Broken masonry, door frames, and other artefacts found at the primary gravesite of Glogova 1 revealed matches with the Kravica Warehouse execution site.<sup>11607</sup> The primary graves in Glogova contained the bodies of victims who had been injured as a result of an explosive blast in the form of grenades and shrapnel.<sup>11608</sup> During the reburial operation, which lasted a couple of nights, the members of the Civilian Protection unit used at least one loader and an excavator for the exhumations at the Glogova grave site.<sup>11609</sup> According to a report authored by John Clark, many shell cases as well as three very small samples of human remains were recovered from Kravica Warehouse during the Glogova grave sites exhumations but the examination of these samples was inconclusive.<sup>11610</sup>

2704. According to a report authored by forensic pathologist John Clark, 478 bodies or body parts were exhumed from three primary mass graves in 2000, namely Glogova 1,

The Trial Chamber's findings

2706. The Trial Chamber notes that Janc found that one of the secondary mass graves connected to this scheduled incident, Blječeva 1, also contained remains of bodies unconnected with the fall of Srebrenica.<sup>11622</sup> In addition, Janc found that one of the primary mass graves, Glogova 1, also contained the remains of victims unconnected with the fall of Srebrenica as well as from victims related to other alleged killing incidents.<sup>11623</sup> Janc further testified that although most of the 1,385 individuals identified in the primary and secondary mass graves connected to Kravica Warehouse must be directly connected to this scheduled incident, it is impossible to provide the exact number of victims.<sup>11624</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber received forensic evidence from Clark, Baraybar, Lawrence, as well as documentary evidence concerning bodies exhumed from some of the primary and secondary mass graves related to the killings at Kravica Warehouse. The evidence received relates to the following mass graves: Glogova 2-9, Blječeva 1, as well as Zeleni Jadar 5 and 6.<sup>11625</sup> The Trial Chamber however considers that none of the aforementioned forensic evidence provides further specificity to the number of victims as found in Adjudicated Fact 1534 and will therefore not consider this evidence further.

2707. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that from 13 to 14 July 1995, members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, killed approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim males, including minors and elderly, who were detained in Kravica Warehouse. Based on the evidence received by Momir Nikolić and Blagojević, as well as Adjudicated Fact 1539 which specifies that members of the Bratunac Brigade participated in the burial operation (see chapter 7.18), the Trial Chamber finds that at least three members of the Bratunac Brigade were involved in the killings at the warehouse. Some of the detainees wore civilian clothing, while others were members of the ABiH; all were unarmed. Before the beginning of the killings inside the warehouse, members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade executed some detainees in front of the warehouse and told the others ‘you’ll get the same as soon as it’s your turn, because we still have a full warehouse to kill’. Once the warehouse was full, hand grenades and anti-tank rockets were fired into the warehouse and shots were fired into the crowd of detainees. Krsto Dragičević, a member of the 3rd Skelani Platoon, was killed in the warehouse with his own rifle after some Muslim detainees had snatched his rifle from him. Rade Čuturić, Commander of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, who had grabbed the rifle by the barrel, burned his hands during this incident. Members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade killed detainees who survived the shootings, including those who tried to escape from the warehouse. After shooting a detainee who tried to escape, members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade warned the other detainees that if they tried to escape they would also be shot. One member of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade fired at a wounded detainee, asking, ‘[d]o you want another one?’ and another member of the detachment who was examining other wounded men said, ‘[t]his one seems to be still alive. He needs to be shot.’, whereupon another member of the detachment responded, ‘[n]o, let’s leave those alone for the time being and focus on those inside’. Members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade also insulted and cursed the detainees prior to and after the killings and referred to them as ‘balijas’, ‘Islamic tribe’ and ‘Turks’. The detainees were forced to sing Serb songs and asked where Naser Orić was to defend them.

2708. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.5 Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1)

2709. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the summary execution of approximately 15 Bosnian Muslims detained at Sandići Meadow on 13 July 1995, after sunset.<sup>11626</sup> In relation to the evidence on the exhumation of bodies from a grave near Sandići Meadow, the Defence argued that no reliable evidence links these bodies to this incident nor establishes the cause or manner of death.<sup>11627</sup> The Defence further argued that MUP personnel were the only units present around Sandići Meadow at the time and that the Jahorina Units were not deployed in combat activities at the time of the alleged killings; MUP tasks were from the MUP structure, thus ‘without VRS contact’.<sup>11628</sup> With regard to the Defence’s argument that Witnesses RM-333 and RM-358 gave irreconcilable versions of the events in Sandići which undermine each other, the Trial Chamber recalls its 18 July 2013 decision in which it determined, inter alia, that Witness RM-358 is a survivor of an unscheduled killing incident in Nezuk in July of 1995.<sup>11629</sup> Therefore, since Witness RM-358’s evidence relates to another incident, the Trial Chamber considers that his evidence does not undermine Witness RM-333’s evidence on the Sandići Meadow events. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts related to this charge.<sup>11630</sup> It also received evidence from Ramiz Husić, a Muslim from Brezovica who moved to Srebrenica in 1993 and who was 18 years old in July 1995;<sup>11631</sup> Witness RM-297, a Bosnian Muslim from Zvornik;<sup>11632</sup> Witness RM-306, a Serb from Bratunac;<sup>11633</sup> Witness RM-260, a member of the Civilian Protection staff in Bratunac Municipality in July 1995;<sup>11634</sup> Zoran Petrović, a journalist from Belgrade who travelled the area around Bratunac with Borovčanin from 13 to 15 July 1995;<sup>11635</sup> Witness RM-274, a member of the ABiH in July 1995;<sup>11636</sup> Witness RM-256, a Bosnian Muslim from Srebrenica and member of units.<sup>11658</sup> Ramiz Husić stated that there were two Serb women wearing uniforms and armed with Skorpion pistols.<sup>11659</sup> Mladen Blagojević testified that VRS soldiers as well as, what he believed to be, special police units guarded the Muslim detainees. He stated that their commander was 'Ljubisa Boroc'.<sup>11660</sup>

2712. The soldiers guarding the men forced them to turn over their valuables and abandon their belongings.<sup>11661</sup> Witness RM-257 stated that Serb soldiers searched the men, asked them for money, and asked about the positions and weapons in possession of the ABiH.<sup>11662</sup> The men were forced to lie on their stomachs for long periods of time, to make the Serb salute, and to sing Serbian songs, such as 'Long live the king, long live Serbia'.<sup>11663</sup> One man was made to call out to the Bosnian-Muslim men in the column that it was 'safe to come to the Serbs'.<sup>11664</sup>

2713. While the detainees were in the meadow they were given very little food and some water.<sup>11665</sup> Witness RM-274 described how people kept fainting from the heat and the guards sent people to get water to cool them down.<sup>11666</sup> He stated that he was next to a tank. The driver of the tank kept going in and out of it and other soldiers were sitting on and around the tank.<sup>11667</sup> Witness RM-257 stated that a Serb soldier sitting on the tank said: 'Fuck your balija mother. on the tank hit the man in his face and the man fell down on his back about ten metres from the witness. Another group of soldiers arrived, wearing black uniforms with pants and T-shirts, and boots. One of those soldiers took an automatic rifle, stood over the man on the ground, and fired into his chest. He then ordered Muslims to carry that man about 20 to 30 metres away and drop his body there, which they did.<sup>11669</sup> Witness RM-256 testified that one detainee complained that he did not get any water while others had the opportunity to drink twice. One soldier kicked him in the face on one side and another one gave him a kick in the face from the other side. The man started to bleed from the mouth. The soldiers grabbed him, threw him a few metres away, and shot him in front of all of the detainees. The corpse was left there right at the spot where he was killed.<sup>11670</sup>

2715. The Bosnian-Serb forces on the scene began shepherding the men out of the meadow. Some were put on buses or marched towards the nearby Kravica Warehouse. Others were loaded on buses and trucks and taken to Bratunac and other nearby locations.<sup>11677</sup> Witness RM-297 testified that the commander of the unit guarding the men who had surrendered wore a black scarf on his head and informed them that Mladić had said that the Bosnian and Bosnian-Serb governments were discussing an exchange of all detainees. The soldiers told the group that they were in Serb country and that no one could fight the Serb soldiers.<sup>11678</sup> Witness RM-274 also stated that the only people allowed to leave the meadow were children younger than 18 years old and women.<sup>11679</sup> Husić stated that at the meadow, he heard a Serb soldier who said that he was from Tuzla and dressed in camouflage with a red bandana around his head, call out for detainees born in 1979 and 1980.<sup>11680</sup> Husić stood up despite being older and was allowed, along with approximately ten other individuals, to board a civilian blue truck which already contained approximately 20 women from Potočari.<sup>11681</sup> After disembarking the truck in Tišča, Husić was instructed to walk towards Kladanj, whereupon he reached the last checkpoint.<sup>11682</sup> At the checkpoint, a man who introduced himself as Željko Živkić, and who the witness described as the commander, allowed Husić to go to Muslim-controlled territory.<sup>11683</sup> Witness RM-274 stated that the women and children were taken to Tuzla by a convoy of buses and trucks which had also evacuated civilians from Potočari.<sup>11684</sup> In addition to the earlier convoy, UN APCs escorted women and children from Potočari on buses and trucks towards Tuzla.<sup>11685</sup> told the group that they were going to be detained in an agricultural warehouse in Kravica and then exchanged. The Serb soldier mentioned that Mladić and the DK Commander would arrive at 8 p.m. to inform the group about what would happen to them. There were approximately 15 to 20 armed Serb soldiers in the area.<sup>11687</sup> Husić observed a soldier called Krle wearing a camouflage T-shirt grab and take Dulan Tabaković, who had a head injury, to a cornfield.<sup>11688</sup> After approximately 20 minutes, Krle returned without Dulan.<sup>11689</sup> During the course of the day those who were wounded or injured were sent to a house close to the meadow and were later executed.<sup>11690</sup>

2717. Witness RM-297 stated that at approximately 7 p.m. on 13 July 1995, the detainees were allowed to sit up just before a man, whom other detainees referred to as and the witness later recognized to be Mladić, arrived on foot.<sup>11691</sup> Witness RM-256 testified that Mladić appeared at the meadow together with four or five soldiers and introduced himself.<sup>11692</sup> Pero Andrić testified that these soldiers were military policemen and that Mladić stopped at the meadow for approximately 20 minutes.<sup>11693</sup> Witness RM-256 testified that he heard Mladić, who was standing 15 metres from the body of a detainee who had been killed, say the following:<sup>11694</sup>

2718. According to Witness RM-297, Mladić told the detainees that the governments were negotiating; they would be exchanged the following day; and they would not be given anything to eat that evening, but would be provided with water, which they were.<sup>11696</sup> Blagojević testified that Mladić told them not to be afraid, as they would be exchanged for imprisoned Serbs, and he asked them if they needed to see a doctor.<sup>11697</sup> Witness RM-297 testified that after Mladić left, trucks and buses arrived and the detainees were ordered to board these vehicles.<sup>11698</sup> While being loaded onto the trucks, the witness and his brother were separated and the witness later learned that some of his brother's remains had since been identified.<sup>11699</sup> The trucks took the detainees to Bratunac.<sup>11700</sup>

2720. Witness RM-333 testified that around 13 July 1995, around late afternoon or early evening, a member of the 1st company of the Jahorina police training centre told him that 10 to 15 detainees were awaiting transport in a meadow by the road between Konjević Polje and Kravica, a couple of kilometres away from Kravica, where the company had been deployed in the late afternoon on the same day.<sup>11705</sup> A man called

Aleksa told four or five members of the company that no more buses were coming to pick up the detainees and ordered them to shoot the remaining detainees.<sup>11706</sup> Aleksa was the deputy of Goran, one of four platoon commanders from the Jahorina training centre.<sup>11707</sup> Three members of the company refused to obey the order and were punished with deprivation of food and contact with other members for one day.<sup>11708</sup> Two members of the company, one named Crnogorac, obeyed the order and went up the road in the direction of the detainees, with three or four men who volunteered for the task.<sup>11709</sup> One member of the company who had refused to comply with the order heard bursts of gunshots and then saw the volunteers return with Aleksa.<sup>11710</sup> When that member asked Crnogorac how he could have shot detainees, he replied that it was revenge for his family having 'been wiped out'.<sup>11711</sup> Crnogorac also informed him that some of the detainees had been shot in the head while others had been executed with a burst of fire.<sup>11712</sup> According to the witness, somebody higher-ranked must have ordered the shooting because Aleksa was a low-level member of the company who would not risk carrying out an execution without authorisation.<sup>11713</sup> Aleksa, like other members of the company in charge of small units, had a two-way radio.<sup>11714</sup>

2721. Dušan Janc testified that bodies were exhumed from a primary mass grave in the Sandići Meadow area between 14 and 21 June 2004 and DNA examinations identified 17 individuals.<sup>11715</sup>

2722. With regard to the forensic evidence, and in particular the reports authored by Janc, in evidence as exhibits P1982 and P1987, the Trial Chamber notes that these exhibits refer to the discovery of a mass grave located in the Sandići Meadow area and containing 17 bodies. It further notes that the number of bodies exhumed from this mass grave is close to the number of bodies Witness RM-333 and Momir Nikolić testified having seen in the Sandići Meadow on 13 July 1995. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber considers it very likely that this forensic evidence relates to Scheduled Incident E.4.1. However, in the absence of specific evidence to establish that the bodies heard about and seen by Witness RM-333 and Momir Nikolić were the ones exhumed from the mass grave located in the Sandići Meadow area, and considering the number of killing incidents that occurred in this area around that time, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the remains identified in the mass grave are those of the bodies mentioned by Witness RM-333 and Nikolić. The Trial Chamber will therefore not rely on the above-mentioned forensic evidence to make its finding on the number of victims of this scheduled incident.

2723. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 13 July 1995,<sup>11716</sup> members of the 1st company of the Jahorina police training centre shot and killed 10-15 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men<sup>11717</sup> who had surrendered from the column near Sandići Meadow. They were killed pursuant to the order of a man called Aleksa. The Trial Chamber further finds that a Serb soldier, wearing a black uniform, shot and killed one wounded Bosnian-Muslim man on the same day after he had allegedly attempted to escape. While the men were in the meadow after having surrendered, guarded by VRS soldiers, they were forced to lie on their stomachs, make the Serb salute, and sing Serbian songs. Further, the soldiers guarding them forced them to give up their valuables and abandon their belongings. One of the soldiers present at the meadow also insulted the men, using derogatory terms: ‘Fuck your balija mother. Get up and come here’. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

<sup>11716</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the account of the events given by Witness RM-333 and Momir Nikolić are slightly different. Witness RM-333 testified that 10 to 15 detainees were killed in the late afternoon or early evening of 13 July 1995 after the departure of the other detainees. Nikolić testified that he saw 10 to 15 bodies in the meadow in the afternoon and a large number of detainees. However, the Trial Chamber notes that both witnesses testified about killings which occurred on the same date and which resulted in the same range of victims. The Trial Chamber further notes that Witness RM-333 was not an eye witness to the killings and that his evidence does not provide a clear and unambiguous timeframe. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the differences in their respective accounts of the events are minimal and immaterial.

7.6 Luke School near Tišća (Schedule E.5.1)

2724. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the detention of 25 Bosnian-Muslim men at Luke School and the summary execution of them in an isolated nearby pasture on or about 13 or 14 July 1995.<sup>11718</sup> The Defence submitted that Witness RM-249's evidence is unreliable and uncorroborated and that there is insufficient evidence to conclude that the perpetrators of this alleged incident were members of the VRS, but rather were individuals acting without authority and as revenge against Muslims for acts committed against Serbs.<sup>11719</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts related to this incident. It also received evidence from Witness RM-249, a Bosnian-Muslim from Srebrenica,<sup>11720</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>11721</sup> It also received evidence from Dušan Janc, an investigator.<sup>11722</sup>

2725. On 13 and 14 July 1995, as buses crowded with Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly made their way from Potočari to Kladanj, they were stopped at Tišća, searched, and the Bosnian-Muslim men found on board were removed from the bus.<sup>11723</sup> Bosnian-Serb forces systematically stopped the buses transporting the women, children, and elderly at Tišća and checked that no men were hiding on board.<sup>11724</sup> The Bosnian-Muslim men who managed to get to Luke by bus were separated by VRS soldiers and detained in the nearby elementary school.<sup>11725</sup> DK personnel were present in Tišća on 12 July 1995. A DutchBat officer escorting one of the first convoys of buses and trucks came across Major Sarkić, the Chief of Staff of the Milići Brigade, at the Tišća checkpoint.<sup>11726</sup> The Chief of Staff of the Milići Brigade and troops from his unit were present at the Tišća screening site upon orders from the DK Command.<sup>11727</sup> General Krstić had been involved in issuing orders to DK units about securing the stretch of the road from Vlasenica up toward Tišća, where the civilians were disembarking.<sup>11728</sup>

<sup>11717</sup> Regarding the detainees identified by Witness RM-257 as being present in the meadow and never seen or heard of again since, in the absence of further information about their whereabouts, the Trial Chamber finds that it cannot consider that they were killed in the meadow.

2726. Witness RM-249 testified that on 13 July 1995 after disembarking the bus in Luke he was instructed by a ‘Chetnik’ soldier to hand his daughter to his wife; the same soldier then proceeded to escort the witness to a school that was approximately 250 metres away from the bus.<sup>11729</sup> His hands were tied and he had to sit in a meadow in front of the school where he could see additional buses and trucks arriving to drop off detainees throughout the day.<sup>11730</sup> By dusk, 22 men, dressed in civilian clothing, were separated from their families and brought to the school.<sup>11731</sup> The witness recalled a ‘Chetnik’ soldier nicknamed ‘Zeljko’ receiving calls at the telephone on the school steps.<sup>11732</sup> The soldiers carried automatic weapons and wore three different types of uniforms: a camouflage uniform, another uniform of a higher quality, and a third uniform of poor quality.<sup>11733</sup> He was further able to identify some of the Serb soldiers present: Savo Ristanović, a.k.a. Žučo;<sup>11734</sup> and a soldier named ‘Stanimir’ from Vlasenica.<sup>11735</sup> The witness recalled the names of several of his fellow detainees: ‘Abdul Kadir’, a medical technician from the war hospital;<sup>11736</sup> ‘Hasan’, a medical technician from Đogazi who had worked in a lab in Srebrenica;<sup>11737</sup> ‘Zajko’ from Jagonija; brothers ‘Fuad’ and ‘Alija’ who were wounded;<sup>11738</sup> Rizo Mustafić, an electrician who worked for DutchBat in Potočari; Azem Bečić, who had been wounded in a forest near Srebrenica;<sup>11739</sup> and ‘Hamed’ from Višegrad.<sup>11740</sup>

threatened.<sup>11741</sup> The detainees were put into an empty classroom and ordered to all sit in one corner.<sup>11742</sup> The witness saw an UNPROFOR jeep arrive but instead of UNPROFOR personnel driving the vehicle, a 'Chetnik' soldier got out of the vehicle.<sup>11743</sup> A Serb soldier called Stanimir told the witness that Spomenko Garić, who was the commander of a special intervention platoon and whom the witness knew to be a member of the reserve forces prior to the war, was in Kravica that day and was expected to arrive at the Luke School.<sup>11744</sup> About 30 minutes later, Garić arrived with his men. Ten to fifteen of Garić's men entered the classroom. The men wore bandannas on their heads, carried grenades on their belts, and their clothes smelled like blood. These men were asked by a 'Chetnik' soldier who guarded the door to the classroom what had happened in Kravica that day. They answered that the 'balijas' had been defeated. One of the soldiers mentioned that he had cut off the head of one 'balija' and that this man remained alive without a head for an unspecified period of time. Then 'Garić's men' started harassing and beating the detainees, including the witness until he lost consciousness. After the beatings, another soldier who guarded the school during the day entered the room and said that 'it was time', following which Garić's men left.<sup>11745</sup>

2729. The truck departed and drove for approximately 40 minutes in the direction of Vlasenica, and eventually stopped about 100 metres off the road in an area with a pasture.<sup>11748</sup> The 'Chetnik' soldiers got off the truck, pulled out the men who were lying on the floor of the truck, and shot them while they were on the ground. Two detainees with their hands tied behind their backs attempted to escape and were killed immediately. The witness managed to sever the material binding his hands, which he believed to have been telephone cables, jumped off the truck, and ran away from the soldiers while under constant fire. Exhausted from running, he hid behind a rock and remained there until dawn. After taking refuge behind the rock, he heard shooting from the pasture for approximately ten minutes and concluded that the 'Chetniks' must have killed the other men who had been on the truck with him.<sup>11749</sup> On 27 July 1995, the witness was taken by the ICRC to Kladanj.<sup>11750</sup>

2730. According to a report authored by Janc, the remains of 16 bodies, including Azem Bečić, Rizo Mustafić, Abdulkadir Kadić, Hasan Smajić, Fuad Mustafić, and Alija Mustafić, identified by Witness RM-249 as fellow detainees at Luke School,<sup>11751</sup> and nine ligatures, were found in a mass grave in Mršići near Vlasenica between 25 and 29 May 2009.<sup>11752</sup>

2731. With respect to the Defence submission on the reliability of Witness RM-249's evidence, the Trial Chamber considered that he provided a detailed account of this killing incident and that his evidence is internally consistent and is corroborated by Janc's report on this incident. The Trial Chamber thus finds that Witness RM-249's evidence is reliable.

2732. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 July 1995, approximately 21 Bosnian-Muslim men dressed in civilian clothes, whose hands had been tied, were shot and killed in an isolated pasture near Luke School. After one of the soldiers who was guarding the detainees at the school before the killing stated that 'it was time', the detainees were loaded onto a truck and driven to a pasture. In the truck, a man identified as a 'commander' stated that it was time to 'make up' for what happened to him while he was detained by the ABiH. With regard to the perpetrators, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Facts 1560-1562 and 1564 on the units present in the Tišća area and at Luke School during the days immediately leading up to this incident. Based on this, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of this incident

2733. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of two Bosnian-Muslim prisoners who were detained at the school in Orahovac on or about 14 July 1995.<sup>11753</sup> The two prisoners were removed from the school and summarily executed by rifle fire.<sup>11754</sup> The Accused is also responsible for the killing of approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim detainees which began in the afternoon of 14 July 1995.<sup>11755</sup> The men were blindfolded, transported to a nearby field by truck, and summarily executed on that field. The bodies of the victims were buried in mass graves at the execution site on 14 and 15 July 1995.<sup>11756</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts related to these incidents. 2734. Members of the Zvornik Brigade participated in the detention, execution, and burial of Bosnian-Muslim men at Grbavci School and nearby field in Orahovac.<sup>11778</sup> Personnel from the 4th Battalion of the brigade were present at Orahovac during the executions, assisting in their commission.<sup>11779</sup> Members of the Military Police Company of the brigade were present immediately prior to the executions, presumably for such purposes as guarding the prisoners and then facilitating their transportation to the execution fields.<sup>11780</sup> Soldiers from the Zvornik Brigade Command and the 4th Battalion of the brigade assisted in guarding the prisoners at Grbavci School in Orahovac.<sup>11781</sup> Members of the Zvornik Brigade Military Police assisted in the detention of prisoners, with the approval of Dragan Obrenović, the Deputy Commander of the Zvornik Brigade, who knew of the murder operation at the time when he allowed the Military Police members to assist Drago Nikolić, the Chief of Security of the Zvornik Brigade, who was in charge of the detention of the Bosnian-Muslim men in Orahovac.<sup>11782</sup>

Transport to and detention at Grbavci School in Orahovac

2735. Witness RM-265 stated that in the morning of 13 or 14 July 1995, Colonel Popović ordered Mirko Janković, a member of the VRS Bratunac Brigade, to take an APC to an intersection near the bus station in Zvornik.<sup>11783</sup> Mile Petrović and Nikola Popović, who was a military police officer, were also in the APC.<sup>11784</sup> Later, Janković drove the APC to a turning point in front of the headquarters of the Bratunac Brigade, following which a column of trucks and buses started forming behind the APC.<sup>11785</sup> One VRS soldier was onboard each bus. The trucks and buses were boarded by able-bodied Muslim men from the surrounding school buildings.<sup>11786</sup> Colonel Popović then appeared in a civilian car and led the column to Grbavci School in Orahovac, where the Muslim men disembarked and moved to the school gym.<sup>11787</sup> Milorad Birčaković stated that in the morning of 14 July 1995, on orders from Milorad Trbić, he drove Drago Nikolić from Jerkici to Karakaj for a meeting with Ljubisa Beara, who was the Chief of Security of the VRS Main Staff, and Vijudin Popović, who was the Chief of Security of the DK.<sup>11788</sup> He then drove Nikolić to the Vidikovac hotel, where the witness saw approximately five to ten buses arriving between 8:30 and 9 a.m.<sup>11789</sup> According to the witness, the buses carried security guards and Muslim male detainees.<sup>11790</sup> The witness entered the first bus and Nikolić took the car.<sup>11791</sup> The buses went to the primary school in Orahovac where approximately 200 detainees were moved into the school gym.<sup>11792</sup> At approximately 11 a.m., Nikolić arrived at the school.<sup>11793</sup> Trbić was also present.<sup>11794</sup> Lazar Ristić stated that he saw Commander Jasikovac near the Orahovac school gym.<sup>11795</sup> He also saw Trbić, Čedo Jović, and Goran Bogdanović approximately 50 metres from the school.<sup>11796</sup> Witness RM-269 testified that he saw approximately a dozen civilian buses arriving at the school, escorted by civilian police in blue uniforms, and between 700 and 800 detainees exiting the buses and entering the school gym.<sup>11797</sup> The witness's duties at the time were to secure the facility and to ensure that the crowd could not get to the detainees.<sup>11798</sup> Approximately 100 locals who had gathered near the school were aggressive towards the detainees, and one of these locals told the witness that all of the detainees should be killed.<sup>11799</sup> Stanoje Birčaković stated that detainees were transported to the Orahovac school in a convoy of around 15 to 20 buses led by a

UN APC.<sup>11800</sup> There were no UN soldiers in the APC.<sup>11801</sup> The detainees were men between the ages of 20 and 60, many wearing civilian clothing and some wearing military uniforms.<sup>11802</sup> Dragoje Ivanović stated that approximately 350 civilians arrived at Orahovac school in buses escorted by several UN vehicles and one or two military jeeps. The civilians were accompanied by VRS soldiers and were brought into the school gym.<sup>11803</sup>

2736. Mevludin Orić stated that on 14 July 1995, he and other detainees were transported by bus from Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac to a school in a hamlet in the direction of Karakaj-Kalesija.<sup>11804</sup> Upon arrival, the people on the bus were ordered to run across a concrete football pitch towards the school, while soldiers lined either side of the pitch.<sup>11805</sup> Witness RM-297 testified that he and other detainees were transported on trucks from Sandići Meadow to the gym of Grbavci School in Orahovac, which was a five-to-ten-minute drive from Karakaj.<sup>11806</sup> The detainees were ordered to disembark and place their clothes, other than the shirts and trousers they were wearing, on a large pile just before entering the gym.<sup>11807</sup> estimated that there were about 2,500 people in the gym.<sup>11812</sup> They were not given any water or food.<sup>11813</sup> Orić estimated that there were around 2,000 people, including at least four boys, crammed into the gym, with many suffering from heat exhaustion and thirst. Many, especially the elderly, fainted and were left without medical attention or food. The detainees were forced to sit with their knees touching their chins, which made it difficult to breathe. The four boys were allowed to carry buckets of water to the people in the gym, but there was not enough water for everyone.<sup>11814</sup> Ristić stated that he saw Military Police Officer Nada Stojanović carrying water to the detainees.<sup>11815</sup>

saying that he was suffocating and did not want to stay there any longer, and asking why the soldiers were ‘torturing’ him. The soldiers told him to come out and ‘cool off a bit’.<sup>11821</sup> After the man went through the entrance of the gym, the witness heard a burst of gunfire, and the man never returned.<sup>11822</sup> Witness RM-362 stated that no other detainees left the gym.<sup>11823</sup> According to Witness RM-297, after the killing of the first detainee, the guards took another detainee out for reasons unknown to the witness, and the witness again heard gunshots and then silence. The detainee did not return.<sup>11824</sup>

2739. With respect to the alleged further killings of detainees from Grbavci School in nearby fields, Orić stated that while he was detained at the school, a man whom the witness identified as the commander informed the detainees that they would be transferred to Batković camp.<sup>11825</sup> The commander directed them into a locker room.<sup>11826</sup> A man the witness identified as Mezir Gusić, whom the witness knew as a native from Križevci in Srebrenica Municipality, was crying as he blindfolded the people in the locker room area.<sup>11827</sup> The witness asked Gusić where they would be taken, to which Gusić replied that he did not know.<sup>11828</sup> While the detainees were blindfolded, they spoke among themselves, wondering whether they would indeed be exchanged, or killed.<sup>11829</sup> The witness’s blindfold was loosely fitted and he could see below it. He could also hear what was happening in the vicinity.<sup>11830</sup> From the locker room which had an exit leading outside, 12 or 13 people at a time were placed onto trucks that had arrived at the school.<sup>11831</sup> The witness listed the following people, including his relatives and neighbours, as being close to him in the truck he was placed in: Nurif Hodžić, Ehrem Hasanović, Haris Hasanović, Hakija Malić, and Eso or Esad Malić.<sup>11832</sup> Witness RM-297 testified that some of the detainees asked where they were being taken to which guards responded that they were being taken to a camp in Bijeljina. One of the soldiers wore a red beret with a badge on the front with four S's.<sup>11833</sup> Once on the trucks, the detainees could remove their blindfolds.<sup>11834</sup>

2740. Witness RM-269 testified that a truck arrived and military policemen and soldiers loaded the detainees, who had their hands tied, on the truck.<sup>11835</sup> The truck then drove in the direction of Tuzla. It returned empty shortly afterwards and once again detainees were loaded onto the truck and driven away; this went on until the school gym was emptied. The witness could hear bursts of fire from the direction where the detainees were taken.<sup>11836</sup> There were a couple of soldiers in uniform and one or two military police officers from the Zvornik Brigade accompanying the truck. They recharged ammunition when returning to the school and the witness heard some of them saying that the detainees had been killed.<sup>11837</sup> Stanoje Birčaković stated that, from the yards of the surrounding houses approximately 100 metres away from the school, he saw how the detainees were loaded onto trucks and driven away, and this continued throughout the day.<sup>11838</sup> Apart from the normal firing going on around them, he heard a particular pattern of shooting throughout the day in intervals of 15 to 20 minutes which continued until dusk, leaving him to think that the detainees might not have been exchanged but executed.<sup>11839</sup> On the following day, he learned that the detainees had probably been killed.<sup>11840</sup> Milorad Birčaković stated that he saw the detainees, whose hands were tied, being loaded into 'TAM' trucks.<sup>11841</sup> Later, they were blindfolded.<sup>11842</sup> He then saw two 'TAM' trucks each taking approximately 20 to 30 detainees towards

Križevići along a dirt road.<sup>11843</sup> The witness recognised one of the drivers as a member of the 4th Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>11844</sup> The trucks passed a water point and then made a left turn towards the railway tracks.<sup>11845</sup> The total number of trips made by the trucks was between six and nine. The witness partially escorted four to six such trips on the order of Miodir Jasikovac.<sup>11846</sup> Ivanović also saw that around five military trucks repeatedly took up civilians from the school building and drove them towards the separation line.<sup>11847</sup> After returning to their military barracks, Jasikovac told Ivanović and the other soldiers that some of the civilians had been exchanged while others had been liquidated.<sup>11848</sup>

2741. Orić stated that at one point while he was on the truck he lifted his blindfold to take a cigarette offered by one of his relatives and could see a red car following the truck he was in; a Serb soldier, who was looking through the window of the car and holding a rifle, told him to put his blindfold back on.<sup>11849</sup> The truck arrived at its destination within five minutes, which led the witness to believe that they were not being taken to Bijeljina since that would have taken longer.<sup>11850</sup> The Serb soldiers ordered the witness and the other people on the truck to jump out onto a meadow and line up, and then summarily shot them.<sup>11851</sup> All of the people in the witness's group were killed but the witness threw himself to the ground after one of his relatives was shot; he pretended to be dead and his relative died on top of him.<sup>11852</sup> The witness heard trucks arriving every five minutes and he believed they were loaded with people on the basis that he could hear people being lined up or pleading not to be killed as they were taken off the trucks, and were killed in the same manner.<sup>11853</sup> The soldiers were killing those who were only wounded by the initial shots, sometimes saying ‘suffer some more, you Ustaša’ or, ‘you Muslim’.<sup>11854</sup> Throughout the killings, the soldiers were referring to the men as ‘Turks’ and said ‘fuck [their] Turk mothers’ and that they ‘were best off dead’.<sup>11855</sup> The witness clarified that he heard killings lasting at least one hour until he fainted in the afternoon.<sup>11856</sup> During the killings, the witness heard what he thought were big machines working nearby.<sup>11857</sup> When the witness regained consciousness it had gone dark and the killings were still occurring for a further hour until someone said that they had finished and that the next day the bodies would be thrown into the grave. The big machines turned their engines off as the soldiers left.<sup>11858</sup> Following the executions, the soldiers referred to the dead using derogatory terms and said, ‘[f]uck them. They’re all dead. There’s no need for us to stay’.<sup>11859</sup>

2742. Witness RM-297, who also survived the shooting, stated that, following the shooting of the detainees in his group, he fell to the ground and was covered by the bodies of others. After everyone had fallen, they were shot at again, but the witness sustained only a minor injury. One of the men was begging the soldiers to kill him and a soldier answered ‘slowly, slowly’.<sup>11860</sup> About ten minutes later, another truck arrived and the process was repeated until sometime in the evening when the witness concluded that the site of the executions had been changed because he could no longer hear trucks arriving, but continued to hear gunshots from approximately 300 metres away from an area the witness later discovered was on the other side of the railroad tracks.<sup>11861</sup> The witness eventually managed to take off his blindfold and saw a yellow backhoe and a group of seven to eight soldiers in camouflage uniforms who the witness concluded had done the shooting.<sup>11862</sup> Among these soldiers the witness recognized Gojko Simić who was from the village of Orahovac in the area where the shootings happened.<sup>11863</sup> The witness overheard the soldiers talking about changing the location of the executions to a mowed meadow. Simić ordered three of the soldiers to stay with the backhoe and the others to take ammunition to the meadow.<sup>11864</sup> Richard Butler testified that an eyewitness recalled hearing some of the soldiers refer to each other as Risto and Vojo.<sup>11865</sup>

Orahovac.<sup>11885</sup> Zvornik Brigade vehicle utilisation records also show that, on 15 and 16 July, one ‘ULT 220’ (loader) was operating for five hours at Orahovac and a ‘TAM 75’ truck made three or four trips between the base and Orahovac. Also on 15 July, 40 litres of diesel fuel were disbursed to the Rear Services Battalion, operating out of Orahovac and, on 16 July, a Mercedes truck towed an excavator with a trailer between the base and Orahovac, and a ‘TAM 75’ truck made two trips to Kozluk.<sup>11886</sup> Cvijetin Ristanović specified that sometime before noon on 14 July 1995, the chief of engineers, Major Dragan Jokić ordered him to take an excavator and go to a location near the school in Orahovac.<sup>11887</sup> The witness went to the school and continued from there for approximately another kilometre and reached a water point on the road between Orahovac and Križevići, where he stopped.<sup>11888</sup> Slavko Bogičević, a member of the command staff of the Engineering Unit, then asked him to drive the excavator through the nearby underpass beneath the Živinice-Zvornik railroad.<sup>11889</sup> The witness complied with this instruction. Having reached the other side of the underpass, the witness encountered a meadow with a forest behind it. On the meadow, he saw a number of civilians and soldiers.<sup>11890</sup> Bogičević then instructed the witness to dig approximately one and a half to two metres deep in an area that had been marked with four wooden stakes and that measured approximately two to three metres wide and approximately 15 metres long.<sup>11891</sup> The witness followed this instruction.<sup>11892</sup> After the witness had been digging for a while, he was asked by an unknown person to stop, go back towards the underpass at the railroad, and wait there with his back towards the excavation site.<sup>11893</sup> The witness walked accordingly to the rail tracks. When standing near the railroad, he heard a truck approaching.<sup>11894</sup> After a short while, he heard shouts of ‘[g]et out!’ followed by bursts of gunfire.<sup>11895</sup> After this incident, an unknown individual approached the witness and told him to go back and continue with his work. 2747. The Trial Chamber received evidence from forensic anthropologist Fredy Peccerelli and forensic pathologist John Clark concerning the bodies exhumed from the Lažete 1 mass grave. According to a report authored by forensic anthropologist Fredy Peccerelli, Lažete 1 was located along the paved road between Lažete and Krizevići and consisted of a field immediately east of Lažete 2.<sup>11911</sup> The south-eastern quarter of the field contained the grave area in which a total of 129 bodies were found; 127 in a grave and two in a ditch.<sup>11912</sup> A report authored by forensic pathologist John Clark confirmed that 129 bodies and a number of body parts were exhumed from Lažete 1.<sup>11913</sup> Autopsies were performed on the 129 bodies and the report indicates the following with respect to the cause of death, relying on the most fatal injury found on the bodies: 54 had gunshot injuries to the trunk; 37 had multiple gunshot injuries; 32 had gunshot injuries to the head; two had gunshot injuries to the legs; and four had an undetermined cause of death.<sup>11914</sup> In total, 549 gunshots had been fired at the 129 individuals, with an average of four gunshots per person.<sup>11915</sup> At the time of their deaths, the individuals found in Lažete 1 were male between the age of 15 and 85 years, with the majority being between the age of 30 and 60 years.<sup>11916</sup> While some items of clothing were found on nearly all of the bodies in Lažete 1, none of the individuals examined appeared to have been wearing military clothing and no weapons or ammunitions were found.<sup>11917</sup>

Personal possessions such as identification documents, jewellery, and a Koran were found on the bodies.<sup>11918</sup> In Lažete 1, 89 definite and five probable blindfolds, made of a variety of material and for most of them out of a pink cloth, were recovered at the site, usually over the eyes of the individuals but also pulled upwards or downwards.<sup>11919</sup> Clear bullet holes were present in several of the blindfolds.<sup>11920</sup> A small number of individuals had their hands tied together behind their backs with ligatures, made of electrical wire and thick wire, tied around their wrists and another individual had connecting loop of cloths around his legs.<sup>11921</sup> Concerning the body parts found in Lažete 1, all were from adults whose sex could not be determined.<sup>11922</sup> Blindfolds were present around parts of two skulls. Gunshot injuries were present in five cases, including two to the head, representing the potential cause of death.<sup>11923</sup>

bodies was a mixture; probably the fill of the mass grave and soil removed from the grave area during the robbing.<sup>11929</sup> Eight truncated bodies were recovered in the primary grave and they had probably been truncated during the robbing.<sup>11930</sup> The soil filling the robbed areas was different in texture, consistency, and colour from the remainder of the grave, indicating that it was material introduced to the Lažete 1 site.<sup>11931</sup> No complete bodies were recovered from the robbing areas but only nine body parts.<sup>11932</sup>

2749. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Fredy Peccerelli, William Haglund and John Clark concerning the bodies exhumed from the Lažete 2 A, B, and C mass graves. According to a report authored by Peccerelli, Lažete 2 was located along the paved road between Lažete and Krizevići and consisted of a field immediately west of Lažete 1.<sup>11933</sup> According to a report authored by Clark, 17 bodies and 25 body parts were exhumed from the Lažete 2 primary mass grave, while according to Peccerelli, a total of 16 bodies, 26 body parts and a pre-existing trench containing a water pipe were found in the mass grave.<sup>11934</sup> According to Clark, autopsies were performed on the 17 bodies and the report indicates the following with respect to the cause of death, relying on the most fatal injury found on the bodies: ten had gunshot injuries to the head; three had gunshot injuries to the trunk; two had multiple gunshot injuries; and two had an undetermined cause of death.<sup>11935</sup> Sixty-eight shots were identified in the bodies, with an average of four gunshots per person and a range of one to nine.<sup>11936</sup> The bullets and fragments recovered from the bodies indicated the use of high velocity rifles.<sup>11937</sup> At the time of their deaths, the individuals found in Lažete 2 were male potentially between the age of 17 and 85 years.<sup>11938</sup> While some items of clothing were found on all but one body in Lažete 2, none of the individuals examined appeared to have been wearing military clothing and no weapons or ammunitions were found.<sup>11939</sup> Personal possessions such as a watch and prayer beads were found on the bodies.<sup>11940</sup> Blindfolds, from the same variety of material as those found in Lažete 1, were recovered on eight out of the 17 bodies.<sup>11941</sup> Concerning the 25 body parts found in Lažete 2, all were from adults, apart from one from someone under the age of 17.<sup>11942</sup> Gunshot injuries were identified in two cases, one to a skull and one to a part of a pelvis and were found to be the potential cause of death.<sup>11943</sup>

The Trial Chamber notes that the mass grave referred to by John Clark has been designated 'LZ02C'. The Trial Chamber therefore understands the evidence of Clark and Peccerelli with respect to the Lažete 2 mass grave to refer to the same mass grave, namely Lažete 2 C.

The bodies were disorganised, dug into undisturbed yellow clay, and lay on and were covered by disturbed soil containing large pieces of turf, topsoil, and clay.<sup>11944</sup> This indicated that machinery had scraped the ground as it pushed the bodies, along with excavated soil, into the grave.<sup>11945</sup> A robbing event affected two separate sectors of the grave.<sup>11946</sup> From these areas an undetermined number of bodies had been removed.<sup>11947</sup> From the edges of the robbing areas but within the primary grave, six truncated bodies were recovered, indicating that they were truncated during the robbing.<sup>11948</sup> The body parts were recovered from the robbed areas; there were no complete bodies found.<sup>11949</sup> The soil filling the robbed areas was different in texture, consistency, and colour from the remainder of the grave, indicating that the material was introduced to the Lažete 2 site.<sup>11950</sup> A total of 671 shell cases, 20 live rounds, and 46 bullets were recovered.<sup>11951</sup>

2751. William Haglund testified that at the Lažete 2A primary mass grave, 112 male bodies were exhumed.<sup>11952</sup> Lažete 2B was also a primary mass grave but showed certain ‘disturbances’, meaning that bodies had been removed.<sup>11953</sup> Lažete 2B contained the remains of at least 52 male persons.<sup>11954</sup> The majority of the bodies’ ages in the Lažete 2A and 2B mass graves ranged from 16 to 45.<sup>11955</sup> One hundred and four cloth blindfolds were recovered during the exhumation.<sup>11956</sup> In relation to cause of death, 158 of the 165 died of gunshot wounds.<sup>11957</sup> All individuals were dressed in civilian clothing.<sup>11958</sup> Muslim paraphernalia were found on 12 individuals.<sup>11959</sup> According to the ICRC, some of these people were last seen alive between 11 and 13 July 1995.<sup>11960</sup>

2752. The Trial Chamber received evidence connecting the Lažete 1 and 2 primary mass graves with the secondary mass graves at Hodžići Road. Dean Manning testified that Lažete 1 is located in a grass covered and generally water logged field adjacent to the roadway leading from Grbavci School and alongside a dirt track leading to railroad tracks and the Lažete 2 mass grave.<sup>11961</sup> Aerial images show that the soil was disturbed in the area where the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves are located sometime between 5 and

27 July 1995.<sup>11962</sup> Furthermore, aerial images taken on 7 September 1995 show that by that date, the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves had been overgrown and had not been disturbed since 27 July 1995, while images taken on 27 September 1995 show significant disturbance of the two sites which had occurred by that point.<sup>11963</sup> Further aerial images show that on 7 September 1995, no disturbance could be seen in the area where the Hodžići Road mass graves are located while by 2 October 1995 it could be seen that the Hodžići Road 4 and 5 mass graves had been created.<sup>11964</sup> The witness further testified that soil and pollen samples, as well as matched shell cases, indicate that the source of the Hodžići Road 3, 4, and 5 secondary mass graves were the Lažete 1 and 2 primary mass graves.<sup>11965</sup> Matches were also found between the blindfolds recovered from Grbavci School in Orahovac and the Hodžići Road 4 secondary mass grave, as well as between blindfolds recovered from the Lažete 2 mass grave and the Hodžići Road 3, 4, and 5 mass graves.<sup>11966</sup> Connections were also found between the blindfolds and ligatures recovered from the Hodžići Road 4 and the Liplje 2 mass graves.<sup>11967</sup> Furthermore, the exhumation of the Lažete 1 mass grave provided reinforcement of the links between the two Lažete primary mass graves and their associated secondary graves of Hodžići Road 3, 4, and 5. Particularly noteworthy was a black plastic water pipe which had originally been laid through the field of Lažete 1, which had been cut through on initial creation of the grave, and an identical length of black plastic pipe was located in the secondary grave of Hodžići Road 5.<sup>11968</sup> team discovered 40, 81, and 57 bodies, respectively.<sup>11970</sup> The witness established that the Hodžići Road 3, 4 and 5 sites were secondary graves.<sup>11971</sup> On the basis of pieces of flaked limestone and glossy black rocks and several pieces of plastic black pipe found at the Hodžići Road sites, the witness and Dr. Brown concluded that the graves near Lažete were the primary graves for the Hodžići Road 3, 4 and 5 sites.<sup>11972</sup>

2754. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Christopher Lawrence concerning the bodies exhumed from the Hodžići Road Site 3, 4, and 5 mass graves. According to a report authored by Lawrence, the remains of at least 40 individuals were exhumed from the Hodžići Road Site 3 between 1 and 3 July 1998.<sup>11973</sup> The remains were collected in 83 body bags of which only 47 were the subject of autopsy reports.<sup>11974</sup> Autopsies were performed on the remains of the contents of the 47 body bags and the report indicates that: 32 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death; 12 had an undetermined cause of death; and three had gunshot injuries that could possibly cause death.<sup>11975</sup> Of the 25 complete bodies, 20 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death; and two had gunshot injuries that could cause death and only three had an undetermined cause of death.<sup>11976</sup> Where sex could be determined, 39 individuals were identified as male. According to a second report authored by Lawrence, the remains of at least 81 individuals were exhumed from the Hodžići Road Site 4 between 22 and 30 July 1998.<sup>11981</sup> The remains were collected in 138 body bags.<sup>11982</sup> Autopsies were performed on the contents of the 138 body bags and the report indicates that: 72 had an undetermined cause of death; one had a cause of death of homicidal violence including gunshot wound; 54 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death; seven had gunshot injuries that probably caused death; and four had gunshot injuries that could cause death.<sup>11983</sup> Of the 49 almost complete bodies, 37 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause the death of the individual, nine had an undetermined cause of death, two had gunshot injuries that probably caused the death of the individual, and one had a cause of death of homicidal violence including gunshot wound.<sup>11984</sup> Of the nine almost complete bodies with an undetermined cause of death, five had bullets or parts of bullets present, four had extensive skull fractures, and four had apparent gunshot wounds in non-lethal areas.<sup>11985</sup> Where gender could be determined, 66 individuals were identified as male. According to a third report authored by Lawrence, the remains of at least 57 individuals were exhumed from the Hodžići Road Site 5 between 12 July and 20 July 1998.<sup>11992</sup> The remains were collected in 93 body bags of which only 69 were the subject of autopsy reports.<sup>11993</sup> Autopsies were performed on the contents of the 69 body bags and the report indicates that: 53 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause the death; 10 had an undetermined cause of death; three had gunshot injuries that could possibly cause death; two had gunshot injuries that could probably cause death; two had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death; and one possibly died from suffocation.<sup>11994</sup> Of the 51 complete bodies, 45 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death and two had gunshot injuries that could probably cause death while only three had an undetermined cause of death and one possibly died of suffocation.<sup>11995</sup> Where gender could be determined, 54 individuals were identified as male. At the time of their death, at least seven individuals were between the age of 55 and 65 and one was over the age of 65. None of the individuals were under the age of 25.<sup>11996</sup> While some items of clothing found on the bodies could have been of military origin, none of the individuals examined appeared to be in military or police uniforms and none appeared to be carrying weapons.<sup>11997</sup> Thirty-one blindfolds were recovered from the site: 19 around the heads of individuals, four

2757. According to a report authored by Dušan Janc, as of April 2013, the remains of 848 individuals were identified through DNA analysis from various mass graves: 120 individuals from the Lažete 1 mass grave, 188 individuals from the Lažete 2 mass grave, 90 individuals from the Hodžići Road 1 mass grave, 103 individuals from the Hodžići Road 2 mass grave, 40 individuals from the Hodžići Road 3 mass grave, 71 individuals from the Hodžići Road 4 mass grave, 55 individuals from the Hodžići Road 5 mass grave, 70 individuals from the Hodžići Road 6 mass grave, and 111 individuals from the Hodžići Road 7 mass grave.<sup>12002</sup> Janc identified twelve DNA connections between the remains identified in the Lažete 1 primary mass grave and the remains identified in the Hodžići Road 5 secondary mass grave.<sup>12003</sup> Furthermore, ten DNA connections were found between the Lažete 2 and the Hodžići Road 1 primary mass grave, seven between Lažete 2 and Hodžići Road 2, four between Lažete 2 and Hodžići Road 3, two between Lažete 2 and Hodžići Road 4, five between Lažete 2 and Hodžići Road 6, and twenty between Lažete 2 and Hodžići Road 7. Seven DNA connections were also found between the Hodžići Road 1 and the Hodžići Road 2 secondary mass graves, two between Hodžići Road 1 and Hodžići Road 7, eight between Hodžići Road 2 and Hodžići Road 3, three between Hodžići Road 4 and Hodžići Road 6, and two between Hodžići Road 6 and Hodžići Road 7. Janc further identified one DNA connection between the remains identified in the Hodžići Road 5 secondary mass grave

2759. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.6.1, and based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 July 1995, members of the Zvornik Brigade shot and killed two Bosnian-Muslim men who were detained at Grbavci School in Orahovac after having told the detainees they would be shot if they did not sit still. One of the guards told the detainees 'we will see whether these people can or cannot be killed'. Witness RM-297, Witness RM-362, and Mevludin Orić all provided evidence of a detainee being killed after speaking up. While these witnesses' accounts differ slightly, they are consistent in recounting that a detainee spoke up to the guards at Grbavci School and was subsequently shot. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that these accounts refer to the same incident. The Trial Chamber notes that only Witness RM-297 provided evidence of a second detainee being taken out of the gymnasium and killed, and that Witness RM-362 stated that no detainees left the gymnasium after one detainee was killed. The Trial Chamber finds Witness RM-297's testimony regarding this second killing detailed and convincing. It considers that Witness RM-297 observed an incident that Witness RM-362 did not. Thus, the Trial Chamber finds that their accounts are not inconsistent with one another, as Witness RM-362 would not necessarily have observed the second incident given that the gymnasium was large and crowded – approximately 15 by 20 metres and holding at least 1,000 detainees. Many of the detainees fainted and were left without medical attention or food. While the Trial Chamber received evidence that some of the detainees at Grbavci School were wearing civilian clothing and others were wearing military uniforms, it has not received any evidence that would allow it to determine the type of clothing worn by the particular victims of this incident. The Trial

Chamber will consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

2760. With respect to Scheduled Incident E.6.2, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Mevludin Orić, Witness RM-297, and Witness RM-362 on the number of people detained at Grbavci School in Orahovac on 14 July 1995. The numbers provided by these witnesses range from 1,000 to 2,500 detainees.<sup>12006</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber received contradictory evidence from Orić, Witness RM-297, and Milorad Birčaković with respect to the frequency of the transports of detainees between the school and the nearby fields where they were subsequently killed. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber will rely primarily on the relevant forensic evidence in order to calculate the number of victims for Scheduled Incident E.6.2.

2761. The Trial Chamber received extensive forensic evidence concerning the bodies exhumed from the Lažete 1 and 2 and the Hodžići Road 1 through 7 mass graves. The Trial Chamber has considered Adjudicated Fact 1571, according to which the Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Grbavci School were executed and buried in a nearby field. It has also considered the evidence of Dean Manning, Fredy Peccerelli, Milorad Birčaković, Cvijetin Ristanović, Damjan Lazarević, Mevludin Orić, and Witness RM-297 pertaining to the location of the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves; the description of the place where the detainees from Grbavci School in Orahovac were transported to, which matches the description of the location of the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves; the presence of a yellow excavator at this location which was used to dig out a pit; and the fact that corpses were being buried in graves at this location. The Trial Chamber has also considered the evidence of Dean Manning, Jose Baraybar, and Richard Wright connecting the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves with the Hodžići Road 1 through 7 mass graves.

2762. The Trial Chamber first refers to its review of Janc's methodology as set out in Appendix B. Second, the Trial Chamber notes that Hodžići Road 5 is solely connected to the Lažete 1 primary mass grave.

2763. All other secondary graves, namely Hodžići Road 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, and 7, were connected with the Lažete 2 primary mass grave and with each other. The Trial Chamber notes that Janc identified one DNA match between Hodžići Road 5 and Liplje 2, a secondary mass grave connected to a primary mass grave related to another Scheduled Incident. In accordance with the above, the Trial Chamber then considered the frequency of DNA connections.

2765. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber took a conservative approach as explained in Appendix B, and finds that the victims of Scheduled Incident E.6.2 were buried in the Lažete 1 and 2 mass graves and that bodies from the Lažete 1 and 2 primary mass graves were subsequently reburied in the Hodžići Road 1 through 7 secondary mass graves and will therefore rely on the number of DNA profiles identified in the Lažete 1 and 2 and the Hodžići Road 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, and 7 mass graves, as well as the majority of the DNA profiles identified in the Hodžići Road 5 secondary mass grave, to calculate the number of victims of this Scheduled Incident (i.e., 120 individuals from Lažete 1, 188 individuals from Lažete 2, 90 individuals from Hodžići Road 1, 103 individuals from Hodžići Road 2, 40 individuals from Hodžići Road 3, 71 individuals from Hodžići Road 4, the majority of 55 individuals from Hodžići Road 5, 70 individuals from Hodžići Road 6, and 111 individuals from Hodžići Road 7). The Trial Chamber will subtract from this number the two individuals who were killed outside Grbavci School in Orahovac and which pertain to Scheduled Incident E.6.1, as their remains may have also been in the Lažete 1 or 2 or the Hodžići Road 1 through 7 mass graves.

2766. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 July 1995, members of the Zvornik Brigade, including personnel from the 4th Battalion and the Military Police Company of the Zvornik Brigade, a man named Gojko Simić, and two soldiers referred to as 'Risto' and 'Vojo', shot and killed at least 819 Bosnian-Muslim men previously detained at Grbavci School in Orahovac on two meadows near Orahovac. Many of the victims were dressed in civilian clothing while some were wearing military uniforms. Some were under the age of 18 and some were over the age of 60. Some of them were blindfolded before being killed and some had their hands or legs tied. During the killings, the soldiers referred to the Bosnian Muslims using phrases such as 'fuck [their] Turk mothers', 'suffer some more, you Ustaša', and said that they were 'best off dead'. Dragan Obrenović, the Deputy Commander of the Zvornik Brigade, knew of the killings at the time when he allowed the members of the Zvornik Brigade Military Police Company to assist in the detention of the Bosnian-Muslim men at Grbavci School in Orahovac. The Trial Chamber will consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.8 Petkovci (Schedule E.7)

7.8.1 School in Petkovci (Schedule E.7.1)

2767. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of some of the approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Petkovci School on or about 14 July 1995.<sup>12007</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts with regard to this incident. It also received evidence from Witness RM-253, a Bosnian-Muslim ABiH soldier from Srebrenica Municipality,<sup>12008</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>12009</sup> The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Witness RM-204, a Bosnian Muslim from Srebrenica;<sup>12010</sup> Marko Milošević, Deputy Commander of the 6th Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade from the beginning of April 1995;<sup>12011</sup> Witness RM-322, an officer in the VRS Zvornik Brigade in 1995,<sup>12012</sup> and Ljubomir Bojanović, a member of the Zvornik Brigade in 1995.<sup>12013</sup>

2769. Two witnesses provided further details about the alleged killings at the school. Witness RM-204, previously held in Sandići Meadow, and Witness RM-253, previously detained in Kravica, were transferred with other detainees (for further details about this, see chapter 7.1.6), to Petkovci School on 14 July 1995.<sup>12017</sup> Witness RM-253 stated that upon arrival, armed Serb soldiers in camouflage uniforms assaulted the detainees and forced them to run towards a school building shouting something along the lines of, '[l]ong live Serbia, Srebrenica is Serbian'.<sup>12018</sup> Inside the school, the detainees were held in several classrooms, filled with people, and had to sit with their legs folded.<sup>12019</sup> Witness RM-253 stated that the soldiers threatened to kill the detainees if they went near the windows or made noise.<sup>12020</sup> The detainees could not open the windows.<sup>12021</sup> The detainees present in the witness's room heard a shot and screams coming from outside the classroom. A detainee, who had gone to the window to look outside, was shot in the chest by someone from outside.<sup>12022</sup> Witness RM-204 stated that while the detainees tried to open the windows to get more air in the classroom where he was held, the detainees were fired upon from below and four or five people got injured.<sup>12023</sup>

2771. Witness RM-204 stated that after nightfall, an armed soldier asked for people from Čerska, Glogova, Sućeska, Osmace, and other villages that the witness could not recall. Two detainees responded and after they were taken out of the room the witness heard screaming and the sounds of beating from the hallway outside the classroom. Those detainees never returned. The witness could hear voices in other rooms saying: '[c]ome on you Balija's get out'. They also said: '[t]hree Balija lets go out; five Balijas; two Balijas... get out'. walk from the classrooms towards outside at the entrance was the time that passed before the witness heard gunfire. It sounded as though the gunfire came from near the entrance of the building. This continued until midnight.<sup>12027</sup>

2772. Witness RM-253 stated that after nightfall, a soldier came into the classroom where he was held and told the detainees to hand over their money, jewellery, documents, and any other possessions and told them to step out into the corridor in groups of two to four every five to ten minutes.<sup>12028</sup> Soon after, two men whom the witness recognized as detainees came and informed the witness and other detainees that they needed to collect more money from them or they would all be killed.<sup>12029</sup> The witness heard the sound of gunfire and when detainee Salih Mehmedović asked for water, he was taken out of the room, and the witness heard bursts of gunfire and what sounded like beatings. The witness never saw Mehmedović again.<sup>12030</sup> After some time, the witness passed out or fell asleep. When he woke up, there were only between 10 and 15 men left in the room. The witness heard someone order two men to step into the hallway.<sup>12031</sup> When the witness, along with another man, Kadrija Becirović, stepped out, he saw four or five soldiers in the hallway and what appeared to be a lot of blood on the floor outside the classroom.<sup>12032</sup> A soldier ordered the men to take off their shirts and shoes and empty their pockets, after which another soldier tied the witness's hands behind his back with a rope, insulted and assaulted him, and then pushed him into another classroom.<sup>12033</sup> About 20 minutes later, the soldiers called out for groups of five to ten men to run from the classrooms and onto trucks parked near the building's entrance. The soldiers assaulted the detainees while they ran and if they fell while attempting to board the truck.<sup>12034</sup> While running out of the building, the witness saw about 20 bodies, most with their chests covered in blood, and he assumed that they had

2773. Marko Milošević stated that while he was on duty at the 6th Battalion Command in Petkovci, between 10 a.m. and noon on 14 July 1995, he received a telephone call from the Zvornik Brigade duty operations officer intended for the Battalion Commander, Ostoja Stanišić. As Stanišić was not there, the witness took the call, which came in on a secure, wired military line.<sup>12038</sup> The Zvornik Brigade duty officer told the witness that some imprisoned Muslims would be brought to the Petkovci School accompanied by security in about two hours.<sup>12039</sup> Petkovci School was 700 to 800 metres away from the 6th Battalion Command, which was stationed in the old school of Petkovci.<sup>12040</sup> When Ostoja Stanišić returned to the battalion command two hours after the call, the witness conveyed this information to him.<sup>12041</sup>

2774. At around 4 or 5 p.m. at the Zvornik Brigade's 6th Battalion Command, Stanišić told the witness he had received a message from the Zvornik Brigade Command, and instructed the witness to search for Beara at Petkovci School and tell him that he should report to the Zvornik Brigade Command.<sup>12042</sup> The witness went towards the school.<sup>12043</sup> Approximately 70 to 80 meters from the school, at the crossroads of the main road leading to Petkovci where the road forked off to the school, the witness met Drago Nikolić, whom he knew from having worked with him in 1994 as his assistant.<sup>12044</sup> The witness asked Nikolić if he knew whether a man named Beara was there, and Nikolić pointed him to Beara – whom the witness described as a man of about 60 years old with grey hair.<sup>12045</sup> The witness conveyed the message from Stanišić to Beara.<sup>12046</sup> Four or five military police officers were with Beara and Nikolić at the crossroads; they wore camouflage uniforms with white belts, which were typical of the military police. As the witness did not recognize any of the military policemen, he believed that they were not from the Zvornik Brigade. The witness also saw troops around the school, some of whom wore camouflage uniforms and some of whom wore olive-drab uniforms.<sup>12047</sup> These troops were too far away for the witness to recognize any of them.<sup>12048</sup> Down the road, the witness observed parked buses and lorries, as well as a blue Golf.<sup>12049</sup> Once the witness had returned to the 6th Battalion Command, he briefed Stanišić that he had accomplished his mission, whereupon Stanišić in turn conveyed this to the Zvornik Brigade Command.<sup>12050</sup> In the late afternoon on the same day, the witness heard isolated shots and bursts of gunfire coming from the direction of the Petkovci School.<sup>12051</sup> The witness distinguished this from the gunfire coming from the lines and from the area of the companies of the 6th Battalion.<sup>12052</sup> On 16 July 1995, the witness was wounded at Parlog and brought to the Zvornik hospital, where he stayed for about 10 days to recover. During his stay in hospital, on or after 20 July 1995, the witness was told that the Muslims who had been brought to Petkovci School on 14 July 1995 had been killed.<sup>12053</sup> Stanišić also visited the witness in hospital and told him that he had sent soldiers from his battalion to clean up the school as the local villagers had allegedly asked for this to be done.<sup>12054</sup>

2775. In relation to this scheduled incident, the Trial Chamber also considered the evidence of Witness RM-322 which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D. Witness RM-322 further testified that around 7 p.m. on 13 July 1995, 2nd Lieutenant Drago Nikolić, who was then the duty officer at the brigade's forward command post in Kitovnica, called the Zvornik Brigade headquarters located at the Standard shoe factory in the Karakaj neighbourhood a few kilometres from the centre of Zvornik.<sup>12055</sup> Nikolić reported that Popović had called and asked them to prepare for the arrival of a large number of Muslim detainees from Bratunac to Zvornik.<sup>12056</sup> On the basis of the intelligence information on the number of Muslims captured in the area of Konjević Polje, the witness expected that thousands of detainees would be brought in.<sup>12057</sup> Nikolić further explained that the detainees could not be sent to the Batković camp, because everyone, including the Red Cross, knew about Batković, and that the orders stated that the detainees were to be brought to Zvornik and executed by firing squad.<sup>12058</sup> Nikolić was told that without informing the Main Staff Command they would not be able to accept this task, but Nikolić said that the order had come from Mladić, that Popović and Beara, the Main Staff Security Chief, would organise the operation, and that everyone, including Vinko Pandurević, was aware of it.<sup>12059</sup> Around 2 p.m. on 14 July 1995, Major Zoran Jovanović arrived in the Snagovo area with reinforcements from Zvornik and informed the VRS Zvornik Brigade that Beara had brought a large number of detainees in buses to the Zvornik area.<sup>12060</sup> Around 11 a.m. on 15 July 1995, the witness learned that there were major problems with the burials of the executed detainees as well as with the guarding of those detainees who were still to be executed and that there was general chaos and that the situation had become critical.<sup>12061</sup> The witness also learned that Beara, Nikolić, and Popović were taking people ‘as they wished’, and that Popović had instructed Dragan Jokić not to make records of the activities involving the killing operation or to speak about it on the radio.<sup>12062</sup>

2776. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 July 1995, members of the VRS, including members of the military police killed, including by gunfire, about 20 of the approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Petkovci School.<sup>12063</sup> Detainees were called out and killed, and at least one detainee was shot in the chest

2777. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of the surviving portion<sup>12065</sup> of the approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim men who were detained at Petkovci School on or about 14 July 1995 in the evening until 15 July 1995.<sup>12066</sup> The men were summarily executed in an area below the dam near Petkovci.<sup>12067</sup> While the executions continued on 15 July, excavators and heavy equipment were used to bury the victims.<sup>12068</sup> The Defence argued that the Prosecution’s witnesses failed to identify the perpetrators of these killings.<sup>12069</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts in relation to this incident. It further received evidence from Witness RM-253, a Bosnian-Muslim ABiH soldier from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>12070</sup> Witness RM-204, a Bosnian Muslim from Srebrenica;<sup>12071</sup> and Richard Butler, an intelligence research specialist,<sup>12072</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>12073</sup> The Trial Chamber also received evidence from Ljubomir Bojanović, a member of the Zvornik Brigade in 1995;<sup>12074</sup> Dušan Janc, an investigator;<sup>12075</sup> Marko Milošević, Deputy Commander of

After the truck stopped, Witness RM-204 heard very loud gunfire followed by what sounded like stones falling on the canvas top of the truck. The detainees stayed in the truck for some time and heard bursts of gunfire often. Someone opened the back of the truck and the witness saw two or three soldiers standing outside. If he is cold, then he is dead, if warm, then they are still alive and it has to be a bullet to the head’. Someone answered: ‘[f]uck their mother, they are dead’. The witness saw one man coming down his row, and he walked over the witness to reach the man on his right, who was still screaming. He heard the man being shot. The Zvornik Brigade Engineer Company was assigned to work with earthmoving equipment to assist with the burial of the victims from Petkovci Dam.<sup>12110</sup> The Zvornik Brigade Daily Orders record shows that, on 15 July, the Zvornik Brigade Engineer Company was assigned to work with a ULT and an excavator in Petkovci.<sup>12111</sup> Vehicle records for the 6th Infantry Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade show that two trucks made a total of ten roundtrips between Petkovci and the Dam on 15 July, with two members of the 6th Infantry Battalion assigned as drivers of the vehicles.<sup>12112</sup> Butler testified that the Engineer Company's vehicle records do not place any of the unit's earthmoving equipment at the execution site.<sup>12113</sup> Witness RM-253 testified that the loading of corpses continued until after dark, and based on the witness's calculation of the number of detainees present at the school, the size of the area covered by the bodies, and the number of trips the tractor truck made, he estimated that there were 1,500 to 2,000 bodies on the plateau.<sup>12114</sup> The witness and the other survivor left the hill after nightfall and started walking towards free territory.<sup>12115</sup> They crossed the frontline and reached the Muslim village of Vitinica on 18 July 1995.<sup>12116</sup> death was examined in relation to the body parts in each body bag rather than each individual.<sup>12119</sup> The report indicates that for 81 body parts, the cause of death was undetermined; four had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause the death; another four had gunshot injuries that were probably sufficient to cause death; two had possible non-lethal gunshot wounds, but no clear cause of death; one had injuries which were consistent with a fatal gunshot wound; and one had head trauma which could not be classified.<sup>12120</sup> None of the cases had an intact skull; there were 464 skull fragments and 211 shell casings recovered at the site which, according to the report, is consistent with a number of individuals being shot in the head.<sup>12121</sup> In all cases where sex could be determined, 15 individuals were identified as male. Road site 3 and Čančari Road site 12.<sup>12137</sup> Lawrence identified three other similarities between Liplje Site 2 and Dam site: (1) similar decomposition, weathering and post mortem damage to the remains; (2) angular stones embedded in the bones; and (3) a relatively low number of recognizable gunshot wounds.<sup>12138</sup>

2785. According to a report authored by Dušan Janc, the remains of a number of individuals, including 45 minors, were identified through DNA analysis from various mass graves: 19 individuals from the Petkovci Dam mass grave; 159 individuals from Liplje 1; 172 individuals from Liplje 2; 57 individuals from Liplje 3; 292 individuals from Liplje 4, and 116 individuals from Liplje 7.<sup>12139</sup> In particular, the remains of Fuad Pilav, Zaim Pilav, Ramo Fejzić, Razim Buhić, Kadrija Becirović, and Salih Mehmedović were identified in Liplje 1, 2, 4, and 7.<sup>12140</sup> In his report, Janc indicated that DNA connections were reported when the remains of one individual were found in at least two different graves.<sup>12141</sup> Janc identified 37 DNA connections between the remains identified in the Petkovci Dam site, referred to as a primary mass grave, and the remains identified in secondary mass graves known as Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7. Fifty-two DNA connections between the remains identified in the secondary graves were also found. He further found one DNA connection between remains identified in one of the secondary graves, Liplje 2, and remains found in Čančari Road.<sup>12142</sup>

2786. The Trial Chamber received extensive forensic evidence concerning the bodies exhumed from the Petkovci Dam and the Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 mass graves. The Trial Chamber has considered Adjudicated Facts 1583 and 1584, and the evidence of Witness RM-253, Witness RM-204 and Butler, according to which the men detained at Petkovci School were transported to, executed, and buried in an area near Petkovci Dam. It has also considered the evidence of Lawrence and Janc, linking the primary mass grave at Petkovci Dam with the secondary mass graves at Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4 and 7.

2787. The Trial Chamber first refers to its review of Janc's methodology as set out in Appendix B. Second, the Trial Chamber notes that none of the secondary graves were solely connected to the Petkovci Dam primary grave or to secondary graves that were not connected to another primary grave.

2788. All secondary graves were connected with the Petkovci Dam primary grave and with each other. However, the Trial Chamber notes that for one of the secondary mass grave, Liplje 2, Janc identified two DNA matches, each connected to a distinct secondary mass grave, namely Čančari Road 3 and Hodžići Road 5. The Trial Chamber further notes that Janc connects both of these mass graves to two other primary graves, related to other Scheduled Incidents. In accordance with the above, the Trial Chamber then considered the frequency of DNA connections.

2789. The high number of DNA connections between Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 and the Petkovci Dam primary grave and among each other, compared to the very low number of 'external' connections with Čančari Road 3 and Hodžići Road 5, led the Trial Chamber to find that a majority of the bodies of Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 secondary graves are to be counted as part of Scheduled Incident E.7.2.

2790. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber took a conservative approach as explained in Appendix B, and finds that the victims of this Scheduled Incident were buried in the Petkovci Dam mass grave and that bodies from the Petkovci Dam primary mass grave were subsequently reburied in Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 secondary mass graves and will therefore rely on the number of DNA profiles identified in Petkovci Dam as well as the majority of the bodies found in Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 to calculate the number of victims of this Scheduled Incident (i.e 19 individuals from Petkovci Dam mass grave, the majority of 159 individuals from Liplje 1, the majority of 172 individuals from Liplje 2, the majority of 57 individuals from Liplje 3, the majority of 292 individuals from Liplje 4, and the majority of 116 individuals from Liplje 7). The Trial Chamber will subtract from this number the 20 individuals who were killed in Scheduled Incident E.7.1 (see chapter 7.8.1) as their remains may also have been buried in the Petkovci Dam or Liplje 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7 mass graves.<sup>12143</sup>

<sup>12143</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the six victims whose remains were identified in Liplje 1, 2, 4, and 7 are included in the total number of victims per mass grave mentioned in Janc's report.

2791. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 and 15 July 1995, at least 401 Bosnian-Muslim males, including minors, were shot and killed at Petkovci Dam.<sup>12144</sup> With regard to the Defence's argument that the Prosecution's witnesses failed to provide evidence identifying the perpetrators, the Trial Chamber notes that it did not rely on these witnesses' testimonies to identify the perpetrators of this scheduled incident. Rather, the Trial Chamber considered Adjudicated Facts number 1583 and 1584, which indicate that the 6th Infantry Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade transported the detainees from Petkovci School to the execution site. Further, Butler testified that the execution site was in the zone of responsibility of the Zvornik Brigade. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that members of the 6th Infantry Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade killed the Bosnian Muslims. The men had their hands tied up prior to being killed. No military or police uniforms were identified among the clothing found on some of the bodies exhumed from the mass graves. A Serb soldier called the detainees 'Balijas' while calling them out to be killed. One soldier ordered one of the detainees to say 'Allahu Akbar' immediately prior to killing him. While detainees were being shot, someone also said 'Haris Silajdžić will exchange your dead bodies'. After shooting a number of detainees, the soldiers were overheard saying 'this hunting was good, these rabbits are very good.' One of the soldiers then told the others to check the rows of bodies for survivors, saying that every detainee still living should be killed with a bullet to the head. The Trial Chamber will consider the aforementioned incidents in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.9 Roćević School and Kozluk (Schedule E.8.1 and E.8.2)

2792. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of some of the approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Roćević School on or about 14 or 15 July 1995 (Scheduled Incident E.8.1) and the killing of the surviving portion of these Bosnian-Muslim men on 15 July 1995 (Scheduled Incident E.8.2).<sup>12145</sup> With regard to the second incident, the men were summarily executed at a site on the bank of the Drina River near Kozluk and the victims were buried in a nearby mass grave.<sup>12146</sup> Having considered that: (i) the events alleged in Scheduled Incident E.8.1 directly preceded those alleged in Scheduled Incident E.8.2; (ii) the killings alleged in Scheduled Incident E.8.2 relate to Bosnian-Muslim men previously detained at Roćević School; and (iii) a number of witnesses testified about both incidents, the Trial Chamber considers that both incidents are intrinsically linked and will analyse them both below. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.8.1, the Defence argued that the evidence does not show that VRS members perpetrated the killings.<sup>12147</sup> Further, according to the Defence, the Prosecution failed to provide sufficient evidence to establish the number and manner of death of the victims as set forth in Schedule Incidents E.8.1 and E.8.2.<sup>12148</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts regarding Scheduled Incident E.8.2.<sup>12149</sup> Further, it received evidence from Witness RM-269, a Military Police Officer in the Zvornik Brigade in 1995;<sup>12150</sup> Witness RM-281, a Bosnian Serb from Zvornik Municipality;<sup>12151</sup> Damjan Lazarević, a Serb member of the Engineering Unit of the Zvornik Brigade in July 1995;<sup>12152</sup> Miloš Mitrović, a member of the Transport Platoon and Fortification Platoon within the Engineering Company of the Zvornik Brigade since December 1992;<sup>12153</sup> Richard Butler, an intelligence research specialist;<sup>12154</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>12155</sup>

Arrival of Bosnian-Muslims detainees at Roćević School

2793. Mladen Blagojević testified that on 14 July 1995 he escorted a column of buses transporting Muslim detainees from Vuk Karadžić Elementary School in Bratunac to Roćević in Zvornik Municipality where they were transferred into the custody of the Zvornik military personnel and held in the Roćević school's gym.<sup>12169</sup> Mile Janjić testified that in the late afternoon hours of 14 or 15 July 1995 he drove in a military vehicle with six or seven other military policemen to Roćević School.<sup>12170</sup> He saw a UN APC in front of the school as well as the Bratunac Military Police Platoon Commander, Mirko Janković, and a military policeman named Zoran Živanović.<sup>12171</sup> The witness further saw a group of 10 to 15 soldiers in a meadow next to the school, whom he recognized as members of the Bratunac Brigade from Zenica.<sup>12172</sup> He learned from Živanović that there were Muslim men inside the school who were supposed to be brought elsewhere.<sup>12173</sup>

Events at Roćević School on 14 July 1995

2794. Srečko Ačimović testified that on 14 July 1995, both the priest and the president of the Roćević local commune told him that detainees were being held and killed in the gym of an elementary school in Roćević.<sup>12174</sup> They also told him that a woman had been accidentally shot and wounded near the school by those guarding the detainees, and that there was a lot of panic among the locals.<sup>12175</sup> Between 8 and 9 p.m., the witness entered the school yard, where a number of unfamiliar, dishevelled soldiers, behaving in a triumphant and arrogant manner refused to give him any information on what was

2795. Ačimović testified that he then went to his former logistics unit’s office in Kozluk in Zvornik Municipality, from where he called the duty operations officer of the Zvornik Brigade command around 8:30 or 9:30 p.m..<sup>12184</sup> The duty operations officer said that he did not know anything about the people in the Ročević School gym, to which the witness responded that a large number of soldiers were guarding detainees at Ročević School and behaving erratically, and that they had wounded a woman.<sup>12185</sup> When the witness asked to speak with the Brigade Commander he was told that Vinko Pandurevic, the brigade commander, had not returned to the Zvornik Brigade and that Dragan Obrenovic, the Chief of Staff, was not there, so he asked the duty operations

After this phone conversation, Ačimović went back to Ročević School and told the soldiers guarding the detainees that they would be exchanged the following day and suggested to provide them with water and allow them to go out and use the toilet or to give them some containers to be used for this purpose.<sup>12189</sup> The soldiers agreed.<sup>12190</sup> Back at his battalion command, the witness discussed the situation with Vujo Lazarević, the Assistant Battalion Commander for Morale and Religious Affairs, and Mitar Lazarević.<sup>12191</sup> He then tried again unsuccessfully to contact the commander or chief of staff at the Brigade command.<sup>12192</sup>

Events during the night of 14 to 15 July 1995

2797. Mitar Lazarević stated that in the night between 14 and 15 July 1995, by telegram, the Zvornik Brigade ordered the 2nd Battalion to send a group of men to Ročević for the execution of the detainees.<sup>12193</sup> Ačimović testified that on 15 July 1995 between 1 and 2 a.m., the duty officer at the battalion command at the time, whom the witness believed to be Mitar Lazarević, told the witness that they had received an encrypted telegram, which contained an order from the Zvornik Brigade Command that

Popović cursed when the truck arrived, disappointed that there was only one.<sup>12230</sup> Popović told one of the soldiers guarding the detainees that the executions had to be carried out in Roćević near the school.<sup>12231</sup> Jović interjected and said that the battalion had six or seven trucks which could be used to drive the detainees away.<sup>12232</sup> Once Jović had provided the names of the drivers, Popović told Ačimović to call them and tell them to come to the school with their vehicles.<sup>12233</sup>

Stanojević, and returned with another truck.<sup>12238</sup> Popović asked the brigade command to send ‘one of the two men’ located at Petkovci or Orahovac in Zvornik Municipality to transport the detainees and ordered the witness not to leave until one of the two men showed up.<sup>12239</sup>

2803. Jović stated that Ačimović instructed him to see Drašković, whose brother had been killed early on in the war, to ask him if he wanted to ‘execute’.<sup>12240</sup> When Ačimović mentioned the execution, the firing and the extent of it, the witness opposed him and asked him ‘[Srečko], is that more normal? What are you doing, man?’<sup>12241</sup> Ačimović replied: ‘We have to do that. It’s an order, the order must be carried out’.<sup>12242</sup> After the witness returned from talking with Drašković, who had refused to take part in the executions, Ačimović ordered the witness to go with Veljko Ivanović in the battalion’s truck to Kozluk, because the executions of the detainees would take place there.<sup>12243</sup> The witness was to show Ivanović the place, as he knew the area.<sup>12244</sup>

2804. Ačimović left the school and on his way out, passed by drivers Dragan Jović, Veljko Ivanović, and Djordje Nikolić, and told them that his unit had nothing to do with the operation and that he was leaving for Malešić in Zvornik Municipality.<sup>12245</sup> He testified that these three men were involved in the transportation of detainees.<sup>12246</sup> At the battalion command, the witness informed Vujo Lazarević and Mitar Lazarević of the situation at the school.<sup>12247</sup> He then called the brigade command and updated the duty operations officer regarding the situation and the action which he had taken.<sup>12248</sup> Like the previous day, the officer informed the witness that neither the commander nor the chief of staff was available.<sup>12249</sup>

2805. Witness RM-269 testified that on 15 July 1995, Miomir Jasikovac ordered military police officers of the Zvornik Brigade to secure the facility and the detainees at Ročević School.<sup>12250</sup> Milorad Birčaković stated that on 15 July 1995 he drove Jasikovac to Ročević.<sup>12251</sup> At Ročević School, there were already soldiers guarding the detainees.<sup>12252</sup> Witness RM-269 testified that the military police officers arrived at the school around 10 or 11 a.m and saw that the detainees were already in the school and inside the gym.<sup>12253</sup> He saw a few bodies of Muslim detainees lying around.<sup>12254</sup> Some were wearing civilian clothing, except one possibly wearing a camouflage short or trousers.<sup>12255</sup> He heard that a local man who had lost his son took a couple of these detainees from the gym and killed them.<sup>12256</sup> The detainees were guarded by members of the military police of the Zvornik Brigade, as well as other soldiers in VRS uniforms.<sup>12257</sup> The task of the military police was to secure the facility and to make sure that the detainees would stay where they were and to prevent the local population from approaching or coming close to the detainees.<sup>12258</sup>

2806. Veljko Ivanović stated that he was told that Ačimović had ordered him to load ammunition and bring it to Ročević School.<sup>12259</sup> When he arrived at the school, soldiers unloaded the truck and installed planks to build a ramp to the truck.<sup>12260</sup> They started loading people from the school, who had their hands tied and their eyes bound, onto the truck.<sup>12261</sup> As they started loading people, the witness asked Ačimović ‘what is going on? I can’t do this. I refuse’, to which Ačimović shrugged his shoulders and said that this had to be done.<sup>12262</sup> As many of them fell down they decided to cut the bonds and take off the blindfolds.<sup>12263</sup> Witness RM-281's recollection is that he saw detainees with their hands tied on trucks located close to the school.<sup>12264</sup> Witness RM-269 testified that the detainees were made to board onto trucks by people in VRS uniforms and the witness heard that they were taken to a dump in Kozluk, approximately 20 minutes away, where they were shot.<sup>12265</sup> Witness RM-266 stated that he visited Roćević in mid-July 1995 after he had learned from one woman about killings at Roćević School.<sup>12266</sup> In Roćević, he saw up to 50 women and children in front of the school playground which was full of buses and soldiers.<sup>12267</sup> The witness talked to locals who told him that 'they were killing people from Srebrenica there, and [that] bursts of fire could be heard frequently'. He himself heard gunfire about 100 metres from the road.<sup>12268</sup> The locals were protesting against what was happening and said that the soldiers had brought several busloads there and were killing people behind the school.<sup>12269</sup>

2807. Jović stated that the first truck transporting the detainees stopped at a gravel pit about three kilometres from Kozluk.<sup>12270</sup> Two to four Bratunac Brigade military police officers accompanied the trucks.<sup>12271</sup> The detainees were offloaded by the military police officers and taken away. The witness returned to Roćević and was ordered by Ačimović to fetch a truck from Mico Stanojević.<sup>12272</sup> Stanojević's mother and wife refused to give him the truck.<sup>12273</sup> Ačimović then joined the witness and sternly ordered them to hand over the keys of the truck. The witness then continued, as ordered by Ačimović, to transport soldiers and detainees from Roćević to Kozluk with this truck. The truck could hold approximately ten detainees and the soldiers securing them.<sup>12274</sup> When the witness returned to the gravel pit, there was a larger presence of the army but these soldiers were not from the 2nd Battalion.<sup>12275</sup> The witness carried out two or three trips.<sup>12276</sup> He also saw Milivoje Lazarević drive a truck-load of detainees.<sup>12277</sup> The entire operation started at 2 or 3 p.m. and was still ongoing when the witness left at around 5 or 6 p.m., as he was given another task. Subsequently, Mico Stanojević took over the truck from the witness.<sup>12278</sup>

2808. Witness RM-281 stated that in the afternoon of a Saturday in July 1995<sup>12279</sup> he saw a dug out hole at Kozluk with bodies in it.<sup>12280</sup> There was also a truck with detainees on it.<sup>12281</sup> The witness estimated that there were about 50 soldiers; about half on each side of the truck, with a five- or six-metre deep hole in between them.<sup>12282</sup> When the detainees came off the truck, they fell into the hole and they were shot from both sides.<sup>12283</sup> It was not possible for the detainees to go anywhere else other than the hole, because soldiers were standing to their left and right and the hole was in front of them.<sup>12284</sup> The witness also saw an armed man, with what he thought were white cross belts, crying.<sup>12285</sup>

2809. Ivanović stated that the detainees were offloaded from the truck when he arrived in Kozluk.<sup>12286</sup> The witness observed about eight men shooting at and killing the detainees.<sup>12287</sup> The witness recalled one 12 to 14-year-old boy amongst the detainees who was begging for his life. Ivanović later heard that this boy had been killed.<sup>12288</sup> The witness saw detainees who tried to escape but were chased, beaten, and shot.<sup>12289</sup> When the witness came back to transport the second group of detainees, the school gym was open and he saw detainees sitting with their legs crossed one next to another.<sup>12290</sup> He drove detainees from the Ročević School to Kozluk three or four times that day.<sup>12291</sup>

Other drivers that day were Radivoje Jekić, Mico Stanić, Djoko Nikolić, and Dragan Jović.<sup>12292</sup> Witness RM-281 saw Milan Tomić and Vukasin Drašković, who were both armed, on the trucks transporting detainees to Kozluk.<sup>12293</sup> Witness RM-269 testified that by dusk, all of the detainees had been taken away from the school and the military policemen were brought back to the barracks.<sup>12294</sup>

2810. Ivanović learned subsequently from other people that Milan Ostojić, Zoran Simanić, ‘Zuzi’ Drasković, Beco Ristanović, and a minor called Kosović, were among the eight people who had done the shooting.<sup>12295</sup> Ačimović testified that he subsequently learned that the detainees were executed in Kozluk on the bank of the Drina River and that some men from his unit, but not his battalion as a whole, took part in the process.<sup>12296</sup> Witness RM-281 stated that all the soldiers were wearing multi-coloured uniforms and some of them had white cross-belts and, according to the witness, they were members of the military police.<sup>12297</sup> The witness recognised Milan Stjepanović and Zoran Simenić<sup>12298</sup>, both armed, but he could not remember whether they were shooting.<sup>12299</sup> Simenić wore a multi-coloured uniform.<sup>12300</sup> The witness believed that he was in Srecko Ačimović’s unit.<sup>12301</sup> The witness also recognised an armed person in multi-coloured uniform and white cross-belts called ‘Cigo’, who he believed belonged to the Zvornik military police.<sup>12302</sup>

2811. A large scale execution and burial operation was carried out at Kozluk between 15 and 16 July 1995.<sup>12303</sup> On 16 July, the victims were buried in mass graves near the site of their execution.<sup>12304</sup> The Kozluk execution site is located within the zone of responsibility of the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>12305</sup>

2812. From Roćević School, Witness RM-266 went to the VRS Command in Zvornik to talk to the chief of the brigade, Dragan Obrenović, whom he knew well, ‘believing that they too didn’t know what was happening on the ground’.<sup>12306</sup> Ratko Vidović, Chief of the SUP in Mali Zvornik, was present at the VRS Command in Zvornik.<sup>12307</sup> After a while, a ‘lower ranking officer’ covered in black soot and wearing a soldier’s shirt arrived and cursed that he himself had to pick up a weapon and shoot because the Serbs refused to kill.<sup>12308</sup> The witness asked for his name and the officer told him that his first name was Drago.<sup>12309</sup> Later, the witness learned that the officer’s surname was Nikolić.<sup>12310</sup> That officer said that he was coming from an execution site where they were killing people and that ‘Beara had ordered that 6,900 people had to disappear within five days, from Zvornik southwards towards Bijeljina’.<sup>12311</sup> The witness later learned that Beara was the Deputy Head for Security of the VRS Main Staff.<sup>12312</sup> The officer also told the witness that ‘they were transporting men to various villages’ where they were killed.<sup>12313</sup>

Burial in Kozluk

2813. Members of the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Company, using Zvornik Brigade excavators and bulldozers, participated in the burial of Bosnian-Muslim men in mass graves at Kozluk on 16 July.<sup>12314</sup> On that day a Brigade excavator-loader operated for eight hours in Kozluk.<sup>12315</sup> A bulldozer operated in Kozluk for one and a half hours on 18 July and another hour on 19 July.<sup>12316</sup> A number of bodies exhumed at Kozluk showed signs of pre-existing disability or chronic disease, ranging from arthritis to amputations.<sup>12317</sup> Fifty-five blindfolds and 168 ligatures were uncovered at the Kozluk grave.<sup>12318</sup> Plant specimens found in the grave proved that the executions of the victims occurred around the middle of July.<sup>12319</sup> Damjan Lazarević stated that on 16 July 1995 ‘the major’ ordered him to go to Kozluk to bury the bodies of executed people.<sup>12320</sup> He further stated that when he was at a range of about 20 metres from a gravel pit he saw decomposing bodies in military and civilian clothing lying close to one another, most of them in the pit, and a few on the surface.<sup>12321</sup> The witness also noticed three to four uniformed young men with painted faces and masks further away from him.<sup>12322</sup> Miloš Mitrović stated that the corpses were dressed in civilian clothing.<sup>12323</sup>

2814. According to a report authored John Clark, 838 bodies or body parts were exhumed from four primary grave sites in 1999: 292 bodies and 233 body parts from Kozluk.<sup>12324</sup> The report provides a cause of death for each body and each body part.<sup>12325</sup> Due to the advanced level of decomposition of the bodies and the potential for post mortem damage, the report highlights some limitations of the autopsies such as correctly distinguishing post mortem injuries from ante mortem injuries.<sup>12326</sup> The autopsies were carried out on the basis of two assumptions (i) the vast majority of injuries suggestive of gunshot damage occurred in life and were fatal; and (ii) any non-gunshot injuries were caused post mortem unless proven otherwise.<sup>12327</sup> The report therefore concedes that some genuine blunt force injuries, such as beating, could have been misinterpreted as post mortem damage.<sup>12328</sup> The 292 bodies and 233 body parts were found in two main locations, with separate three bodies nearby, and some bone fragments on the surface of the site in Kozluk.<sup>12329</sup> These bodies, body parts and bone fragments constituted a minimum of 340 individuals.<sup>12330</sup>

2815. Autopsies performed in 1999 on the bodies indicate the following causes of death: 83 died of gunshot injuries to the head; 76 died of gunshot injuries to the trunk; 72 died of multiple gunshot injuries; five died of gunshot injuries to the legs; and one died of gunshot injuries to the arms.<sup>12331</sup> The cause of death for 55 of the bodies was undetermined.<sup>12332</sup> At least 600 gunshot injuries were found on 260 individuals. The majority were shot at once or twice but some as many as seven times.<sup>12333</sup> The most common areas where gunshot wounds were identified, in order of frequency, were: trunk, legs, head, and arms.<sup>12334</sup> In some cases it was possible to identify from which direction a shot had been fired; the individuals were most often shot from behind but a large number of shots were fired from unknown directions.<sup>12335</sup> Given the lack of soft tissue on most of the bodies, it was impossible to identify from what distance shots had been fired. However, the shots that were ‘neatly’ placed at the back of the head suggest that some of them had been fired at close range. The fragmentation pattern of the injuries to the bones and the recovery of sharp-pointed copper jacketed bullets of 7.62 millimetres diameter indicated that high velocity rifles had been used.<sup>12336</sup> Given the difficulty in identifying whether the additional body parts found came from the whole bodies, the report does not include an analysis of their cause of death.<sup>12337</sup> Furthermore, most of the body parts were completely skeletonised.<sup>12338</sup> However, while most body parts were completely uninjured, 19 body parts showed injuries suggestive of gunshot damage.<sup>12339</sup>

2816. At the time of their death, the individuals found in Kozluk were between the ages of eight and 85 years, with the majority being over the age of 25 years. Where gender could be determined, they were all male.<sup>12340</sup> While items of clothing were found on nearly all of the bodies, the report does not indicate that they were military clothing. Personal possessions such as documents, jewellery and money were found on the bodies.<sup>12341</sup> Forty-four definite and two probable blindfolds, made of a variety of pieces of cloth, were recovered at the site. One hundred and forty individuals, with a further possible three individuals had their hands tied behind their back with ligatures, with the exception of one tied at the front. Ligatures were also present on 13 of the body parts.<sup>12342</sup> The ligatures were made from narrow strips of cloth, most of them from the same pattern material, while others were made from nylon string. A strip of cloth, which was several feet long and made of the same material as many of the ligatures, was found in the pocket of an individual whose hands were not tied. Six individuals had double ligatures and 21 had both ligatures and blindfolds.<sup>12343</sup> According to another report authored by Clark, an autopsy was performed on 26 July 1999 on a complete body recovered from the Kozluk mass grave.<sup>12344</sup> The report provides that the individual died from a gunshot wound to the chest.<sup>12345</sup> The individual was identified as being male and at the time of his death between the age of 35 and 60.<sup>12346</sup> While items of clothing found on the body – i.e. green checked long sleeve shirt, dark brown trousers, light brown shoes – could have been of military origin, the individual examined did not appear to be

2817. According to a report authored by Christopher Lawrence, the remains of at least 159 individuals were exhumed from Čančari Road site 3, between 29 May 1998 and 10 June 1998.<sup>12349</sup> The remains were collected in 383 body bags.<sup>12350</sup> The contents of the body bags ranged from single bones to complete bodies, which resulted in the report providing causes of death for body parts in each body bag rather than for each individual.<sup>12351</sup> The author emphasized that it is therefore possible that an individual be assigned more than one cause of death.<sup>12352</sup> Autopsies were performed on the contents of the 383 body bags and the report indicates that: 254 had an undetermined cause of death; 103 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death; 15 had gunshot injuries that could possibly cause death; 13 had gunshot injuries which would probably cause death; and two had gunshot injuries consistent with a cause of death of gunshot wounds.<sup>12353</sup> The most common areas where gunshot wounds were found, in order of frequency, were: torso, legs, head and neck, and arms.<sup>12354</sup> Of the 35 essentially complete bodies, 29 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause the death and only six had an undetermined cause of death.<sup>12355</sup> In the 126 cases where gender could be determined, all were identified as male. One individual was recovered wearing female clothing but because the individual was a sub-adult, gender could not be determined. A number of body bags included apparent female clothing which suggests, in the absence of female skeletal remains, that the men could have been wearing or carrying these items or, alternatively, that they could have been among the rubbish at the site.<sup>12356</sup> Of the 159 individuals, it was estimated that at the time of death, one individual was between the ages of 8 and 13, six between the ages of 13 and 18, three between the ages of 18 and 25, 150 over the age of 25, and at least seven were over the age of 65.<sup>12357</sup> With the exception of one individual who had an unfired cartridge in a pocket, none of the individuals appeared to be carrying weapons. With the exception of a JNA jacket recovered at the site, there was no evidence of any of the individuals wearing army or military uniforms.<sup>12358</sup> Identification documents were found on or near 12 bodies.<sup>12359</sup> There were 37 ligatures recovered from the site: 25 associated with hands or arms; eight associated with other parts of the body; and four not associated with body parts.<sup>12360</sup> The material of some of the ligatures, a white embroidered cloth with a circle and flower buds, was similar to the material of ligatures recovered at Čančari Road site 12.<sup>12361</sup> Eight blindfolds were recovered at the site, including four around the faces of individuals.<sup>12362</sup>

2818. According to another report authored by Lawrence, two body parts were exhumed from Čančari Road Site 3 near Kozluk in 1998.<sup>12363</sup> Following the autopsies which were performed on the contents of the body bags, the cause of death for the contents of one of the body bags – a skeletonised lower half of a male body – was possible gunshot wounds and the cause of death for the contents of the other one is unknown.<sup>12364</sup>

individuals from the Kozluk mass grave; 53 individuals from Čančari Road 1; 120 individuals from Čančari Road 2; 140 individuals from Čančari Road 3; 110 individuals from Čančari Road 7, and 61 individuals from Čančari Road 13.<sup>12365</sup> In particular, the remains of Kasim Hafizović and Senahid Hafizović were exhumed from and identified in Kozluk and Čančari Road 3, respectively.<sup>12366</sup> Janc identified 113 DNA connections between the remains identified in the Kozluk site, referred to as a primary mass grave, and the remains identified in secondary mass graves known as Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7, and 13: three connections with Čančari Road 1; ten with Čančari Road 2; 67 with Čančari Road 3; 20 with Čančari Road 7; and 13 with Čančari Road 13.<sup>12367</sup> Twenty-nine DNA connections between the remains identified in the Čančari Road secondary mass graves were also found: five between Čančari Road 1 and 2; four between Čančari Road 1 and 13; 15 between Čančari Road 2 and 7; and five between Čančari Road 3 and 13.<sup>12368</sup> Janc further found two DNA connections between the remains identified in two of the secondary mass graves connected to the Kozluk site and two other secondary mass graves connected to two distinct primary mass graves: one of these connections was between Čančari Road 3 and Liplje 2 and the other was between Čančari Road 7 and Čančari Road 11.<sup>12369</sup>

2820. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.8.1 the Trial Chamber notes that it received reliable evidence depicting the circumstances surrounding the events at Ročević School from Ačimović, Mitar Lazarević, Stanoje Birčaković and Ivanović that contrasts with Witness RM-269's vague and unsourced evidence that a local killed some of the Bosnian-Muslim detainees at Ročević School and will thus not rely on Witness RM-269's evidence in this respect. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that on 14 or 15 July 1995, members of the 2nd Infantry Battalion or members of the military police of the Zvornik Brigade<sup>12370</sup> killed at least twelve Bosnian Muslims who prior to their killing were detained among a group of only Bosnian Muslims at Ročević School in Zvornik Municipality, behind the school.<sup>12371</sup> Some of the bodies were wearing civilian clothing. The Trial Chamber will consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 to 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

2821. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.8.2, the Trial Chamber first refers to its review of Janc's methodology as set out in Appendix B. Second the Trial Chamber notes that none of the secondary graves were solely connected to Kozluk primary grave or to secondary graves that were not connected to another primary grave.

2822. All secondary graves were connected with Kozluk primary grave and with each other. However, there were also two DNA matches in Čančari Road 3 and 7 which were also connected to secondary graves connected to other primary graves. In accordance with the above, the Trial Chamber then considered the frequency of DNA connections.

2823. The high number of DNA connections between Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7, and 13 and the Kozluk primary grave and among each other, compared to the very low number of 'external' connections with Liplje 2 and Čančari Road 11, led the Trial Chamber to find that a majority of the bodies of Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7, and 13 secondary graves are to be counted as part of Scheduled Incident E.8.2.

2824. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber took a conservative approach as explained in Appendix B, and finds that the victims of this Scheduled Incident were buried in the Kozluk mass grave and that bodies from the Kozluk primary mass grave were subsequently reburied in the Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7, and 13 secondary mass graves and will therefore rely on the number of DNA profiles identified in Kozluk as well as the majority of the bodies found in Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7, and 13 to calculate the number of victims of this Scheduled Incident (i.e 341 individuals from Kozluk mass grave, the majority of 53 individuals from Čančari Road, the majority of 120 individuals from Čančari Road 2, the majority of 140 individuals from Čančari Road 3, the majority of 110 individuals from Čančari Road 7, and the majority of 61 individuals from Čančari Road 13). The Trial Chamber will subtract from this number the 12 individuals who were killed in or around Roćević School, and which pertain to Scheduled Incident E.8.1 (see chapter 7.9), as their remains may have also be buried in the Kozluk and Čančari Road 1, 2, 3, 7 or 13 secondary mass graves.

<sup>12370</sup> Srećko Ačimović, Mile Janjić, Mladen Blagojević, and Dragan Jović testified about the presence of members of the Bratunac Brigade military police during the transportation of Bosnian Muslims from Vuk Karadžić Elementary School in Bratunac to Ročević School and prior to their transportation out of the Ročević School. However, the Trial Chamber received no evidence that members of this unit participated in the killings at Ročević School.

<sup>12371</sup> With regard to the Defence's argument that the Prosecution has failed to provide sufficient evidence on the number the victims, the Trial Chamber notes that it received reliable evidence showing that at least twelve bodies were seen in and around Ročević School on 15 July 1995. Regarding the Defence's argument on the manner of death, the Trial Chamber considers that its finding that the detainees were killed is sufficient for a positive factual finding on this Scheduled Incident and thus the 'manner' of death as raised by the Defence is irrelevant in the context of this finding.

2825. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 15 July 1995, members of the Zvornik and Bratunac Brigades, including members of the military police of these brigades, shot and killed at least 575 Bosnian-Muslim males who prior to their killing were detained among a group of only Bosnian Muslims at Roćević School. The victims were shot from both sides as they got off the truck and fell into a hole. The victims included minors and elderly people. Some of the bodies were dressed in civilian clothing while others were dressed in military clothing. Some of the bodies had their hands tied and blindfolds over their eyes. The Trial Chamber will further consider the above in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.10 Kula School (Schedule E.9.1), Branjevo Military Farm (Schedule E.9.2), and Pilica Cultural Centre (Schedule E.10.1)

2826. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of a number of the approximately 1,200 Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Kula School near Pilica on or about 14 or 15 July 1995;<sup>12372</sup> then, on 16 July 1995, the transport of the the survivors from Kula School to Branjevo Military Farm and killing of them there;<sup>12373</sup> and then the killing of approximately 500 Bosnian Muslim men inside the Pilica Cultural Centre.<sup>12374</sup> Having considered that the events alleged in Scheduled Incidents E.9.1 and E.9.2 directly preceded those alleged in Scheduled Incident E.10.1; and that the killings alleged in Scheduled Incident E.9.2 relate to Bosnian-Muslim men previously detained at Kula School, the Trial Chamber considers that these incidents are closely related and will analyse them together below. In its Final Brief in relation to incidents E.9.1 and E.9.2, the Defence mainly argued that the Prosecution premised its allegations on witnesses who are not reliable, namely Dražen Erdemović, Witness RM-255, and Witness RM-346.<sup>12375</sup> With regard to Scheduled Incident E.10.1, the Defence argued that the Prosecution presented ‘limited evidence’, that was insufficient and unreliable to establish the perpetrators and circumstances of death.<sup>12376</sup>

Kula School (Schedule E.9.1)

2828. Rajko Babić stated that on 14 July 1995 between 8 and 9 a.m., he read a note in the Zvornik Brigade duty officer's logbook, that a group of between 100 and 200 people from Srebrenica were to arrive at the Pilica school, where they would stay overnight and be exchanged the following day.<sup>12393</sup> The message was sent from the Zvornik Brigade command.<sup>12394</sup>

2829. Slavko Perić stated that on 14 July 1995, all staff of the 1st Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade were at the battalion command in the village of Manojlovići, except the Battalion's Commander, Milan Stanojević, who was in Srebrenica.<sup>12395</sup> Momir Pelemiš, the Battalion's Deputy Commander, was in charge of the battalion that day.<sup>12396</sup> Pelemiš told those present at the command that someone at the brigade had informed him that around 200 Muslim detainees would be arriving and would be put up in the schoolhouse near Kula, to spend the night and be exchanged the next day.<sup>12397</sup> The Kula School was also called Pilica School.<sup>12398</sup> The news from Pelemiš was followed by a telegram and about one hour later the witness received a call from Drago Nikolić, the Assistant Zvornik Brigade Commander for Intelligence and Security, who repeated more or less the content of the telegram. Nikolić told the witness that regardless of who Pelemiš appointed to go to Kula School, the witness should also go to prevent any problems with local citizens.<sup>12399</sup>

2830. The witness agreed to go to Kula School and did so with the Officer for General Affairs of the 1st Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade, Rajko Babić; and the Assistant Commander for Morale and Information of the Battalion, Dragan Pantić.<sup>12400</sup> Sometime that afternoon, the witness and his two colleagues arrived at the school, but no one was there, and the witness went to his house to see his family for about 20 minutes.<sup>12401</sup> When he returned to the school, there was a convoy of about ten vehicles, mainly buses, along with three or four men escorting each vehicle, and the school's gymnasium was already full of detainees.<sup>12402</sup> Witness RM-255 testified that there were seven buses, each bus carrying about 50 detainees.<sup>12403</sup> According to Perić, there was not enough space for all the detainees inside the school and detainees remained in the vehicles parked outside the school.<sup>12404</sup>

2831. The men were held at the school for two nights.<sup>12405</sup> There was no food or water and several men died in the school gym from heat and dehydration.<sup>12406</sup> The prisoners were not always allowed to go to the toilet. When they were allowed, some of them were beaten by the soldiers with their rifles.<sup>12407</sup> Four witnesses provided further details about the conditions at the school: Witness RM-346, Witness RM-255, Perić, and Jevto Bogdanović.

2832. Witness RM-346 testified that when he arrived at the school on 14 July 1995, it was less than half full with Muslim men but later filled up, becoming overcrowded.<sup>12408</sup> Witness RM-255 testified that he was put in a room at the school with about 200 to 300 men.<sup>12409</sup> From time to time throughout the night, soldiers wearing camouflage uniforms without police insignia came in and took out one or two men at a time.<sup>12410</sup> Subsequently, the witness heard shouting, screaming, and shooting, which led him to believe that the men taken out had been killed.<sup>12411</sup> Witness RM-346 testified that he heard a bus arriving, followed by shooting and people crying for help from behind the school.<sup>12412</sup> The men at the school did not receive any medical treatment.<sup>12413</sup> On 15 July 1995, the soldiers took jewellery, watches and money from the prisoners.<sup>12414</sup> According to Witness RM-346, soldiers came and asked the detainees for 10,000 DEM and said if they did not pay they would all be killed, but the detainees did not have any money.<sup>12415</sup> During the night of 15 July 1995 men were taken out of the gymnasium and only some of them returned.<sup>12416</sup> No sounds were heard when those men were taken out of the gym.<sup>12417</sup> Witness RM-255 testified that around 16 July 1995, two ‘Chetniks’ in uniform entered the room where he was being held and took about 12 detainees aged 15 and 16 out of the room, telling them that they would be sent to Fikret Abdić and added ‘who needs guys like you’.<sup>12418</sup> Later on, the beating and the killing started again.<sup>12419</sup> At some point, a soldier entered the room and announced that the detainees who could pay 20 DEM could be sent to Sarajevo. Around 20 detainees wanted to pay, and those detainees were taken out of the room. Afterwards, the witness heard buses leaving. The detainees who remained then had to tie the hands of the other prisoners behind their backs, and they were all ordered out of the room. The detainees went down to the ground floor, where the witness saw one dead body lying on the floor. The detainees were then placed on buses and they travelled away from the school.<sup>12420</sup>

2833. The prisoners were guarded by VRS soldiers who rotated in shifts.<sup>12421</sup> Perić stated that a group of around 10 to 15 men, sent by Pelemiš, arrived to protect the detainees from the local population.<sup>12422</sup> Bogdanović stated that the commander of his work platoon in the Zvornik Brigade, Captain Radivoje Lakić, held a daily roll-call at Branjevo Military Farm, where his work platoon was stationed.<sup>12423</sup> A few days after 12 July 1995, Lakić sent two men from the platoon, Stevo Ostojić and Rajo Jurosević, to the witness’s house where they relayed Lakić’s order to report to the Kula School, otherwise known as the Nikola Tesla School, because ‘some people had been brought there.’<sup>12424</sup> When the witness arrived at the school, he saw Lakić and some soldiers he could not identify. The witness was ordered by the soldiers present at the school to stand guard at the entrance facing the road so that the people kept inside would not be able to escape and could be put on buses and taken away.<sup>12425</sup> From where he was standing, the witness could see people inside the school and observed that they were all in civilian clothing.<sup>12426</sup> The witness was uncertain as to the number of people in the school but said that buses leaving the school were ‘crammed’ and the school was ‘crowded’.<sup>12427</sup> The witness saw nine dead bodies lying approximately 50 metres from the school.<sup>12428</sup> As the detainees from the school were taken outside and put on buses to be transported to Pilica Dom the witness and some other men from his work platoon were forced to put the dead bodies onto the trailer of a tractor after which a man drove the tractor away.<sup>12429</sup> Milorad Birčaković stated that when on 15 July 1995 he drove Miomir Jasikovac, Commander of the Military Police Company, to inspect the battalion in Pilica and Lokanj, they stopped at Pilica School.<sup>12430</sup> The witness saw a corpse outside the school and heard from a local man that the man had died trying to jump out of the window.<sup>12431</sup> The witness later saw on television that the detainees were ultimately killed.<sup>12432</sup>

2834. Perić provided further details about his attempts to have the detainees removed from the school. He stated that on the morning of 15 July 1995, the buses, in which some detainees had spent the night parked outside of the school, left.<sup>12433</sup> Pelemiš talked to the witness on the phone and both realized that the detainees remaining in the school were not leaving as the witness and Pelemiš had been told earlier. Pelemiš told the witness that he had spoken with someone from the Zvornik Brigade Command and that he had requested that the detainees be driven away.<sup>12434</sup> However, because ‘this request was not met with any understanding’, they agreed that the witness was to go to the Zvornik Brigade Command and see the commanding officer on duty with the same request.<sup>12435</sup>

2835. At around 10 or 11 a.m., the witness went to the Brigade Command, together with a driver, Milan Jovanović, to see the commanding officer on duty.<sup>12436</sup> The witness had an informal discussion with four or five uniformed commanding officers from the Brigade, about the detainees and he was surprised by their lack of concern with the situation and their disinterest in his request to have the detainees driven away from Kula School as soon as possible.<sup>12437</sup> At some point one of the officers asked the witness something along the lines of, ‘are there any woods close to where you are’ or ‘why aren’t you killing them off’. The witness responded that he and his men could not kill anyone, to which he believed an officer replied something like, ‘if you are not going to kill them, then let them drown you all down at the village.’<sup>12438</sup> One of the officers left the office during the discussion and returned with information that Major Obrenović was not interested in the problem.<sup>12439</sup> Based on the unusual responses of these officers and the fact that no one was responding to his request for help, the witness concluded that operations involving the detainees were being conducted from a level much higher than that of the Brigade.<sup>12440</sup> After the discussion with the officers at the Brigade Command, the witness and his driver stopped briefly at Pilica Cultural Centre before returning to Kula School where, he believed, he spoke to Pelemiš again over the radio and told him about the results of his trip to the Brigade Command.<sup>12441</sup> During this conversation, Pelemiš and the witness agreed to replace the shift of 15 soldiers stationed at the school, which, the witness believed, was done that evening.<sup>12442</sup> Babić and Pantić reported to the witness that there had been no incidents at the school and Perić stayed at the school until around 10 p.m. at which time he went home.<sup>12443</sup>

2836. On the morning of 16 July 1995, Babić and Pantić again reported to the witness that there had been no incidents at the school and, at around 8 or 9 a.m., Pelemiš called the witness to tell him that someone from the Zvornik Brigade Command had called to say that they should not worry because the detainees would be taken away.<sup>12444</sup> Around noon, two officers arrived, followed by a van with around ten to twelve soldiers and then an empty bus.<sup>12445</sup> The witness did not recognize the officers at the time, but knew they were not commanding officers from the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>12446</sup> The witness overheard a soldier calling one of the officers ‘Pope’. He explained that he noticed a resemblance between the two officers and pictures he later saw in the media of Beara and Popović.<sup>12447</sup> The soldiers and officers were hostile towards members of the witness's battalion and began loading detainees on the bus right away.<sup>12448</sup>

2837. As the bus left, followed by the soldiers who had been guarding the detainees at the school, it passed by the witness who believed that he saw that detainees were blindfolded.<sup>12449</sup> The same bus drove back and forth about four or five times to take all of the detainees away, with each roundtrip taking about two hours.<sup>12450</sup> When the bus had departed for the second or third time, the witness heard gun shots, and he and the other members of his battalion assumed that the detainees were being executed not far away.<sup>12451</sup> Babić stated that on 16 July 1995 he discovered that the duty officer's logbook note regarding the arrival of the detainees at the Pilica school had been removed.<sup>12452</sup>

2838. Husein Delić stated that on 17 April 1992 he left Srebrenica for Tuzla, together with most of his family.<sup>12453</sup> His brother Bajazit Delić, whose family also fled with the witness, stayed in Srebrenica.<sup>12454</sup> The witness was told that when the Serbs attacked Srebrenica in July 1995, his brother went to Potočari and was taken prisoner by the Serbs.<sup>12455</sup> The witness was further told that his brother was last seen in Pilica.<sup>12456</sup> The witness has not seen his brother since then and considers that he was killed.<sup>12457</sup> The witness further stated that his wife's brother, Salčin Halilović, and his cousin, Ahmo Gurdić, were missing.<sup>12458</sup>

Branjevo Military Farm (Schedule E.9.2)

2839. On 16 July 1995, Bosnian-Muslim men, who had been detained for two days at the Pilica School, were taken by bus to the nearby Branjevo Military Farm and executed.<sup>12459</sup> Branjevo Military Farm was under the direct authority and control of the 1st Infantry Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>12460</sup> Witness RM-346 described the detainees as young men.<sup>12461</sup> They were called out of the school and loaded onto buses.<sup>12462</sup> Witness RM-346 testified that when his group was taken out, they were asked if anyone had relatives abroad that could send money, and those who spoke up were separated from the group.<sup>12463</sup>

2840. Erdemović testified that, in the meantime, on the morning of 16 July 1995, pursuant to an order issued by his superior Pelemiš, he, Brano Gojković, Marko Boškić, Franc Kos, Aleksandar Cvetković, Vlastimir Golijanin, Stanko Savanović, and Zoran Goronja departed from their base in Dragaševac for the Zvornik Brigade headquarters, with Gojković acting as the squad's commander.<sup>12464</sup> According to Erdemović, the order was relayed to the members of the 10th detachment by Gojković, and Gojković indicated that it had been issued by Pelemiš.<sup>12465</sup> After having parked the van in which they had been travelling in front of the Zvornik Brigade headquarters, Gojković went into the building and shortly after came out with a lieutenant colonel in a VRS uniform and two members of the DK military police.<sup>12466</sup> The witness concluded that the lieutenant colonel was also from the DK since he was in Zvornik.<sup>12467</sup> The lieutenant colonel and the two military policemen then got into another vehicle and led the squad to the Branjevo Military Farm, near the town of Pilica.<sup>12468</sup> At the farm, the lieutenant colonel only spoke with Gojković and Cvetković.<sup>12469</sup> Erdemović overheard the lieutenant colonel tell Gojković that buses would be coming to the farm.<sup>12470</sup> After the lieutenant colonel left, Gojković announced to the squad that the lieutenant colonel had told him that buses carrying detainees from Srebrenica would be arriving at the farm and that the members of the detachment were ordered to execute those detainees by shooting them.<sup>12471</sup> When Erdemović objected, he was told by Gojković that he could hand in his rifle, stand with the detainees, and be shot together with them.<sup>12472</sup> Sometime between 10 and 11 a.m., before the lieutenant colonel had left the farm, the first bus arrived.<sup>12473</sup> Richard Butler testified that Erdemović's unit operated under direct command of the 1st Infantry Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Milan Stajonević.<sup>12474</sup>

2841. Buses began to arrive at the farm carrying Bosnian-Muslim men, some of whom were blindfolded and had their hands tied.<sup>12475</sup> Colonel Popović was involved in organising fuel to transport the Bosnian-Muslim prisoners to the execution site at the farm, and the allocation of fuel was coordinated through the DK Command.<sup>12476</sup> Upon reaching the farm, DK military police, who had escorted and guarded the buses of prisoners, began unloading the Bosnian-Muslim men ten at a time to be then taken away and executed.<sup>12477</sup> Witness RM-255 testified that when the buses arrived, 'Chetniks' were standing next to the bus door, cursing at the detainees by saying 'Alija does not want you, step out.'<sup>12478</sup> The prisoners were brought to a meadow. Soldiers, standing in a line, told the men to turn their backs and then shot the prisoners with automatic rifles and machine guns.<sup>12479</sup> Erdemović described how some detainees were brought to the meadow by Gojković and Golijanin and, on the order of Gojković, were shot in the back by the witness and his fellow soldiers from the 10th Sabotage Detachment.<sup>12480</sup> The witness testified that as one elderly Bosnian-Muslim detainee was being taken off a bus, he said that he had saved many Serbs and that he should be spared. When Erdemović asked Gojković to let the man live, Gojković responded by saying that he did not want to have any witnesses of that crime. Subsequently, the man was led to the execution site by Golijanin.<sup>12481</sup> Witness RM-346 threw himself on the ground when the shooting started and another person fell on his head.<sup>12482</sup> After every group of Bosnian-Muslim men was executed, the soldiers asked if there was anybody still alive. The men who responded were then also killed.<sup>12483</sup> Witness RM-346 heard a voice saying that they should shoot the victims in the back as opposed to the head so their brains would not spill out.<sup>12484</sup> The soldiers shot the witness in the back but the bullet passed under his armpit and only scratched him.<sup>12485</sup> He remained lying there for approximately four hours while the shooting continued.<sup>12486</sup> Witness RM-255 described how, after having been taken off the bus, a ‘Chetnik’ asked him for money, and when he said that he did not have any, the ‘Chetnik’ kicked him in the stomach. The witness heard another ‘Chetnik’ saying to the first one: ‘don’t commit genocide, if you want to kill ... take a rifle and strike in a military way.’ The ‘Chetnik’ who had kicked the witness earlier asked the detainees if one of them wanted to declare himself as a Serb and to be released. Two of the men said they were Serbs, but were not separated from the line. The witness heard the soldiers who had escorted them step back a few metres. One of the soldiers ordered the detainees to lay down, and the soldiers opened fire immediately.<sup>12487</sup> The witness fell down, and the body of Behaja Malkić, who had been in the same room as the witness in Pilica, fell on top of him.<sup>12488</sup>

believed to be from Bratunac, proceeded to beat and humiliate the detainees by, for example, forcing them to ‘pray in the Muslim manner’ just before executing them.<sup>12490</sup>

The witness further recalled that Gojković entered every bus, gave an automatic rifle to its driver and ordered each driver to kill at least one Bosnian Muslim. According to Erdemović, Gojković did this so that the drivers could not testify.<sup>12491</sup>

2845. Zvornik Brigade equipment was used for activities relating to the burial of the victims in the Branjevo Military Farm.<sup>12501</sup> On 16 July 1995, the Zvornik Brigade First Battalion requested that a loader, an excavator, and a dump truck be brought to the farm the next day.<sup>12502</sup> Zvornik Brigade vehicle records show that a 'ULT 220' was in operation at Branjevo for eight and a half hours on 17 July 1995 and that a truck towed a 'BG-700' that day.<sup>12503</sup> On 17 July 1995, the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Company provided an excavator, which was used to dig a mass grave. Members of the Company participated in digging mass graves.<sup>12504</sup> The Fuel Disbursal Log reveals that 100 litres of diesel fuel was disbursed to a BGH-700 on 17 July 1995.<sup>12505</sup> The Daily Orders Journal of the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Company records work assignments of a ULT 220 in Branjevo and transportation of a BGH-700 to Branjevo on 17 July 1995.<sup>12506</sup> Damjan Lazarević stated that the burial operation was no secret to anybody within his unit as everybody knew about it and soldiers were openly talking among themselves about the operation.<sup>12507</sup> could not determine whether the Pilica grave site was a disturbed primary or undisturbed secondary grave.<sup>12513</sup>

2847. According to a report authored by Jose Baraybar, between 1996 and 1999 a team of forensic anthropologists examined the remains of at least 1,866 people exhumed from 29 primary and secondary gravesites in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>12514</sup> 1,656 were identified as male and one as female.<sup>12515</sup> Seven of the individuals were aged between 8 and 12 years, 329 were aged between 13 and 24 years, and a further 1547 were aged 25 years or more at time of death.<sup>12516</sup> Soil and pollen analyses indicated that the bodies recovered from secondary graves were originally disposed of in sites identified as primary. Bodies recovered from the secondary site from Čančari Road Site 12 were originally disposed of at the primary site of the Branjevo Military Farm.<sup>12517</sup> The matches were corroborated by archaeological findings and demonstrate that some primary sites were 'robbed' by forcefully extracting the contents of the graves in order to conceal or destroy them prior to ICTY exhumation, and dispose of the contents in secondary graves.<sup>12518</sup>

2848. According to a report authored by Christopher Lawrence, the remains of at least 177 individuals were exhumed from Čančari Road Site 12 between April 1998 and 25 May 1998.<sup>12519</sup> The remains were collected in 313 body bags, which resulted in the report providing causes of death for body parts in each body bag rather than for each individual.<sup>12520</sup> The author emphasised the possibility that a divided individual might be assigned more than one cause of death.<sup>12521</sup> Autopsies were performed on the contents of approximately 313 body bags and the report indicates that the remains in 145 body

bags had an undetermined cause of death, 145 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death, 15 had gunshot injuries that could possibly cause death, eight had gunshot injuries which could probably cause death, and two had gunshot injuries consistent with causing death.<sup>12522</sup> The most common areas that gunshot wounds were found, in order of frequency, were: torso, legs, head and neck and arm.<sup>12523</sup> Of the 43 almost complete bodies 39 had gunshot injuries sufficient to cause death and four had an undetermined cause of death.<sup>12524</sup> The report states that these four bodies probably sustained perforating gunshot wounds to soft tissue which could no longer be recognised because of loss of soft tissue and bone damage.<sup>12525</sup> There was a cluster of 22 bodies with gunshot wounds to the tops of their heads, which may be explained by one or more of the following reasons: individual heads were flexed forward, the shooter(s) were positioned above the victims; or individuals were lying on the ground when the shots were fired.<sup>12526</sup> A large number of peripheral gunshot wounds, especially in the knee, raises the possibility that they may have been deliberately inflicted to incapacitate and cause pain.<sup>12527</sup> In all 144 instances in which gender could be determined, it was identified as male.<sup>12528</sup> At the time of their deaths, five individuals were between the ages of 8 and 13, eleven were between the ages of 13 and 18, 23 were between the ages of 18 and 25, and 138 were over the age of 25.<sup>12529</sup> There were at least five individuals between the ages of 55 and 64 and one over the age of 65.<sup>12530</sup> While some items of clothing found on the bodies could have been of military origin, none of the individuals examined appeared to be in military or police uniforms and none appeared to be carrying ammunition or weapons.<sup>12531</sup> Also among the bodies were individuals with significant disabilities such as hip replacements or poorly-healed fractures that would preclude military service.<sup>12532</sup> Identification documents were found on or near 14 bodies.<sup>12533</sup> There were 18 ligatures recovered at the site: 12 associated with hands, four not associated with body parts, and two associated with other parts of the body.<sup>12534</sup> Two of the ligatures were made with the same white cloth, embroidered with circles and flowers as ligatures recovered at Čančari Road Site 3.<sup>12535</sup> Six blindfolds were also recovered, three of which were used around the face.<sup>12536</sup> The report indicates that a bullet hole was found on one of the blindfolds.<sup>12537</sup>

2849. According to a report authored by Dušan Janc, as of April 2013, the remains of 1,751 individuals were identified through DNA analysis from various mass graves: 140 individuals in the Branjevo Military Farm; 186 individuals in Čančari Road 4; 290 individuals in Čančari Road 5; 185 individuals in Čančari Road 6; 51 individuals in Čančari Road 8; 210 individuals in Čančari Road 9; 382 individuals in Čančari Road 10; 140 individuals in Čančari Road 11; and 167 individuals in Čančari Road 12.<sup>12538</sup> Through DNA connections, Janc established that Čančari Road secondary graves were linked to either the Branjevo Military Farm or Kozluk primary graves.<sup>12539</sup> Janc identified 43 DNA connections between the remains identified at the Branjevo Military Farm primary mass grave, and the remains identified in the Čančari Road 4, 8, 9, 11, and 12 secondary mass graves: one with Čančari Road 4, two with Čančari Road 8, 30 with Čančari Road 9, six with Čančari Road 11, and four with Čančari Road 12.<sup>12540</sup>

Pilica Cultural Centre (Schedule E.10.1)

2850. Erdemović testified that on 16 July 1995, as the last groups of Bosnian-Muslim men were being executed at the Branjevo Military Farm, a VRS lieutenant colonel returned to the farm and informed members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment that there were some 500 Bosnian-Muslims in the Pilica Cultural Centre who must be executed.<sup>12542</sup> The Pilica Cultural Centre was in the DK zone of responsibility.<sup>12543</sup> Butler specified that it was located in the area of the 1st Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>12544</sup> Erdemović and other members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment, namely Franc Kos, Marko Boškić, and Zoran Goronja refused to comply with this order.<sup>12545</sup> Instead, soldiers from Bratunac left the farm with the lieutenant colonel.<sup>12546</sup> Shortly thereafter, Brano Gojković, commander of a squad of the Vlasenica platoon of the VRS 10th Sabotage Detachment, told Erdemović that the lieutenant colonel had ordered Gojković to Pilica for a meeting so the witness and the rest of his squad left for Pilica.<sup>12547</sup> When he arrived in Pilica with members of his unit, Erdemović heard the sound of gunfire and hand-grenade explosions coming from the Pilica Cultural Centre.<sup>12548</sup> On that day, approximately 500 Bosnian-Muslim men were killed by VRS soldiers in the Pilica Cultural Centre.<sup>12549</sup> Butler testified that there were no known survivors.<sup>12550</sup>

2851. Butler further testified that his review of intercepts established that on 16 July 1995, 500 liters of fuel were distributed to the DK Command so that Lieutenant-Colonel Vujadin Popović, the DK Assistant Commander for Security, could continue his ‘work’.<sup>12551</sup> Later on the same day, Popović told Rašić that he ‘finished the job’ and would come back the next day to report to General Krstić.<sup>12552</sup> The witness further testified that one of the intercepts reviewed established that Colonel Slobodan Cerović, the DK Assistant Commander for Moral, Legal and Religious Affairs, told Colonel Beara on the morning of 16 July 1995 that he had instructions from above and that the ‘triage’ needed to be done on the detainees.<sup>12553</sup>

2852. Bogdanović stated that a few days after 12 July 1995, the Commander of a work platoon of the Zvornik Brigade, Captain Radivoje Lakić, ordered him, together with other men from his work platoon, to go to Pilica ‘because some people had been brought there’.<sup>12554</sup> The witness walked with Lakić and other members of his work platoon from Branjevo Military Farm to the Pilica Cultural Centre, and saw approximately ten corpses along the way, dressed in civilian clothes, who had been shot.<sup>12555</sup> Upon arrival at the Pilica Cultural Centre, which the witness described as a youth hall with just one room which looked like a sports hall, he observed soldiers securing the area who were not members of his work platoon.<sup>12556</sup> Inside the Pilica Cultural Centre, he saw the bodies of men and of two women, all wearing civilian clothes, piled up on each other and scattered all over the place.<sup>12557</sup>

2854. Bogdanović stated that on the order of Commander Lakić, 12 members of the work platoon, including himself, loaded the bodies onto two gravel trucks by dragging them from the Pilica Cultural Centre.<sup>12564</sup> Lakić was present during this process.<sup>12565</sup>

2855. Tomić stated that after his arrival at Branjevo, he saw some individuals wearing civilian clothes and was told by the soldier to wait in cattle barns.<sup>12566</sup> Later, the soldier told him to drive back to the Pilica Cultural Centre and to wait in the same house.<sup>12567</sup> The soldier returned half an hour later and told the witness that they should leave again.<sup>12568</sup> Back in Branjevo, Tomić saw five or ten bodies lying on the ground next to the backside of the barn and a few civilians eating nearby.<sup>12569</sup> He parked the truck and waited in the barn for half an hour.<sup>12570</sup> On his way back to the Pilica Cultural Centre, Tomić was alerted by a soldier that one side of the back of his truck had not been lowered, and saw that the backside of the truck was muddy and bloody.<sup>12571</sup> Tomić then left for Zvornik, where he left the truck on the barracks' parking lot along with the keys and the travel order.<sup>12572</sup> Butler testified that it was noted that on 17 July 1995, one TAM 130 truck registered to the Zvornik-based Metalno Company made a total of five trips between Zvornik, Pilica, and Kula.<sup>12573</sup>

The Trial Chamber's Findings

2858. With regard to the Defence's arguments concerning the reliability of witnesses for these three incidents, the Trial Chamber notes that for the central aspects of its findings, including the identification of perpetrators and number of victims, it relies on unrebutted Adjudicated Facts. With regard to other aspects, the Trial Chamber relied on, among others, Dražen Erdemović, Witness RM-255, and Witness RM-346. In order to assess the reliability of the witnesses' evidence, it observed their demeanour while testifying, considered that their evidence was internally consistent, and considered that their evidence was overall consistent with each other. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that their evidence is reliable.

2859. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.9.1, the Trial Chamber finds that on or about 14 or 15 July 1995, members of the VRS Zvornik Brigade's 1st Battalion killed at least eight Bosnian-Muslim men at the Kula School near Pilica.<sup>12578</sup> The VRS soldiers killed some of the men by shooting them outside of the school, and others by keeping them in hot, overcrowded conditions with no food or water. The victims wore civilian clothing.

<sup>12578</sup> In determining the total number of victims, the Trial Chamber has considered, inter alia, evidence that one person might have committed suicide at Kula school. In addition, it is insufficiently clear whether the body seen by Witness RM-255 was included in the nine bodies seen by Bogdanović. The Trial Chamber has, therefore, made a conservative calculation that the minimum number of victims was eight.

2860. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.9.2, the Trial Chamber notes that it received extensive forensic evidence concerning the bodies exhumed from the Branjevo Military farm and the Čančari Road 4, 8, 9, 11, and 12 mass graves. The Trial Chamber has considered Adjudicated Fact 1604, and the evidence of Witness RM-346, Witness RM-255 and Richard Butler, according to which the men detained at Kula School were transported to, executed, and buried in the Branjevo Military Farm. It has also considered the evidence of Haglund, Baraybar and Janc with respect to the connections between the primary mass grave at the Branjevo Military Farm and the secondary mass graves at Čančari Road. The Trial Chamber considers that since the Branjevo Military Farm and Čančari Road mass graves contained bodies from multiple incidents, the evidence of Haglund, Baraybar, and Janc, in this respect, does not establish the total number of victims of the Branjevo Military Farm incident. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that this evidence does not contradict Adjudicated Fact 1612 with respect to the total number of victims.

2861. The Trial Chamber finds that on 16 July 1995, VRS soldiers, including members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment and a group of soldiers from Bratunac, summarily executed between 1,000 and 1,200 male Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Kula School in Pilica by shooting them at the Branjevo Military Farm. The victims were bussed to the farm and led to the execution site in groups of around ten. One of the perpetrators said that they should shoot the victims in the back as opposed to the head so their brains would not spill out. The perpetrators ordered the victims to turn their backs or to lie down before they were shot. The victims were men aged between 17 and 70 and some of them had their hands tied and were blindfolded. Just prior to killing the detainees, the soldiers from Bratunac beat them and humiliated some of the detainees by forcing them to 'pray in the Muslim manner'. The perpetrators cursed the detainees by telling them 'Alija does not want you, step out'. Perpetrators were saying to one another: 'don't commit genocide, if you want to kill ... take a rifle and strike in a military way' and 'we committed the genocide like in Jasenovac in 1941.' The Trial Chamber also finds that the victims of this incident were buried at the Branjevo Military Farm mass grave, and that bodies from this mass grave were subsequently reburied in the Čančari Road 4, 8, 9, 11, and 12 mass graves.

2862. With regard to Scheduled Incident E.10.1, the Trial Chamber has considered the Defence submission that the Prosecution presented only 'limited evidence' that was insufficient to establish the perpetrators and circumstances of death. The Chamber notes, however, the Prosecution adduced evidence from multiple witnesses, as set out above, which the Trial Chamber found to be relevant and probative in determining the alleged perpetrators and the circumstances of the victims' deaths. Having considered this evidence as well as the relevant adjudicated facts, the Trial Chamber finds that on 16 July 1995, VRS soldiers, including soldiers from Bratunac, killed approximately 500 Bosnian-Muslim men and two women inside the Pilica Cultural Centre. The soldiers killed the victims by shooting them and using hand-grenades against them. Some of the victims were wearing civilian clothes. Lieutenant-Colonel Vujadin Popović oversaw the execution process.

2863. The Trial Chamber will further consider these incidents in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.11 Bišina (Schedule E.12.1)

2864. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the killing of over 30 Bosnian-Muslim men, some of whom had previously been detained in Sušica prison, in Bišina in Šekovići Municipality on 23 July 1995.<sup>12579</sup> The Defence argued that (i) Witness RM-318 failed to provide an adequate explanation when confronted with evidence excluding the presence of Popović in Bišina on 23 July 1995 and (ii) the criminal activities charged were committed by individuals outside the VRS chain of command.<sup>12580</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence from Svetozar Andrić, Commander of the VRS Birač Brigade in Šekovići from 19 May 1992 to 6 August 1995, then Chief of Staff of the DK until March 1996;<sup>12581</sup> Witness RM-318, a Bosnian-Serb VRS military policeman in July 1995;<sup>12582</sup> Witness RM-285, a member of the DK;<sup>12583</sup> Dragan Todorović, a Bosnian Serb who served as a logistics officer in the 10th Sabotage Detachment unit of the VRS;<sup>12584</sup> Ljubomir Bojanović, a member of the Zvornik Brigade in 1995;<sup>12585</sup> Nikodin Jovičić, Deputy Commander of the Uniformed Police for the Han Pijesak SJB in July 1995;<sup>12586</sup> Dušan Janc, an investigator;<sup>12587</sup> and Helge Brunborg, a demographer who analyzed the deaths in Srebrenica,<sup>12588</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

2865. According to Svetozar Andrić, the Birač Infantry Brigade was established on 19 May 1992 and had its command post in Šekovići.<sup>12589</sup> As of late January 1993, its zone of responsibility comprised of the municipalities of Šekovići, Kalesija, and part of the municipality of Kladanj.<sup>12590</sup> As of 30 October 1993, its zone of responsibility started from Memići village, in the east, and was around 62 kilometres in length towards the west, encompassing the Bišina area.<sup>12591</sup> The Brigade consisted of five infantry battalions.<sup>12592</sup> The 3rd Bišina Battalion had its combat position along the defence line between Makalići and Zboj.<sup>12593</sup>

2866. Witness RM-318 testified that approximately ten days after the fall of Srebrenica, at around 8 or 9 a.m., he and two other soldiers were ordered to drive to the nearby Sušica prison in Vlasenica Municipality, which he believed was under the control of the VRS at that time, to collect detainees and take them to be exchanged.<sup>12594</sup> A vehicle log indicates that a TAM-110 truck carrying 15 people took the Vlasenica-Bišina-Vlasenica route on 23 July 1995.<sup>12595</sup> When they arrived at Sušica prison, another truck was already there.<sup>12596</sup> After the prison security officers loaded detainees onto the witness's truck, the convoy, consisting of the two trucks and a car, set off in the direction of Šekovići, stopping at the Lovac restaurant just before Šekovići.<sup>12597</sup> At the restaurant, more detainees were loaded onto the two trucks.<sup>12598</sup> The convoy then set out in the direction of Bišina.<sup>12599</sup>

2867. Witness RM-285 stated that on 23 July 1995, in the meantime, his commander 'Momo' Amović ordered him to pick up people by the side of a road near Dragasevac.<sup>12600</sup> The Vlasenica base of the 10th Sabotage Detachment was in Dragasevac.<sup>12601</sup> When he arrived there, five or six men in military fatigues of different colours, masked and wearing caps over their heads, got into the car.<sup>12602</sup> On the basis of hearing these men speak to each other, he concluded that there were some Muslims and some Croats among them.<sup>12603</sup> With regard to the mixed composition of the 10th Sabotage Detachment, the Trial Chamber refers to chapter 3.1.2. Around noon, the witness drove the men to the 4th Battalion of the Šekovići Brigade in Bišina, stopping about 200 to 300 metres away from the 4th Battalion headquarters, along a macadam road.<sup>12604</sup> The witness stated that Amović had initially told him to take the men to the Šekovići Brigade, but en route, one of the men who had gotten in the car had told the witness to head directly to the 4th Battalion.<sup>12605</sup>

2868. Witness RM-318 testified that when they stopped on a village road in Bišina, he noticed that a second car, which he recognized as Vujadin Popović's car, a Golf D-2, had joined the convoy.<sup>12606</sup> Five soldiers then got out of the first car.<sup>12607</sup> Among them were soldiers who had the insignia of the 10th Sabotage Detachment on their upper left sleeve, soldiers who wore camouflage uniforms, and soldiers who wore civilian T-shirts.<sup>12608</sup> The witness could not see their faces because they were wearing hats and sunglasses.<sup>12609</sup> Witness RM-285 noticed that all of them carried automatic rifles.<sup>12610</sup> He also observed three or four men in uniform standing close to the 4th Battalion headquarters wearing belts that were either yellow or white, and two vehicles, one of which was a TAM-110 truck.<sup>12611</sup> The witness was instructed to wait near the barracks that were being built about one kilometre away.<sup>12612</sup>

the same rate until all detainees had been taken off the trucks.<sup>12615</sup> The witness did not know how many detainees were in the two trucks, but testified that normally these types of trucks carried ten people with equipment.<sup>12616</sup> The five soldiers finished the task very quickly, got back into their car, and left.<sup>12617</sup> When asked what had just happened, Popović did not reply and had tears in his eyes.<sup>12618</sup> Popović was present during the entire incident, but the witness did not see him give any orders to the five soldiers.<sup>12619</sup> After a while, a big construction machine arrived and dug a hole.<sup>12620</sup> Popović then asked two of the soldiers to bury the bodies, which they did.<sup>12621</sup> According to a vehicle log, the Golf D-2 used by Popović travelled along the Vlasenica-Zvornik-Vlasenica route on 23 July 1995.<sup>12622</sup> According to Witness RM-318, Bišina is not on that route.<sup>12623</sup> Witness RM-285 stated that after three to five hours, the men he had dropped off approached the car and told the witness to drive them back to the road near Dragasevac.<sup>12624</sup>

2870. According to a vehicle log, the car driven by Witness RM-285 carried eight people and took the Vlasenica-Šekovići-Bišina-Šekovići route on 23 July 1995.<sup>12625</sup> According to the witness, vehicle logs were supposed to be signed immediately after a journey was finished, but on this occasion his vehicle log was not signed. After his journey, he was told to leave the vehicle log on a desk and get out. Two or three days later, there was a signature on the vehicle log and his 'boss' asked him whose signature it was.<sup>12626</sup> The witness could not discern whose signature it was, but his 'boss' told him that Popović was probably the one in charge, so the witness wrote Popović's name next to the signature.<sup>12627</sup> On 23 July 1995, Ljubomir Bojanović, in accordance with his duties as the Duty Operations Officer, recorded in the duty operations officer's

2871. One witness provided evidence about one of the victims of this incident. Nikodin Jovičić stated that Himzo Mujić, a Bosnian Muslim from the Muslim village of Rijeke, was an operational contact of his, but that he had lost contact with him in mid-1992.<sup>12629</sup> According to the transcript of a phone intercept of 24 July 1995 between 'Kane' and an unknown person, Mujić was a detainee, and in an attempt to be exchanged, had mentioned the witness's name.<sup>12630</sup> The witness stated that Goran Kanostrevac, a.k.a. Kane, was the Chief of the Han Pijesak SJB.<sup>12631</sup> The intercept furthermore specifies that a certain Dragić was the warden of the prison in which Mujić was detained.<sup>12632</sup> According to the transcript of another phone intercept of the same day, between two unidentified individuals, Mujić was no longer in the prison and Popović was the only one who knew where Mujić went and what had happened to him.<sup>12633</sup>

DNA examinations identified 16 individuals.<sup>12637</sup> A 2008 Tuzla Canton exhumation report indicates that 39 bodies were exhumed from a primary mass grave in Bišina located near the local road to the Sajtovići neighbourhood.<sup>12638</sup> Twenty-seven of the bodies had wire ligatures around their hands.<sup>12639</sup> A 2009 report on the people reported missing and dead after the take-over of Srebrenica includes the names of all 39 individuals later identified from the Bišina grave, indicating that 38 of them were male while the gender for one individual, with the first name Mirsad, is not listed.<sup>12640</sup> According to the report, 85.8 to 99.1 per cent of the 7,663 individuals reported missing and dead in Srebrenica were of Muslim ethnicity, as checked against the 1991 Population Census.<sup>12641</sup> According to another 2009 report on the people missing from Srebrenica, 27 of the bodies exhumed from the mass grave in Bišina were identified from ABiH military records of dead and missing soldiers and other military personnel.<sup>12642</sup>

2873. The Trial Chamber sees no merit in the Defence's argument that Witness RM-318 failed to provide an adequate explanation when confronted with evidence that excluded the presence of Popović in Bišina on 23 July 1995.<sup>12643</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Witness RM-318 was presented with the vehicle log for Popović's car and the <sup>12641</sup> P1901 (Prosecution 2009 Progress Report on the DNA-Based Identification by ICMP, 9 April 2009), p. 3. The list of 7,663 individuals reported missing and dead includes the records of 1,032 missing persons that could not be linked with the 1991 census. The report states that although the ethnicity of these unlinked individuals is unknown, it can be safely assumed that the proportion of Muslims among them is about the same as for those who were linked, which would bring the total of missing Muslims to 7,619, or 99.1 per cent. The Trial Chamber moreover notes that the report lists an additional 213 individuals reported as missing in the ICMP records. These individuals were not included in the analysis on ethnicity and include one of the individuals identified from the Bišina grave.

<sup>12642</sup> P1900 (2009 Integrated Report on Srebrenica Missing Including a Progress Report on DNA-Based Identification, 9 April 2009), pp. 56, 96. The Trial Chamber notes that the report indicates that the ABiH military reports may include non-army personnel and that the expert assessed that the impact of this was likely small, but would need further investigation, see ibid. pp. 94-95.

<sup>12643</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that when Witness RM-318 was presented with the vehicle log for Popović's car, D341, and the notebook of the Duty Operations Officer of the Zvornik Brigade, P1501, notebook of the Duty Operations Officer of the Zvornik Brigade and was asked if this evidence would change his claim regarding Popović's presence in Bišina during the alleged killings, and the witness responded that it would not.<sup>12644</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the witness gave a reliable and coherent eyewitness account of the events unfolding in Bišina that day and, having never seen the evidence presented to him before, was not in a position to weigh it against his own testimony. The Trial Chamber therefore rejects the Defence's contention that the witness's response was inadequate. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that the Duty Operations Officer's notebook presented to the witness does not exclude the presence of Popović in Bišina during the alleged killings.<sup>12645</sup> With regard to the vehicle log, the Trial Chamber notes that the entry referring to the duration that the vehicle was used on 23 July is incomplete, the date of 23 July appears to have been altered, and the entry referring to the vehicle's odometer reading on 28 July does not match up with the corresponding entry pertaining to the number of kilometres travelled that day.<sup>12646</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore not convinced of the accuracy of the entries in the log. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's submission in its totality.

2874. The Trial Chamber notes that the forensic evidence, in particular Janc's report, refers to the discovery of two mass graves, one being the Bišina grave near the Sajtovići neighbourhood and the other one a cave in the Bišina area. In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes that Witness RM-318 testified that he was present during the killings, the digging of the grave, and the burial of the bodies and did not testify to the presence of a cave at the grave site. In light of this, and given that the number of bodies exhumed from the grave in Bišina, near the Sajtovići neighbourhood, is close to the number of victims indicated by Witness RM-318, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the forensic evidence in relation to the grave relates to Scheduled Incident E.12.1. The Trial Chamber, therefore, will not further consider the forensic evidence in relation to the cave in the Bišina area in relation to this incident.

and was asked if this evidence would change his claim regarding Popović's presence in Bišina during the alleged killings, the witness responded that it would not. Witness RM-318, T. 14895-14900.

2875. The Trial Chamber further notes that it received no direct evidence regarding the ethnicity of the individuals found in the Bišina grave. However, the Trial Chamber received evidence that 27 of the 39 individuals exhumed from the mass grave in Bišina were members of the ABiH. All 39 individuals identified from the Bišina grave were moreover included in the 2009 report on the people reported missing and dead after the take-over of Srebrenica. Out of the 7,663 people reported as missing and dead from Srebrenica, 85.8 per cent are confirmed to have been Bosnian Muslim, while up to 99.1 per cent are estimated to have been Bosnian Muslims. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that, if not all, almost all of the individuals found in the Bišina grave were Bosnian Muslims.

2876. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 23 July 1995, members of the VRS 10th Sabotage Detachment shot and killed 39 men and boys, almost all of whom were Bosnian Muslims, in Bišina.<sup>12647</sup> With regard to the Defence's argument that the evidence is insufficient to establish involvement of an entire VRS unit or the 10th Sabotage Detachment and instead shows criminal activity outside the VRS chain of command, the Trial Chamber notes that it did not receive any evidence supporting this claim. On the contrary, Witness RM-318 identified some of the soldiers as members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment. In addition, Witness RM-285 picked up the soldiers near the base of the 10th Sabotage Detachment. Among those killed were Himzo Mujić, a Bosnian-Muslim man, and two minors. Several of the bodies exhumed from the gravesite in Bišina had ligatures on their hands and a few had blindfolds on. The Trial Chamber will further consider the above in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

<sup>12647</sup> As noted above, the Prosecution 2009 Progress Report on the DNA-Based Identification by ICMP does not indicate the gender for one victim with the first name Mirsad. In light of the fact that Mirsad is a common name for males in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Trial Chamber finds that this person was also male.

7.12 Trnovo (Schedule E.13.1)

2877. According to the Indictment, sometime in late July or early August 1995, members of the Serb forces and Bosnian-Serb political and governmental organs (as defined in the Indictment) killed six Bosnian Muslim men and boys from Srebrenica near the town of Trnovo. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Witness RM-280, a Serb from Croatia;<sup>12648</sup> Mujo Subašić, a Bosnian Muslim from Podžepelj in Han Pijesak Municipality, who worked as a nurse in the Srebrenica hospital from April 1993 until 11 July 1995;<sup>12649</sup> Witness RM-311, a Muslim from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>12650</sup> and Dušan Janc, a former ICTY Prosecution investigator;<sup>12651</sup> as well as documentary evidence in relation to this incident.

2878. Witness RM-280 testified that at a certain point in 1995, after an operation in Velika Kladuša, the Assistant Minister of Police for the RSK, Milan Milanović a.k.a. Mrgud, told the Skorpions that they would go to Trnovo in Bosnia-Herzegovina for an operation.<sup>12652</sup> Mrgud provided the unit with new badges from the Serbian MUP.<sup>12653</sup> Sometime around early July 1995, the unit, comprising approximately 150 men, travelled from Đeletovci to Trnovo.<sup>12654</sup> Two days after arrival, the unit was sent to a defence line on Mount Treskavica.<sup>12655</sup> The Skorpions replaced one VRS or police unit in the area.<sup>12656</sup> The witness was told that units were regrouping around Srebrenica and that the purpose of the operation was to simulate an attack on Sarajevo.<sup>12657</sup> The simulated attack took place simultaneously with the Serb offensive in Srebrenica.<sup>12658</sup> During the operation, the Skorpions worked in co-ordination with VRS units, in an area falling under the responsibility of the SRK.<sup>12659</sup> The witness further specified that during the operation, Medić and a man known as ‘Asteriks’ received their orders from Mrgud, who himself received his orders from the Serbian SDB.<sup>12660</sup> The witness testified that the members avoided referring to themselves as Skorpions when dealing with the VRS and rather claimed to be from the police of the RSK.<sup>12661</sup> The operation lasted for approximately 21 days and the Skorpions returned to Đeletovci in late July or early August 1995.<sup>12662</sup>

Srebrenica.<sup>12681</sup> Witness RM-311 identified Safet Fejzić in video stills shown to her by a Prosecution investigator.<sup>12682</sup> Fejzić was not in the military and was a 17-year old minor dressed in civilian clothes, when he fled Srebrenica with the column of men, which was the last time that the witness saw him alive.<sup>12683</sup> According to a report authored by Janc, the remains of six bodies, including those of three minors, two aged 16 and one aged 17 at the time of the killings, were recovered from Godinjske Bare near Trnovo, on 28 April 1999, and subsequently identified.<sup>12684</sup> All of the individuals were reported to have disappeared on 11 or 12 July 1995 after the take-over of the Srebrenica enclave by the VRS.<sup>12685</sup>

2882. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that sometime between mid-July and mid-August 1995, members of the Skorpions Unit, commanded by Slobodan Medić, killed six detained Bosnian-Muslim males dressed in civilian clothing, at a location near Trnovo. Before they were shot, a member of the Skorpions Unit said to the victims, “Fuck you and your Alija who gave you thick socks to wage war in.” The victims, two aged 16 and one aged 17, were reported missing on 11 or 12 July after the fall of Srebrenica. At the time, the Skorpions worked in coordination with VRS units in an area under the responsibility of the SRK. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.13 Potočari (Schedule E.14)

7.13.1 Near the UN Compound (Schedule E.14.1)

2883. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for killing nine Bosnian-Muslim men near the UN Compound on the Budak side of the main road in Potočari on or about 12 July 1995.<sup>12686</sup> The Defence argued that the absence of eyewitness to the killings and the evidence on the presence of MUP at the White House at the time of the incident suggests that it cannot be concluded beyond reasonable doubt that VRS soldiers perpetrated this alleged killing.<sup>12687</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 1486 with regard to this incident. Further, it received evidence from Hana Mehmedović, a Bosnian Muslim from Bostahovina in Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>12688</sup> Eelco Koster, a member of DutchBat;<sup>12689</sup> and Robert Franken, the Deputy Commanding Officer of DutchBat in Potočari from 15 January to late July 1995,<sup>12690</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Fact.<sup>12691</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Behara Krdžić, a Bosnian Muslim from Sase, Srebrenica Municipality.<sup>12692</sup>

2884. During the days immediately after the fall of the Srebrenica enclave, a number of corpses were discovered in the Potočari area.<sup>12693</sup> The bodies of nine men who had been killed were discovered on 13 July by DutchBat in a field near the river, about 500 metres from the UN Compound.<sup>12694</sup> The dead men were all dressed in civilian clothes and had been shot in the back.<sup>12695</sup> One of the DutchBat soldiers, Eelco Koster, testified that, on the same day, he saw nine people lying roughly in a line on their stomachs with their heads bent forwards.<sup>12696</sup> The witness thought that they had been shot fairly recently, as the blood had not yet clotted, but he could not tell exactly how long the bodies had been lying there.<sup>12697</sup> The location where the bodies were found is on the west side of the main road.<sup>12698</sup> Budak is on the west side of the main road.<sup>12699</sup> Robert Franken specified that he received a report that the bodies had been found in the meadow near a brook, 80 to 100 metres south - south west of the White House.<sup>12700</sup> The Chamber also received evidence from Hana Mehmedović and Behara Krdžić in relation to the people who had gathered in and around the UN compound and the presence of ‘Chetniks’ during these alleged killings, which has been reviewed in chapter 7.1.3.

2886. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 12 July 1995, members of the VRS<sup>12701</sup> led some Bosnian-Muslim men who had gathered in and around the UN compound in Potočari towards the river near Budak, situated about 500 metres from the compound. There, in a field close to the river, the members of the VRS lined up nine of the men, shot them in the back, killing them. The men were wearing civilian clothes. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 through 6 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

<sup>12701</sup> With regard to the Defence’s argument concerning the perpetrators of this killing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the authorities in charge of the Bosnian-Muslims in Potočari on 12 July 1995 at the time of the killing are responsible for this killing incident and refers to its finding in chapters 7.1.3 and 7.1.5.

7.13.2 Near the 'White House' (Schedule E.14.2)

2887. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for killing one Bosnian-Muslim man behind a building near the White House in Potočari on or about 13 July 1995.<sup>12702</sup> The Defence challenged the credibility of Paul Groenewegen and submitted that the witness could not identify the perpetrator and that it was therefore impossible to establish that the perpetrator of this alleged crime was a VRS member.<sup>12703</sup> It further submitted that the evacuation proceeded without mistreatment and that therefore the killing of the man could have been the act of a few individuals without any superior order.<sup>12704</sup> Additionally, it submitted that Groenewegen testified that the perpetrators of this alleged crime hesitated as to who would fire the shot and that this is not the way a professional soldier would execute an order.<sup>12705</sup> Therefore, it is not proven beyond reasonable doubt that the killing was ordered.<sup>12706</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence from Paul Groenewegen, a member of DutchBat stationed in Potočari from January until July 1995;<sup>12707</sup> Robert Franken, the Deputy Commanding Officer of DutchBat in Potočari from 15 January to late July 1995,<sup>12708</sup> Witness RM-268 a member of the Special Police Brigade in 1995;<sup>12709</sup> Joseph Kingori, an UNMO present in the Srebrenica enclave from March 1995 to around 20 July 1995;<sup>12710</sup> Ljubodrag Gajić, a member of the MUP 1st Company of the Jahorina Training Centre;<sup>12711</sup> Witness RM-362, who lived in Srebrenica Municipality until 11 July 1995;<sup>12712</sup> and Miladin Mladenović, a watchman at the Vihor vehicle fleet in Borkovac during the Srebrenica operation.<sup>12713</sup>

2888. Robert Franken testified that around 12 July 1995 he received reports that the men in the White House were being treated badly.<sup>12714</sup> Franken sent DutchBat patrols to the White House in the afternoon, but they were blocked by the Serb forces.<sup>12715</sup> Franken informed Colonel Janković about the mistreatment of the men, and Janković told him that the men were POWs and that if the Serb soldiers' actions were too aggressive, he would take steps to prevent it.<sup>12716</sup> However, Janković also stated that he had nothing to do with the evacuation because he was only there to deal with the withdrawal of DutchBat.<sup>12717</sup> Franken did not know whether Janković took any steps to prevent the aggression, but he did not see any results thereof.<sup>12718</sup>

2889. Paul Groenewegen testified that on 13 July 1995 three or four Serb soldiers, wearing camouflage uniforms in various shades or colours, separated a man, by force, from the rest of the 'refugees' gathered in Potočari.<sup>12719</sup> The man was wearing blue jeans and a blue-green sweater and was unarmed; the witness believed him to be a civilian and approximately 30 or 40 years old.<sup>12720</sup> The camouflage uniforms worn by the soldiers were identical to those worn by the vast majority of the soldiers present at the site.<sup>12721</sup> Based on his observation of how the soldiers behaved and their interactions with other soldiers present, the witness concluded that the soldiers must have belonged to the VRS.<sup>12722</sup> The witness strayed further from the road where the crowd was gathered, and approximately 10 to 15 minutes after seeing the man being taken away, he saw the Serb soldiers turning the man with his face towards the wall of a house, and one of the soldiers shot the man in the head from a distance of about three metres.<sup>12723</sup> The man who had been shot collapsed immediately after being hit by the bullet.<sup>12724</sup> The witness observed this incident from a distance of about 30 metres with nothing obstructing his view except the corner of the house, which prevented him from seeing the face of the man who had been shot.<sup>12725</sup> The shooting took place 100 to 150 metres away from the rest of the ‘refugees’.<sup>12726</sup> Other Serb soldiers in the vicinity saw the incident but did not react and continued their activities.<sup>12727</sup> The witness unofficially reported the incident to his sergeant that evening, and gave an official statement to Lieutenant Schotman the next morning.<sup>12728</sup>

2890. Joseph Kingori testified that on 13 July, the men who had been separated from the women were continuously held under gravely dissatisfactory circumstances in the White House, which was lacking water, food, and sanitation.<sup>12729</sup> Ljubodrag Gajić testified that DutchBat members protested about the poor conditions in the White House and the fact that the Bosnian-Muslim men who were held there were crammed inside and had to sit on top of each other.<sup>12730</sup>

2891. Witness RM-268 stated that he did not recall that civilians were abused, hit, kicked or pushed towards or on any of the buses on 13 July, nor did he receive any reports about this.<sup>12731</sup>

2892. The Trial Chamber notes that the Defence raised concerns with regard to Groenewegen’s credibility.<sup>12732</sup> The Trial Chamber took note of these concerns but nevertheless finds his evidence with regard to this incident credible and reliable. Groenewegen provided a detailed account of the killing incident. Although he indicated his lack of knowledge about certain details of the incident, the Trial Chamber considers those details to be of minor relevance and finds that it does not negatively impact his testimony with regard to this incident.

2893. The Trial Chamber reviewed the evidence of Witness RM-268 and Mladenović on the absence of any abuse during the evacuation in Potočari above and in chapter 7.1.5 and further notes that both witnesses did not testify specifically about the absence of any killings in Potočari.

2894. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 13 July 1995, three or four VRS soldiers separated an unarmed Bosnian-Muslim man wearing civilian clothing from the people gathered in Potočari and took him to a house near the White House. One of the VRS soldiers shot the man in the head while his face was turned towards the wall of that house, thereby killing him. The Trial Chamber further finds that the Bosnian-Muslim men at the White House were held under unsatisfactory circumstances and that the house was overcrowded and lacked water and sanitation (see also chapter 7.1.3). The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2 through 6 in the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.14.1 In and around the Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1)

2895. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for killing 50 or more Bosnian-Muslim men inside and outside Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and in the surrounding area between 12 and 15 July 1995.<sup>12733</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts in relation to this incident. It also received evidence from Witness RM-255, Mevludin Orić, and Witness RM-362, all Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>12734</sup> Mile Janjić, Mladen Blagojević, and Pero Andrić, all members of the Bratunac Brigade military police platoon;<sup>12735</sup> Momir Nikolić, the Assistant Commander for Intelligence and Security of the Bratunac Brigade from November 1992 to at least October 1995;<sup>12736</sup> Witness RM-260, a member of the Civilian Protection staff in Bratunac Municipality;<sup>12737</sup> Zlatan Čelanović, a member of the VRS 1st Bratunac Light Infantry Brigade in 1995;<sup>12738</sup> Witness RM-306, a Serb from Bratunac;<sup>12739</sup> Richard Butler, an intelligence research specialist,<sup>12740</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>12741</sup> The Trial Chamber also

It understood that they are the same school and chose to use the name of the school as used in the Indictment throughout the Judgment.

2896. Bojan Subotić testified that on 13 July 1995 at the Nova Kasaba football field, having addressed the Muslims from the column who had surrendered and were being guarded there, Mladić ordered the Commander of the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Motorized Protection Regiment Major Zoran Malinić and the witness to secure the transfer of detainees to Bratunac, stating that the buses and trucks would arrive in an hour or an hour and a half (see also chapter 7.1.6).<sup>12747</sup> In accordance with Mladić's order, the witness was tasked with getting the men onto the buses alive and well, escorting them to Vuk Karadžić Elementary School in Bratunac, and handing them over to the civilian police.<sup>12748</sup> After a while, about six or seven buses, and as many trucks arrived from the direction of Zvornik and Milići, and the witness instructed the Muslim soldiers to drink some water before getting on the buses and trucks.<sup>12749</sup> At around 7 p.m., the column of buses and trucks set off for Bratunac, headed by the witness in a combat armoured vehicle (a 'BOV-7') with about three soldiers from the regiment and escorted, at the rear, by a Praga.<sup>12750</sup> Upon arrival of the column in Bratunac at 9:15 or

9:30 p.m., the witness notified a civilian policeman present at the Elementary School that he was escorting detainees, to which the civilian policeman responded that everything was in order.<sup>12751</sup> The witness saw military police at a checkpoint at the entrance to Bratunac and in the town. While he did not observe military policemen at the school, the witness testified he did not enter Vuk Karadžić Elementary School or the school yard and therefore did not know who was involved in securing the school.<sup>12752</sup> Only some buses entered the school yard due to its size, after which a civilian policeman took over the detainees and the witness together with the soldiers returned to the command.<sup>12753</sup>

2897. Richard Butler testified that, according to a witness, Muslim men were separated in Potočari from women, children, and elderly and moved into a white house across from the UN compound on 13 July 1995.<sup>12754</sup> Once the house was full, the men were loaded into three or four buses and transported to Bratunac, to the old school located behind Vuk Karadžić Elementary School.<sup>12755</sup> Other Muslim detainees arrived at the school throughout that day, and they were all held there until the afternoon of 15 July 1995, when they were transported to Pilica.<sup>12756</sup>

2898. Mevludin Orić stated that around 9 to 10 p.m. on 13 July 1995, he and nine other men were transported by bus from Konjevic Polje to Vuk Karadžić Elementary School where they arrived late in the evening.<sup>12757</sup> They were accompanied, on the bus, by three military policemen who the witness identified by insignia on their arms bearing the letters 'VP'. The witness noted that they were also wearing blue flak jackets he associated with UNPROFOR.<sup>12758</sup> En route to Bratunac the bus stopped in Kravica where about 400 to 500 detainees were sitting on a meadow adjacent to a warehouse, guarded by soldiers.<sup>12759</sup> Some of them were transferred onto the two buses in the witness's convoy until the buses reached capacity.<sup>12760</sup> The witness noted that upon arrival in Bratunac, two additional buses were parked in front of the school, guarded by soldiers.<sup>12761</sup> From 12 to 14 July 1995, several thousand Bosnian-Muslim men were detained in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and on board the between 80 to 120 buses lining the streets of Bratunac Town.<sup>12762</sup> Groups of men were taken from the buses to the school all through the night and did not return.<sup>12763</sup> The prisoners were deprived of sufficient food, water and medical aid.<sup>12764</sup> Orić stated that, in the night of 13 July 1995, a ‘soldier’ wearing a camouflage t-shirt, and who appeared to be drunk, entered the bus which was parked in front of the school, recognized one of the men detained on the bus, and beat him with the wooden butt of his automatic rifle. Whilst beating the man, the ‘soldier’ was asking him who had killed Serbs in Jadro in an ambush. The man replied that he did not know and the ‘soldier’ continued to strike him with his rifle butt and kicked him. The beating continued until the members of the military police, who escorted the bus on its way to the school, returned and chased the ‘soldier’ away.<sup>12765</sup>

2899. Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and the various buildings surrounding it were secured by several units of the Bosnian-Serb Republic armed forces, including by members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon, the special police, the civilian police of the MUP, as well as members of the Drina Wolves and paramilitary formations.<sup>12766</sup> Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police also participated in guarding the hundreds of Bosnian-Muslim men detained in the buses parked around town on the night of 12 and 13 July.<sup>12767</sup> Mile Janjić testified that in the evening of 13 July 1995 he went to the military police building near the Bratunac Brigade headquarters, where Momir Nikolić gave the order that all the policemen present at this moment should engage in protecting the Muslim men brought from Potočari and placed in the school and the buses.<sup>12768</sup> With respect to the buses, Momir Nikolić ordered the policemen not to open the doors of the buses or let anyone in or out, and to keep away civilians from the buses in order to prevent any incidents.<sup>12769</sup> Blagojević testified that on 13 July 1995 he and eight other military policemen, including Milovan Mitrović, Slobodan Mijatović, Borivoje Jakovljević, and Pero Andrić, assisted in securing captured Muslims held at the school following an order issued by a superior officer to do so.<sup>12770</sup>

2900. On the evening of 12 July 1995, prisoners were detained in a warehouse-looking building called the hangar,<sup>12771</sup> which was located behind Vuk Karadžić Elementary School.<sup>12772</sup> Witness RM-362 stated that the detainees were elderly and/or infirm.<sup>12773</sup> The hangar became so full that there was not enough space for everyone to sit down.<sup>12774</sup> The witness estimated that there were at least about 400 people in the hangar.<sup>12775</sup> The detained men complained that they would suffocate due to the lack of space and air. The soldiers threatened to kill them if they did not keep silent.<sup>12776</sup> The witness stated that when they complained about the conditions the guards fired over the men's heads.<sup>12777</sup> One man was taken from the hangar, and the prisoners then heard blunt blows and his screams and moans. When the screams stopped, the soldiers came back with flashlights and called out again for people from various towns to identify themselves.<sup>12778</sup> According to the witness, the soldiers pointed torches at those who responded, and told them they should get up and go out of the hangar.<sup>12779</sup> When prisoners did not respond, the soldiers selected people at random with the beam of a flashlight.<sup>12780</sup> The witness was under the impression that when it was dark, the soldiers were randomly pointing torches at anyone, while the next morning the soldiers were selecting people who seemed to be more fit than the others. People who got up would ask if they needed to take anything with them, in response to which the soldiers would say that they would not need anything anymore.<sup>12781</sup> After those selected left the hangar,

<sup>12770</sup> In his statement, the witness indicated it was Momir Nikolić who issued this order. In court, the witness testified he could not recall whether it was Bratunac Brigade Military Police Commander Mirko Janković or Momir Nikolić who issued the order. the witness heard a voice of soldiers commanding these people to stand in front of them after which the witness would hear blunt blows followed by moaning and screaming, a fall, and a voice saying something like: 'Alright, he is finished. Just drag him off over here.'<sup>12782</sup> According to the witness, a man named Hamed Efendić was taken out from the hangar and shot dead that evening.<sup>12783</sup>

2901. On a few occasions, soldiers brought beaten up prisoners back into the hangar.<sup>12784</sup> Some men had to hold badly beaten prisoners due to the lack of space and some of the wounded died overnight.<sup>12785</sup> On 13 July 1995, the soldiers allowed the prisoners to take the dead bodies out of the hangar.<sup>12786</sup> When the chosen men returned to the hangar they were crying and said that they saw a pile of dead bodies behind the hangar. Witness RM-362 heard the sound of machinery which he described as buses and trucks, arriving. A soldier then entered the hangar and said he needed ten people to go and 'do something'.<sup>12787</sup> Ten men were chosen to load bodies in vehicles and these men never came back.<sup>12788</sup> Witness RM-362 stated that about an hour after the men had left the hangar, he heard the vehicles departing again.<sup>12789</sup>

2902. Prisoners were called out one by one to 'get up' and were either allowed to use a room next to the hangar that was used as a toilet, or they were taken by the shoulder in order to be killed. The witness was taken to the room that was used as a toilet, from where he observed a man taken by the shoulder and being told by a soldier with an automatic rifle to walk towards him, passing three to four other guards on either side of him.<sup>12790</sup> While approaching the armed guard, one of the guards on the left side hit the man with an iron bar on the head. The man fell to the ground and another soldier from the right side started hitting him on his backbone with an axe. The witness was then returned to the hangar.<sup>12791</sup> A tall man with dark hair wearing a camouflage uniform demanded that the people hand over their belongings, including identification documents, money and watches, throwing everything into a bag and threatening them that if anyone tried to hide money he would find out and bring dogs.<sup>12792</sup> Men continued to be taken out of the hangar until the afternoon of 13 July, until two trucks arrived. At that point, the events of the morning were repeated, starting with ten of the men from inside the hangar again being separated and assigned to go to 'do something'.<sup>12793</sup>

2903. Butler testified that, according to a witness, on 13 July 1995 at 6 p.m., one of the detainees counted the number of men in the hangar for transportation purposes, which totalled 296.<sup>12794</sup> Momir Nikolić testified that a member of the civilian protection unit who was responsible for clearing up the relevant terrain, told him that 80 to 100 Muslims had been murdered in the hangar on the evening of 13 July 1995.<sup>12795</sup> After the murder, their bodies were deposited on a hillside and covered with dirt.<sup>12796</sup> Butler testified that the men who survived their detention at the hangar were transported to Grbavci School during the evening of 13 July 1995 in six buses, arriving in the early morning of 14 July.<sup>12797</sup>

2904. Prisoners would frequently be taken out of Vuk Karadžić Elementary School by VRS soldiers in camouflage uniforms and policemen in blue uniforms.<sup>12798</sup> During the nights, when individual prisoners in Bratunac were called out, cries of pain and gunfire could be heard.<sup>12799</sup> Men detained in Bratunac between 12 and 14 July 1995 were executed at night opportunistically.<sup>12800</sup>

2905. Janjić testified that around midnight on 13 July 1995, he heard a male voice from the direction of Vuk Karadžić Elementary School, shouting something like 'People from Glogova, where are you? What are we waiting for? Don't you see they're going to kill us all?'.<sup>12801</sup> Thereafter, the witness heard shootings from the same direction and the shouts did not continue.<sup>12802</sup> Blagojević testified that he heard that some Muslims attempted to escape.<sup>12803</sup> He later heard that armed Bosnian Serbs took Muslims out of buses and killed them behind the school.<sup>12804</sup>

2906. Witness RM-255 testified that on 13 July 1995, shortly after he and other male detainees had arrived at the old school in Bratunac, the military police arrived at the classroom where the witness was held, wearing camouflage uniforms with a round insignia on the sleeve which had 'POLICIA' written on it.<sup>12805</sup> One military policeman started to beat a detainee with a whip and a rifle. After the military police had left the classroom with two of the detainees, the witness could hear screams for help coming from outside. The military police later came back and took out the man who had been beaten, and he never returned. The detainees were forced to stay in a sitting position and were not allowed to use the toilets, therefore had to urinate on themselves. Shots were fired from outside to prevent the detainees from standing up or from looking through the window. The remaining detainees stayed in the classroom until 15 July 1995.<sup>12806</sup>

2907. Zlatan Čelanović testified that on the evening of 12 July 1995, or the morning of 13 July 1995, he met with Ljubiša Beara in the yard in front of the military police building in Bratunac, which was located next to the Bratunac Brigade Headquarters.<sup>12807</sup> Beara enquired whether the witness had any information about any individuals who had 'sinned' against the Serb people, and asked the witness to interrogate individuals.<sup>12808</sup> On 13 July 1995 at approximately 10 or 11 a.m., the witness observed that soldiers - who referred to themselves as the 'special forces' - arrived in front of the building, <sup>12804</sup> Mladen Blagojević, T. 32638-32639. In a verdict of 6 November 2008 by the court of Bosnia-Herzegovina in the case against Mladen Blagojević, the court held that on the night of 13 to 14 July 1995 several hundred civilian Bosnian-Muslim men were detained in Vuk Karadžić Elementary School. One of the Bosnian-Muslim men appeared at the window of a room at the school, whereupon, Mladen Blagojević mounted on a Pinzgauer (military vehicle), pointed a Browning machine gun at the window at which a Bosnian-Muslim man appeared and opened fire from the gun targeting both the man and other men inside the same room, while the bullets hit the window and the wall around the window. P1517 (Bosnia-Herzegovina Court Verdict, 6 November 2008), p. 2. In court, Blagojević confirmed the verdict against him was upheld on appeal, T. 32610-32611. When confronted with this verdict, Blagojević conceded he had been ordered to operate the Browning machine gun, but denied having fired it at the prisoners inside the school. Instead, Blagojević claimed that at some point that evening, he had left the Pinzgauer on which the Browning machine gun was mounted, following which he believed 'military policemen and the army troops who were there' fired the machine gun at the prisoners inside the school. The witness testified he observed the machine gun being fired from a distance, Mladen Blagojević, T. 32610-32611, 32641-32645.

Elementary School and at the stadium.<sup>12816</sup> The witness told Beara that he was concerned about the security of the town, considering the large number of Muslim detainees in contrast to the number of Serb soldiers, to which Beara responded, 'I hope that they will make it through the night and we will too, because I guess they're going to Kladanj tomorrow'.<sup>12817</sup> Then they walked towards the school; on the way Beara observed the vehicles and the guards but did not address any of the detainees.<sup>12818</sup> When the witness asked why the detainees on the vehicles were not being transported out of Bratunac immediately, Beara responded that there were too few vehicles to transport them.<sup>12819</sup> The vehicles that took women and children had to be returned, then transportation would be reorganized, and the detainees would be transported to Kladanj the next morning. 2909. Between 12 and 14 July 1995, more than 50 Bosnian-Muslim men were summarily executed in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School.<sup>12827</sup> On or after 15 July 1995, 40 to 50 bodies were discovered in the classrooms at the school in Bratunac.<sup>12828</sup> Blagojević testified that on the morning of 14 July, he saw bodies of 10 to 15 Muslims in a second floor hallway in the school and four or five bodies outside the school.<sup>12829</sup> The witness did not report the killings to his superiors.<sup>12830</sup> Detainees were taken out of the school and put on buses in the presence of the civilian police and the army.<sup>12831</sup> One of the police officers, Sreten Micić, was pushing and hurrying people onto the bus.<sup>12832</sup> The witness saw some people being taken out of the bus by people wearing uniforms, brought behind the school, and heard shots.<sup>12833</sup>

2912. Witness RM-306 testified that on 14 July 1995, in accordance with the order of Colonel Beara, graves were dug out by workers from Bratunac Public Utility Company in Glogova and the burial operation was carried out.<sup>12837</sup> The witness assumed the bodies were from Kravica, however a group of workers collected 10 to 15 bodies in Konjević Polje.<sup>12838</sup> They also collected a military bus full of bodies from the road between Konjević Polje and Bratunac and five to six bodies from Vuk Karadžić Elementary School.<sup>12839</sup> All these bodies were buried in the graves in Glogova.<sup>12840</sup> On that same day, the witness saw these five to six bodies in front of Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and one of the drivers told him about a lot more bodies in the vicinity of the school.<sup>12841</sup>

2913. Witness RM-346 testified that on 13 July 1995, approximately an hour before night fell, he and the other prisoners were ordered to get onto buses which drove to Bratunac and the detainees had to spend the night on the buses.<sup>12842</sup> During the night he heard shooting and four or five men were taken out of the bus and did not return.<sup>12843</sup> On the morning of 14 July 1995, the driver started the engine and turned on the heating and then left the bus.<sup>12844</sup> The detainees were not given any water and during the afternoon some people fainted because of the heat.<sup>12845</sup> Later, the buses drove northwards, through Zvornik, towards the area of Pilica.<sup>12846</sup>

2914. Witness RM-265 stated on 13 July 1995, Muslim men started to gather at the intersection; they were then directed by soldiers to a gas station building on the right-hand side of the road.<sup>12847</sup> Once that building was full, the remaining Muslims, about 30 men, were taken to another building nearby.<sup>12848</sup> To the witness' knowledge, both groups were transferred to Bratunac.<sup>12849</sup> The witness later heard that the men were detained in Vuk Karadžić Elementary School, the civil technical engineering school and a hangar located between both schools.<sup>12850</sup> Upon orders of Nikolić, the military police was assigned to assist another unit in guarding these detainees in Bratunac.<sup>12851</sup> 2915. The Trial Chamber received forensic evidence regarding primary graves in Glogova and connected secondary graves in Zeleni Jadar, Blječeva, Zalazje and Budak, which it reviewed in chapter 7.4, and found that Hamed Efendić's remains were identified by DNA in the Zeleni Jadar 5 secondary grave.<sup>12852</sup> It considered that the persons found in the graves at Glogova were killed in various incidents, and some of them were reburied in secondary graves. The Trial Chamber observes that in relation to the killings at Vuk Karadžić Elementary School, it has only identified Hamed Efendić from the aforementioned graves. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber was unable to rely on this forensic evidence to determine the number of victims of this scheduled incident.

2916. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Bojan Subotić, who testified that on the evening of 13 July 1995, he only saw military police at a checkpoint at the entrance of Bratunac and in the town, but not near Vuk Karadžić Elementary School. This seems to contrast Adjudicated Fact 1506 that Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and the various buildings surrounding it were secured by, amongst others, members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon. The witness testified that he arrived in Bratunac on 13 July at around 9:15 or 9:30 p.m. and left shortly after. He further testified that he did not enter the school or its yard and that he did not know who was inside, securing the school. Considering the limited time the witness spent in Bratunac and in light of the fact that he did not approach or enter the school that day, also the fact that the witness did not see military police does not necessarily mean that they were not present there, the Trial Chamber finds that his evidence does not contradict Adjudicated Fact 1506 regarding the presence of military police on 13 July 1995 in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School.

2917. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that from 12 to 14 July 1995, members of the VRS Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon, members of the special police, members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP civilian police, members of the Drina Wolves and paramilitary formations held several thousand Bosnian-Muslim civilians and soldiers in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School, and on buses parked outside the school. Members of the aforementioned groups killed more than 50 Bosnian-Muslim men<sup>12853</sup> inside and outside the school in the surrounding area. The first of these killings started on the night of 12 and 13 July. The Chamber will further consider the above incidents in relation to Counts 2 to 6 in chapter 8, below.

7.14.2 In front of the Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.3)

2918. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for executing a ‘mentally retarded’ Bosnian-Muslim man taken off a bus parked in front of the Vuk Karadžić elementary school in Bratunac in the evening of 13 July 1995.<sup>12854</sup> The Defence argued that the evidence of Mevludin Orić is insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the identity of the perpetrator(s) or whether the individual was shot resisting arrest or in self-defence.<sup>12855</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence from Mevludin Orić, a Bosnian Muslim from Lehovići in Srebrenica Municipality,<sup>12856</sup> with regard to this incident. The Trial Chamber also considered the following Adjudicated Facts set out in chapter 7.14.1: 1502-1503, 1505-1506, and 1517-1519.

2919. Mevludin Orić stated that in the night of 13 July 1995, one man, who the witness heard was mentally unstable, fell asleep in a bus parked in front of the Vuk Karadžić school despite an instruction from the military policemen that they were not to sleep that night.<sup>12857</sup> The man was hit on the shoulder by a military policeman and the witness heard from other detainees that the man had hit the policeman back.<sup>12858</sup> Two other military policemen then entered the bus, took the man off it, and dragged him towards the school.<sup>12859</sup> The witness heard a single burst of fire and the man screaming but did not see who fired the shot.<sup>12860</sup> He then heard someone say ‘drag him into the school’.<sup>12861</sup>

<sup>12853</sup> The Trial Chamber observes that Momir Nikolić gave testimony which suggests that the number of victims was significantly greater than 50 persons. Considering that Nikolić’s evidence on this point is hearsay evidence, while the source he relied on did not corroborate this information, the Trial Chamber has not relied on Nikolić’s testimony to determine the number of victims of this scheduled incident.

2920. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that in the night of 13 July 1995, VRS military policemen forced a Bosnian-Muslim man off a bus parked in front of the Vuk Karadžić elementary school in Bratunac Town and dragged him towards the school. Orić did not see the killing but heard fire and the man screaming, and then someone saying ‘drag him into the school’. With regard to the Defence’s submission that the evidence is insufficient to establish the identity of the perpetrator beyond reasonable doubt, the Trial Chamber notes that there is no requirement that perpetrators are identified in order to come to a positive finding; it is sufficient that the affiliation of the perpetrators is known to the Trial Chamber. It further finds that the evidence does not support the Defence’s assertion that that the Bosnian-Muslim man might have been shot while resisting arrest or that the perpetrators were acting in self-defence. Shooting the man, and thereby killing him, was not a proportional and justified response to him allegedly resisting arrest. Moreover, considering the circumstances, namely that an unarmed mentally unstable man had allegedly hit a military policeman in response to being hit by that policeman himself and was consequently dragged off a bus and taken away by at least two military policemen, the Trial Chamber also finds that the perpetrators who shot the man did not do so in self-defence.

2921. Based on this, the Trial Chamber is convinced that the man was killed by the military policemen who forced him off the bus. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2-6 of the Indictment in chapter 8, below.

7.15 Other incidents of killings

2922. In addition to the Scheduled Incidents discussed above, the Indictment further alleges that the Accused is responsible for other killings of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys in Srebrenica.<sup>12862</sup>

Killings on 13 and 14 July 1995 outside the Kravica supermarket

2923. The Prosecution argued that on 13 July 1995, at least four or five trucks escorted by members of the 65th Motorized Protection Regiment Military Police Battalion drove from Nova Kasaba to Kravica and stopped near the supermarket where during the night 'Srebrenica Forces' took five detainees off one of the trucks after which shots were heard and later about ten detainees were beaten and shot near the same truck.<sup>12863</sup>

2924. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.1.6 where it found that during the night of 13 July 1995 and in the morning of 14 July 1995, VRS soldiers, among them a man called Radovan Grujicić from Orahovica in Srebrenica Municipality, shot and killed at least 15 Bosnian-Muslim detainees who were being held in trucks escorted by the Military Police Battalion of the 65th Motorized Protection Regiment outside the supermarket in Kravica. The soldiers selected some men from among the detainees after asking whether they were from certain villages and threatened, beat, and shot them dead. Before Witness RM-253 boarded the trucks he had heard a Serb soldier tell another detainee that he would not get his bag back because he would not need it anymore. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2-6 of the Indictment in chapter 8, below.

Killings on or about 18 July 1995

2925. The Prosecution argued that on or about 19 July 1995, VRS soldiers from the 16th Krajina Motorized Brigade killed at least four Bosnian Muslims whom they had captured at Tisova Kosa.<sup>12864</sup>

2926. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.1.6 where it found that on or about 18 July 1995, VRS soldiers shot and killed four Bosnian Muslims, including a 15-year-old boy, whom they had captured at Tisova Kosa. They beat the Bosnian Muslims and referred to one as ‘Alinovac’ (member of Alija’s army) and ‘Balija’. They forced the Bosnian Muslims to lie down, and ‘Stari’, the commander of the group, ordered his soldiers to shoot them in the back one at a time. While the commander was interrogating Witness RM-358, one of the soldiers came to him and asked the commander if he could use his bayonet to kill one of the captives. The commander answered that he could choose anyone after which the soldier chose the witness. The soldier who had wanted to use the bayonet was not pleased when the commander ordered his men not to kill the witness because as a soldier he could be used for exchange purposes. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2-6 of the Indictment in chapter 8, below.

Killings on or about 23 July 1995 of detainees held at the Standard Barracks at the Zvornik Brigade

2927. The Prosecution argued that on or around 23 July 1995 ten wounded Muslim patients were taken from the Zvornik Barracks and executed by the Zvornik Brigade Military Police.<sup>12865</sup> The Defence submitted that Witness RM-322, who testified about the alleged killings, never witnessed this incident and that his testimony is unreliable.<sup>12866</sup> With regard to this incident, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Jugoslav Gavrić, Director of the Zvornik Hospital in July 1995;<sup>12867</sup> Witness RM-322, an officer in the VRS Zvornik Brigade in 1995;<sup>12868</sup> and Nebojša Jeremić, member of the military police in the Zvornik Brigade from April 1993 until the end of July 1995,<sup>12869</sup> as well as documentary evidence. 2928. According to patient files and a patient log book, eleven males were admitted into the Sveti Nikola Hospital in Milići on 13 July 1995 and were treated there between 13 and 14 July 1995 for various injuries.<sup>12871</sup> On 20 July 1995, the Director of the Milići Hospital reported that following an order by the Chief of the VRS Medical Corps, the Head of the Municipality, and the Chief of the Milići SJB, injured persons were to be transferred to Zvornik Hospital and that Dr. Gavrić had taken charge of them.<sup>12872</sup> Jugoslav Gavrić stated that General Rokvić, Chief Medical Officer of the VRS, ordered him to go to Milići and transfer all 10 to 15 wounded Muslim men to Zvornik Hospital for surgical treatment.<sup>12873</sup> Some of them were heavily wounded.<sup>12874</sup> The witness, a nurse, a policeman, and the driver of the transport vehicle belonging to the 'Drina Transport Cie' arrived in Milići around noon and loaded the patients into the vehicle.<sup>12875</sup> The witness stated that he probably signed for the patients list in Milići.<sup>12876</sup> Towards the evening they arrived at Zvornik Hospital and the witness handed the patients over to Dr. Zoran Lazarević.<sup>12877</sup> According to Milići hospital patient files, all patients were discharged on 14 July 1995 and transferred to Zvornik Hospital for further treatment on the orders of the VRS Chief of the Medical Corps.<sup>12878</sup> Gavrić stated that because some civilians and some patients protested firmly against admitting Muslims to the hospital, the witness asked for security and the hospital ensured that the wounded Muslims were kept separate from the other wounded at the Zvornik hospital.<sup>12879</sup> The following day, the witness heard that all of the wounded had survived the night and had been evacuated to Tuzla in order to be exchanged.<sup>12880</sup> Although it was standard practice in the Zvornik Hospital that patients who were brought in overnight as an emergency case were registered by the emergency service, the witness confirmed that the 10 or 15 Muslim men were not recorded in the Zvornik Hospital medical logbook.<sup>12881</sup> According to the Zvornik Brigade Duty Officer logbook, one patient died on 16 July at Zvornik Hospital.<sup>12882</sup> A report dated 24 July 1995 sent from the director of the Milići Hospital to the DK Command, stated that 18 wounded 'enemy' soldiers had undergone surgery and been transferred to Zvornik Hospital on the orders of the Main Staff.<sup>12883</sup>

2929. Witness RM-322 testified that sometime after 20 July 1995, Pandurević ordered Obrenović to go to the clinic at the Standard Barracks, where up to ten wounded detainees, who had arrived at the clinic upon written instructions from a colonel in the Medical Corps, were being treated.<sup>12884</sup> Because of the concerns related to Bosnian-Serb soldiers receiving medical treatment in the next room, Obrenović was to brief the clinic staff and ensure that there were no security problems in relation to the 'enemy wounded'.<sup>12885</sup> Obrenović told the staff not to let anyone in the room and that the detainees were to be individually transported to Batković camp once they had recovered.<sup>12886</sup> Pandurević referred repeatedly to these detainees at briefings and told the DK that they had to be taken away.<sup>12887</sup> In a 22 July 1995 combat report of the 1st Zvornik Infantry Brigade addressed to the DK Command Pandurević requested instructions as to what to do with the detainees, where to put them, and to whom they should be handed.<sup>12888</sup> On or around 23 July 1995 at about 8 a.m., Pandurević called the DK to resolve the issue of the detainees.<sup>12889</sup> Later, they received word that Colonel Popović would come to deal with the detainees.<sup>12890</sup> The witness knew at this time that the detainees would probably not be taken to Bijeljina as previously stated.<sup>12891</sup> The witness learned, that military policemen from the Zvornik Brigade or DK took the detainees away from the clinic early one morning and shot them dead.<sup>12892</sup> When asked about the detainees on the day they disappeared, Pandurević said that Popović, acting as courier, had passed an order from Mladić to Drago Nikolić to execute these detainees.<sup>12893</sup>

2931. According to a combat report of the 1st Zvornik Infantry Brigade addressed to the DK Command, on 22 July 1995, two companies from the 1st Zvornik Infantry Brigade and one from the MUP, 'combed' the terrain along the Planinci-Perunika-Brezik village line.<sup>12896</sup> During this combat activity, 10 enemy soldiers were liquidated and 23 Muslim soldiers were captured.<sup>12897</sup>

2932. The Trial Chamber also received in evidence transcripts of a number of intercepts that are relevant to this incident. On 23 July 1995 at 8 a.m., Vinko Pandurević told an unidentified person that they were still catching 'Turks', that he had wounded detainees and that he did not know what to do with them or where to send them.<sup>12898</sup> Pandurević asked if the person knew if there was any talk about an exchange for 'these' from Lisača and to whom he should transport 'these'.<sup>12899</sup> The person replied that 2934. In relation to the Defence’s submission regarding Witness RM-322, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of this witness relating to the incident and finds that his account of the sequence of events is generally credible and reliable, except for his unsourced hearsay evidence related to the killing of the detainees from the Standard Barracks on which the Trial Chamber will not rely.

2935. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on or about 23 July 1995, ten injured Bosnian-Muslim male detainees were taken away in trucks by VRS soldiers from the Standard Barracks of the Zvornik Brigade and disappeared.<sup>12907</sup> The Trial Chamber received differing evidence as to their destination and fate: while Gavrić stated that he heard that the men were sent to Tuzla to be exchanged, Jeremić stated that they were sent to Batković. the Trial Chamber will not rely on Gavrić's or Jeremić's evidence on this matter. The Trial Chamber finds, based on the reliable evidence of Witness RM-322 related to the detention of the ten Bosnian Muslims at the Standard Barracks and their subsequent disappearance, as well as exhibits P1901 and P2139, that on or about 23 July 1995 VRS soldiers of the Zvornik Brigade killed the ten detained men while they were in the Zvornik Brigade's custody. The Trial Chamber will further consider this incident in relation to Counts 2-6 of the Indictment in chapter 8, below.

<sup>12907</sup> The Trial Chamber received differing evidence on the number of disappeared Bosnian-Muslim patients. However, based on the most conservative calculation as well as P2137, P2138, P1901, and P1501 the Trial Chamber considers that the minimum number was ten.

7.16 Incidents of ill-treatment

2936. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the terror and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari and the beating of men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution, between 11 July 1995 and 1 November 1995.<sup>12908</sup> In addition, in the same period, the Accused is allegedly responsible for causing serious bodily or mental harm to thousands of female and male Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica, including but not limited to separating men and boys from their families and forcibly removing the women, young children, and some elderly men from the enclave.<sup>12909</sup> The Defence submitted that the population in Potočari was evacuated for humanitarian purposes and that no mistreatment took place during this evacuation.<sup>12910</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts in relation to these incidents.<sup>12911</sup> It further received evidence from Šehra Ibišević, Witness RM-255, Witness RM-362, Witness RM-249, Witness RM-254, and Witness RM-204, all Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Municipality;<sup>12912</sup> Witness RM-274, a member of the ABiH in July 1995;<sup>12913</sup> Witness RM-253, and Witness RM-346, both Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Municipality who served in the ABiH;<sup>12914</sup> Slavko Perić, the Assistant Commander for the Intelligence and Security Section of the 1st Battalion of Moreover, it considers beatings of men and boys of Srebrenica ‘prior to their execution’ to include beatings of men and boys who survived mass executions.

Terrorising and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari

2937. With regard to the alleged terrorising and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.1.3 that on 11 July 1995, Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica fled to Potočari seeking protection within the UNPROFOR compound. On 11 and 12 July 1995, the VRS shelled an area within the vicinity of the UNPROFOR compound, the area of the bus station, and an area near the roads in Potočari, wounding some of the Bosnian Muslims. In the early morning of 12 July 1995, VRS soldiers threw hand grenades into civilian houses in Potočari forcing the inhabitants to flee from their houses to the UNPROFOR compound. ‘Chetniks’ used dogs to move people around the compound, confiscating weapons and clothing from UNPROFOR soldiers, and taking men, boys, and girls away. Some people were raped. Screams, gunshots and other noises, including from women and children, were audible throughout the night between 12 and 13 July 1995 and no one could sleep. As a consequence of the threatening atmosphere, several Bosnian Muslims committed suicide, or attempted to do so.

2938. The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings from the same chapter that on 11 and 12 July 1995, various VRS units, including a unit of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police, and police units, members of the 1st Company of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade and a company from the Zvornik PJP were present in Potočari. On 12 July 1995, the combat unit of the MUP Special Police Brigade, composed of the 2nd Special Police Detachment, a MUP company of the Zvornik Special Police Unit, and a mixed company of the Janja MUP, was present in Potočari and sealed off the compound. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that members of these units created the threatening atmosphere at the compound.

2939. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.1.5 that from 12 to 14 July 1995, the VRS, and more particularly the DK, including members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police, and members of the MUP Special Police Brigade, including the Jahorina Detachment, transferred Bosnian Muslims in Potočari outside the enclave of Srebrenica. In particular, it recalls its finding that soldiers forced those who did not want to leave onto buses and, along with one member of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, hit and abused the Bosnian Muslims and called them names as they boarded the buses. The Bosnian Muslims were restless, partly due to the separation of the mothers from their children. Many people became ill and the babies of ill mothers were abandoned. Moreover, on 12 July 1992, as the Bosnian Muslims began boarding the buses, Bosnian-Serb soldiers systematically separated out men of military age who were trying to get onboard. Assistant Commander for Security and Intelligence, Captain Momir Nikolić, and elements of the Bratunac Brigade, including members of the brigade's military police, participated in these separations. Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police also provided security for the other units engaged in the separations. The separations were frequently aggressive and caused fear among the families. Some of the males were beaten, stoned, insulted, spat on, and sometimes stabbed. The separated men were taken to the White House by members of the MUP Special Police units. Identification papers and personal belongings, including money, were taken away from the separated men detained at the White House; their papers and belongings were piled up and eventually burnt by the VRS. Furthermore, soldiers kicked and hit the men with rifle butts while loading them onto the buses to take them to detention centres in Bratunac. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapter 7.13.2 that Bosnian-Muslim men were held under unsatisfactory circumstances in the White House which was overcrowded and lacking water and sanitation.

2940. The Trial Chamber will further consider these incidents in relation to Counts 2 and 3 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

Beating of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution

2941. With regard to the alleged beatings of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 7.2, 7.5, 7.6, 7.8.1, 7.10, and 7.14.1 on the killings of Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica.

2942. In relation to these killing incidents and based on the evidence reviewed in the same chapters, the Trial Chamber finds that from 12 to about 16 July 1995, several perpetrators beat Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution.<sup>12923</sup> The beatings on the road to Konjević Polje and near Konjević Polje intersection (Schedule E.1.1) were committed by Momir Nikolić and four members of either the police or the VRS military police;<sup>12924</sup> those at Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1) by a VRS soldier;<sup>12925</sup> and those at Luke School (Schedule E.5.1) by 10 to 15 chapter 7.12.

<sup>12923</sup> These beatings are: On 13 July 1995, the beatings of a man dressed in civilian clothes on the road to Konjević Polje; and of 16 male Bosnian-Muslim detainees, including a 14-year-old boy, near Konjević Polje intersection, as outlined in chapter 7.2 With respect to the latter beating incident, four members of either the police or the VRS military police ordered the detainees to undress themselves, threw them on the floor and kicked them at their heads with their boots. On 13 July 1995, the beatings of a wounded Bosnian-Muslim man, who had attempted to flee, in his face, as outlined in chapter 7.5. On 13 July 1995, the beatings of 22 Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Luke School, who were also harassed and one of whom was beaten until he lost consciousness, as outlined in chapter 7.6. On 14 July 1995, the regular beatings of Bosnian-Muslim men detained at Petkovci School, including a Bosnian-Muslim ABiH soldier from Srebrenica Municipality, as outlined in chapter 7.8.1. From 14 to 16 July 1995, the regular beatings of male Bosnian-Muslim detainees in civilian clothing at Kula School, as outlined in chapter 7.10. From 12 to 14 July 1995, the regular beatings of Bosnian-Muslim civilians and soldiers in and around Vuk Karadžić elementary school, as outlined in chapter 7.14.1. In one instance a soldier wearing camouflage t-shirt kicked and beat a Bosnian-Muslim man with the wooden butt of his automatic rifle, in another instance a military policeman beat a Bosnian-Muslim man with a whip and a rifle, and in a third instance soldiers hit a man's head with an iron bar and his backbone with an axe.

men of a VRS special intervention platoon commanded by Spomenko Garić.<sup>12926</sup> With regard to Luke School, the Trial Chamber finds that the men of the special intervention platoon said in the presence of the detained Bosnian-Muslim men that the ‘balijas’ had been defeated and that they had cut off the head of one ‘balija’. With respect to the beatings at the school in Petkovci (Schedule E.7.), Kula School (Schedule E.9.1), and in and around Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1), the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators were the same as those who subsequently committed the killings at these locations, as further set out in chapters 7.8.1, 7.10, and 7.14.1.

2944. Further, the Trial Chamber found in chapter 7.1.6 that on 13 July 1995, members of the civilian police beat up several captured Bosnian-Muslim men from the column at Sandići Meadow. During the night of 13 July, and the morning of 14 July, VRS soldiers selected some Bosnian-Muslim men detained in trucks at a supermarket in Kravica after asking whether they were from certain villages and threatened, beat, and shot them dead. On or about 18 July, VRS soldiers beat four captured Bosnian-Muslims, including a 15-year-old boy, and referred to one as ‘Alinovac’ (member of Alija’s army) and ‘Balija’. In addition, the Trial Chamber found in chapter 7.10 that on 16 July 1995, VRS soldiers from Bratunac beat detainees at Branjevo Military Farm before killing them. The same perpetrators also humiliated the detainees by forcing them to ‘pray in a Muslim manner’ and subjected them to derogatory remarks.

2945. The Trial Chamber will further consider these incidents in relation to Counts 2 and 3 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

Other types of ill-treatment against Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica

2946. With regard to other types of alleged ill-treatment of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica, the Trial Chamber recalls the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.1.5 and 7.6 and finds that the ill-treatment against Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica continued throughout their transportation from Potočari. In particular, the Trial Chamber finds that on 13 and 14 July 1995, Bosnian-Serb forces often stopped buses, searched, and removed Bosnian-Muslim men and boys who were found on board.<sup>12927</sup> In one instance, they took two girls out of a bus heading to Tuzla. Both girls were not heard of again.

2947. Concerning the column, the Trial Chamber further recalls its findings in chapter 7.1.6 that on 13 July 1995, the military police cursed, insulted, and threatened some of those who had surrendered and told the captives to carry their wounded. On 12 July, VRS soldiers demanded money from some Bosnian Muslims who had surrendered, and threatened to kill them if they later found money on them. Serbs described as ‘chetniks’ told a group from the column that they should leave any weapons or money or they would be killed, and told them to line up on the asphalt road in five rows of approximately 100 meters, with wounded people lying on the road between those standing. Some of the soldiers pointed their weapons at them and said ‘Balijs put your arms up higher, now we are going to show you’. They were made to run along the road with their hands in the air and with three fingers raised. From 13 to 14 July, some Bosnian Muslim men detained in buses and trucks by a supermarket in Kravica were kept without water. Around 119 men were detained in one truck.

2948. With respect to Kravica Warehouse (Schedule E.3.1), the Trial Chamber finds based on the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.4 that on 13 July 1995, members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade put Bosnian-Muslim men in an overcrowded section of Kravica Warehouse so that they almost suffocated. Moreover, the perpetrators of the killings at Kravica Warehouse<sup>12928</sup> and a Serb soldier wearing black uniform shot at least one Bosnian-Muslim man and a 15 or 16-year-old Bosnian-Muslim boy in the legs. One of the perpetrators of the killings at Kravica Warehouse shot and injured a Bosnian-Muslim man, who was trying to escape. Subsequently, this man pretended to be dead for hours while covered in blood and flies.

2949. Moreover, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.4 that members of the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade insulted and cursed the detainees, warned them that if they tried to escape they would be shot and, after having executed some detainees in front of the warehouse, told others ‘you’ll get the same as soon as it’s your turn, because we still have a full warehouse to kill’. The Trial Chamber in the same chapter found that detainees were forced to sing Serb songs.

2950. As regards Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.5 that on 13 July 1995, a Serb soldier, wearing a black uniform, shot and killed a Bosnian-Muslim man, and further finds that this soldier then ordered Bosnian-Muslims to carry away and drop the body 20 to 30 metres from where he was killed.

2952. In respect of Luke School near Tišća (Schedule E.5.1), the Trial Chamber finds based on the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.6 that on 13 July 1995, the perpetrators of the killings at Luke School<sup>12929</sup> also took away personal belongings, including money, and threatened the lives of the Bosnian-Muslim men detained there.

2953. With respect to the School in Orahovac (Schedule E.6.1), the Trial Chamber finds based on the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.7, that on 14 July 1995, members of the Zvornik Brigade, including members of the Zvornik Brigade Military Police and Drago Nikolić, the Chief of Security of the Zvornik Brigade put Bosnian-Muslim men in an overcrowded space in Grbavci School in Orahovac without providing them with sufficient water. The detainees suffered from thirst and heat exhaustion.

2954. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.7 that many of the detainees at Grbavci School fainted and members of the Zvornik Brigade made derogatory remarks and insults towards them.

2955. Regarding Petkovci School (Schedule E.7.1), the Trial Chamber finds based on the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.8.1 that on 14 July 1995, the perpetrators of the killings at Petkovci School<sup>12930</sup> forced Bosnian-Muslim men to run to Petkovci School while shouting something along the lines of, '[l]ong live Serbia, Srebrenica is Serbian'. At Petkovci School the same perpetrators put them in a crowded and extremely hot room without providing them with water, so that some detainees resorted to drinking their own urine. These perpetrators also threatened to kill detainees if they went near the windows or made noise, and injured some detainees, who tried to open the windows to get some air, by shooting at them. One of the perpetrators told the detainees to hand their personal belongings, including money, jewellery and documents, and the perpetrators threatened them that if they would not collect more money, they would all be killed. Furthermore, the perpetrators fired a round of bullets at the legs of some detainees, who had been placed in a truck, wounding some of them.

2956. In addition, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.8.1 that members of the VRS, including members of the military police, called the detainees 'Balijas'.

2957. Concerning Kula School (Schedule E.9.1), and Branjevo Military Farm (Schedule E.9.2), the Trial Chamber finds based on the evidence reviewed in chapter 7.10 that from 14 to 16 July 1995, VRS soldiers held Bosnian-Muslim men in hot, overcrowded conditions at Kula School without providing them with water, or access to medical treatment, so that they suffered from dehydration and heat exhaustion. On 15 July, VRS soldiers at Kula School also took jewellery, watches and money from the detainees; and threatened to kill all if they did not have any money.

2958. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.10 that the perpetrators of the killings at Branjevo Military Farm cursed the detainees.

2960. Finally, regarding in and around Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.14.1 that from 12 to 14 July 1995, members of the VRS Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon, members of the special police, members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP civilian police, members of the Drina Wolves and paramilitary formations held several thousand Bosnian-Muslim civilians and soldiers in and around Vuk Karadžić elementary school.

2961. Based on evidence in the same chapter, the Trial Chamber further finds that these perpetrators held the detainees in overcrowded conditions without sufficient air, forced them to stay in a sitting position and did not allow them to use the toilets so that they had to urinate on themselves. When the detainees complained about the conditions, these perpetrators fired over their heads and threatened to kill them if they did not keep silent. Moreover, the same perpetrators continuously selected detainees and ordered them to go outside the hangar, stating that the selected detainees would not need anything anymore.

7.17 Forcible transfer and deportation

2964. According to the Indictment, the Accused is responsible for the forcible transfer and deportation of Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica between the days immediately preceding 11 July 1995 and 1 November 1995.<sup>12932</sup> The Defence argued that the movement of Bosnian-Muslims from Srebrenica was a natural consequence of the ongoing armed conflict and of the instability and violence in the area.<sup>12933</sup> The Defence further argued that: (i) legitimate humanitarian objectives justified the evacuation from Potočari; (ii) the UN requested the evacuation for humanitarian purposes; (iii) the responsibility to protect civilians fell on police organs and UNPROFOR, and (iv) men and women were separated for a legitimate purpose.<sup>12934</sup> The Trial Chamber will address these arguments in chapter 8.

2965. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Facts and received evidence in relation to the alleged forcible transfer and deportation of Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Municipality between around 11 July 1995 and 1 November 1995. The Trial Chamber reviewed this evidence in various chapters and will recall in the following paragraphs its findings from previous chapters.

2966. In 1991, Srebrenica Municipality was composed of 37,000 people of whom 73 per cent were Muslims and 25 per cent were Serbs.. In February 1993, Bosnian-Muslim residents converged to Srebrenica Town because of the VRS offensive on the municipality, resulting in the population of Srebrenica Town reaching 50,000 to 60,000 people in early 1993.

2967. The VRS imposed difficult living conditions imposed on the population in Srebrenica Town during the siege in 1993 as well as restrictions on the humanitarian aid convoys to the enclave by early 1995.

2968. The VRS attack on the Srebrenica enclave, in which joint forces of the RSK MUP, of the Serbian MUP, and of the MUP also participated, began on 6 July 1995. During the attack on the enclave, the VRS destroyed mosques and religious buildings and shelled Bosnian-Muslim houses. After the fall of the enclave VRS soldiers with German shepherd dogs threw hand grenades into civilian houses in Potočari which forced inhabitants to flee their houses to the UNPROFOR compound.

2969. During the fall of the enclave the VRS, including members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment, called the inhabitants of the enclave to leave their houses and ordered them to go towards the football stadium in Srebrenica Town or to the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari. About 100 to 200 people, mostly elderly, responded to Pelemiš's call to leave and converged towards the. On 11 July 1995, the VRS fired shells at the UNPROFOR Bravo compound and on the road taken by the Bosnian Muslims fleeing towards Potočari.

2970. By 12 July 1995, 25,000 to 30,000 Bosnian-Muslim civilians from Srebrenica Municipality, mainly women, children, elderly men, and injured, had gathered in Potočari; five per cent of whom were able bodied men. On 11 and 12 July, the VRS shelled and fired at the area of the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari, wounding some of the Bosnian Muslims.

2971. After the fall of the enclave, living conditions in Potočari were poor and deteriorated. On 11 and 12 July 1995, members of the VRS displayed aggressiveness towards Bosnian Muslims, insulting and threatening them.

2972. On 12 July 1995, VRS officers, including Mladić; UNPROFOR members, and 'representatives' of the Bosnian-Muslim population 'agreed' on the evacuation of the Bosnian-Muslim civilians gathered in Potočari to Kladanj Municipality. According to the agreement, this evacuation was to be organised by the VRS and Bosnian-Serb police forces under the supervision and escort of UNPROFOR.

2973. On 12 and 13 July 1995, the VRS, and more particularly the DK, assisted by members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police and of the MUP Special Police Brigade, including the Jahorina Detachment, transferred about 25,000 Bosnian-Muslim, mostly women, children, and elderly, out of the Srebrenica enclave to the territory under ABiH control in buses and trucks. The DK provided buses, vehicles, and fuel used to transport Bosnian Muslims out of the Potočari DutchBat compound on 12 and 13 July 1995. On 13 July 1995, Colonel Janković ordered members of the military police of the Bratunac Brigade to drive towards Srebrenica Town and inform the Bosnian Muslims they would encounter en route that they should go to Potočari and wait there until they would be driven away on the next day.

2974. Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police coordinated the boarding process of Bosnian Muslims onto the buses and trucks. Members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP Special Police Brigade, pursuant to Borovčanin's order, and members of the Jahorina Detachment, assisted with the boarding process. Command officers and units of the DK monitored the transportation process. On 12 July 1995, members of the 2nd Infantry Battalion, the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment from Nova Kasaba, a unit which carried out an attack from the area of Pribičevac, the Drina Wolves from the Zvornik Brigade, the 10th Sabotage Detachment as well as police units, including members of the Bratunac SJB, and a company of the PJP were also present in Potočari and assisted with the evacuation of Bosnian Muslims. Initially, the women, children, and elderly were allowed to board the buses themselves, but after a while those who did not want to leave were forced onto the buses. Soldiers, as well as one member of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, hit and abused the Bosnian Muslims as they boarded the buses and called them names. The Bosnian Muslims were restless, partly due to the separation including those of mothers and children. Many people became ill and the babies of ill-mothers were abandoned. A Serbian camera crew was present at the Potočari compound and filmed the Bosnian Muslims. In the afternoon of 12 July 1995, the first convoy, which included men, left Potočari. The convoy was filmed and the footage was later broadcast by a press service of the DK Command.

2975. The Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly were forced to continue the last leg of their journey from Tišća to Kladanj on foot and reached Bosnian-Muslim controlled territory around 14 July 1995.

2976. On 17 July 1995, Janković asked Mandžić, designated representative of the Bosnian-Muslim population, and Major Franken from DutchBat to sign a declaration stating that the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari had been performed in a proper and humanitarian way in accordance with international law. Franken added a clause stating that the transportation was carried out in accordance with the law only 'as far as convoys actually escorted by UN forces [were] concerned' because DutchBat was not able to confirm that this was the case for any of the other convoys.

The Trial Chamber's findings

Actions of the VRS in Srebrenica Municipality prior to and during the fall of the enclave

2977. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that at the beginning of 1993, as a result of the VRS operation in Srebrenica Municipality, Bosnian Muslims left their villages and converged on Srebrenica Town, whose population reached 50,000 to 60,000 people. During the siege in 1993, living conditions in Srebrenica Town were difficult. By early 1995, the VRS imposed restrictions on humanitarian aid convoys to the enclave.

2978. The Trial Chamber further finds that during the VRS attack on the enclave, including Srebrenica Town, between 6 and 11 July 1995 as described in chapter 7.1.2, some Bosnian Muslims left the municipality while others, who had remained in their villages, converged on Srebrenica Town. The actions of VRS units operating in and around the enclave included shelling and threats as well as destruction of religious and private property belonging to Bosnian Muslims. In particular, on 11 July 1995 and in execution of Pelemiš's order, members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment who were approaching Srebrenica Town called the inhabitants to leave their houses and ordered them to go towards the football stadium in Srebrenica Town or to the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari. Similarly, when the VRS entered some villages of the municipality, it ordered the villagers to go to the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari. About 100 to 200 people, mostly elderly, responded to Pelemiš's call and converged towards the stadium. Thousands of residents crowded around the UNPROFOR Bravo Company in Srebrenica Town. On the same day, the ABiH told mothers and children who had gathered in town to head for the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari.

2979. On 11 July 1995, the VRS fired shells at the UNPROFOR Bravo compound in Srebrenica Town, wounding several people. Following the shelling of the compound and encouraged by the DutchBat troops, who themselves had been ordered by their command to withdraw from Srebrenica, Bosnian Muslims began to move towards Potočari. The VRS further fired mortars along the road taken by the Bosnian Muslims fleeing towards Potočari.

2980. By 12 July 1995, 25,000 to 30,000 Bosnian-Muslim civilians from the municipality, mainly women, children, elderly men, and injured, had gathered in Potočari in the UNPROFOR compound and its surroundings. On 11 and 12 July, the VRS, advancing towards Potočari, shelled and fired at the surroundings of the compound, wounding some of the Bosnian Muslims. Screams, gunshots and other noises, including from women and children, were audible throughout the night between 12 and 13 July 1995 and no one could sleep.

2981. Living conditions in Potočari were dire: food and water were scarce and there was a shortage of medical supplies. People were afraid to go outside and used the factory hall both as a toilet and sleeping area. People were exhausted, lethargic, and frightened. Bosnian Muslims were intimidated by the presence of members of the Bratunac Brigade. Soldiers used dogs to move people around the compound, confiscated weapons and clothing from UNPROFOR soldiers, and took men, boys, and girls away. On 12 July 1995, the DutchBat created a buffer zone outside the compound to prevent contact between the Bosnian Muslims and the VRS as the soldiers approached the population aggressively. The DutchBat was unable to keep the groups separated.

Agreement and logistics related to the transportation of Bosnian-Muslim civilians out of Potočari

2982. The Trial Chamber finds that on 12 July 1995, VRS officers, including Krstić and Mladić; Miroslav Deronjić, a representative of the Serb civilian leadership in Srebrenica; UNPROFOR members, and 'representatives' of the Bosnian-Muslim population 'agreed' that the evacuation of the Bosnian-Muslim civilians to Kladanj Municipality be organised by the VRS and Bosnian-Serb police forces and take place under the supervision and escort of UNPROFOR.

2983. On 12 and 13 July 1995, the VRS transported by trucks and buses around 25,000 Bosnian Muslims, mostly women, children, and elderly, out of Potočari. On 13 July 1995, towards the end of the day, Colonel Janković ordered a member of the Military Police Platoon of the Bratunac Brigade to inform the Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica Town they would encounter en route that they should go to Potočari and wait there until they would be driven away on the next day. The DK, with the assistance of the Bosnian-Serb MoD, provided buses, vehicles, and fuel. The Bratunac Brigade monitored fuel allocation, provided buses and fuel, and regulated traffic as the busses passed through Bratunac. Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police coordinated the boarding of Bosnian Muslims onto trucks and buses. Members of the MUP Special Police Brigade, pursuant to Borovčanin's order, including members of the Jahorina Detachment, assisted with the boarding process. DK Command officers monitored the transportation process. Other VRS units, including units of the military police, and members of the civilian police were present in Potočari on 12 July 1995: members of the 2nd Infantry Battalion, the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment from Nova Kasaba, a unit which carried out an attack from the area of Pribičevac, the Drina Wolves from the Zvornik Brigade, the 10th Sabotage Detachment as well as police units, including members of the Bratunac SJB, and a company of the PJP. They also assisted with the transportation of Bosnian Muslims. More particularly, on 12 July 1995, the 1st Company of the Special Police Brigade was tasked with securing a road close to the UN compound and ensuring the safe evacuation of civilians and the military police of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment was tasked with monitoring the movement of the buses from the DK area to the SRK area.

2984. Initially, the women, children, and elderly were allowed to board the buses themselves but after a while they were forced onto the buses. They were also told that the men would follow. Soldiers, as well as one member of the Jahorina Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, were hitting, abusing, and insulting the Bosnian Muslims as they boarded the buses. The Bosnian Muslims were restless, partly due to the separations, many people became ill, and the babies of ill- mothers were abandoned. UNPROFOR soldiers were also assisting in getting women and children on board the vehicles. DutchBat soldiers accompanied the first convoys on 12 July 1995, but were stopped at some point by the VRS, who stole DutchBat jeeps as well as weapons and equipment, rendering further DutchBat escorts impossible. The first convoy, which included men and departed on 12 July 1995, was filmed and the footage was later broadcast by a press service of the DK Command. The men on the first convoy were separated at checkpoints before reaching Kladanj and taken away by VRS soldiers.

2985. Most of the Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly bussed out of Potočari arrived at Tišća. They were then forced to continue the last leg of their journey on foot through 'no-man's land' between the Bosnian-Serb and Bosnian-Muslim lines and reached Bosnian-Muslim controlled territory around 14 July 1995. As of the morning of 14 July 1995, 15,000 people had arrived in Tuzla and 3,000 were still on their way on VRS buses.

2986. The Trial Chamber further finds that on 17 July 1995, Janković asked Mandžić and Major Franken to sign a declaration stating that the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims out of Potočari had been performed in a proper and humanitarian way in accordance with international law. Franken added a clause stating that the transportation was carried out in accordance with the law only ‘as far as convoys actually escorted by UN forces [were] concerned’ because DutchBat was not able to confirm that this was the case for any of the other convoys.

2987. The Trial Chamber will address the evidence related to the alleged Srebrenica JCE and, in particular, the Accused’s alleged contribution to this JCE (some of which has been recalled above in this chapter) in chapter 9.

2988. The Trial Chamber will further consider these incidents in relation to Counts 3, 7, and 8 of the Indictment in chapter 8 below.

7.18 Burial operations

2989. According to the Prosecution, from approximately August to November 1995, VRS and MUP personnel, pursuant to orders from the VRS Main Staff, engaged in a covert operation to exhume, transport, and rebury the remains of victims of the incidents discussed above in chapters 7.2 through 7.15, in an attempt to conceal their murders.<sup>12935</sup> The Defence argued that reburials were either legitimate post-combat sanitation projects, or that it is reasonable to conclude that they were conducted by a ‘rogue security branch’ of the VRS to cover up its own crimes, and were neither ordered by the Accused nor known to him.<sup>12936</sup> The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts related to the reburials. It also received evidence from Momir Nikolić, the Assistant Commander for Intelligence and Security of the Bratunac Brigade from November 1992 to at least October 1995;<sup>12937</sup> Witness RM-265, a member of the Bratunac Brigade;<sup>12938</sup> Dragoslav Trišić, Assistant Commander of Logistics of the Bratunac Brigade as of November 1992;<sup>12939</sup> Richard Butler, an intelligence research specialist;<sup>12940</sup> and Suzanna Maljaars, a forensic specialist;<sup>12941</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>12942</sup> Additionally, it received evidence from Witness RM-260, a member of the Civilian Protection Staff in Bratunac Municipality in July 1995;<sup>12943</sup> Damjan Lazarević, a member of the Engineering Unit of the Zvornik Brigade in July 1995;<sup>12944</sup> and Witness RM-322, an officer in the VRS Zvornik Brigade in 1995;<sup>12945</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

individuals were later reburied.<sup>12946</sup> During a period of several weeks in September and early October 1995 Bosnian-Serb forces dug up a number of the primary mass gravesites and reburied the bodies in still more remote locations.<sup>12947</sup> There was a concerted campaign to conceal the bodies of the men in the primary gravesites.<sup>12948</sup>

Richard Butler testified that according to his investigations, the primary mass graves from which bodies were exhumed in mid-September 1995, were those that the international community had identified in August of that year.<sup>12949</sup>

2991. The mass graves at the Dam near Petkovci, Kozluk, Glogova, Orahovac, and Branjevo Military Farm were disturbed and bodies were exhumed from those graves.<sup>12950</sup> The reburial operation was carried out on the ground by the Bratunac and Zvornik Brigades.<sup>12951</sup> Within the Bratunac Brigade, Captain Nikolić, the Chief of Security and Intelligence, was tasked with the organisation of the operation.<sup>12952</sup> During the reburial operation, which lasted a couple of nights, the members of the Civilian Protection unit used at least one loader and an excavator for the exhumations at the Glogova gravesite.<sup>12953</sup> Within the Zvornik Brigade the Assistant Commander for Security, 2nd Lieutenant Drago Nikolić, was responsible for the operation.<sup>12954</sup> Butler testified that between 7 September and 2 October 1995, the primary burial site known as Petkovci was disturbed and the remains reburied in a secondary site near Liplje. 2992. On 14 September 1995, the VRS Main Staff approved five tonnes of diesel fuel to be delivered to Captain Milorad Trbić<sup>12957</sup> at the Standard barracks in Zvornik, for carrying out engineering works.<sup>12958</sup> The order was addressed to the DK Command and to the Logistics Sector of the VRS Main Staff.<sup>12959</sup> A copy was forwarded to the Zvornik Brigade for information.<sup>12960</sup> The order specified that Trbić was to be responsible for the proper accounting of engineering-machine usage and fuel consumption.<sup>12961</sup> Butler testified that such machines would be backhoes and trucks and other equipment required for the reburial operation.<sup>12962</sup> Also on 14 September 1995, 5000 litres of fuel was immediately released to the DK Command pursuant to the VRS Main Staff order of the same day.<sup>12963</sup> The fuel was to be used for engineering works in the DK area of responsibility.<sup>12964</sup> The order was authorised by the Chief of the Main Staff's Logistics Sector and signed by Colonel Zarko Ljuboječić.<sup>12965</sup> According to Butler, any fuel required for regular engineering work would have been issued through the normal course of operations under the authority of someone like Major Jokić, the Engineering Company Commander.<sup>12966</sup> However, Mladić, who normally would not be involved in the details of fuel allocation, issued the order for the fuel and put a security officer in charge of its allocation as opposed to a technical services officer.<sup>12967</sup>

<sup>12957</sup> Butler, basing his evidence on the personnel roster of the Zvornik Brigade for September 1995, testified that there was no Captain Milorad Trpić assigned to the unit. However, a Captain Milorad Trbić was assigned to the Security and Intelligence Branch of the Zvornik Brigade. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that 'Trpić' in this order was a misspelling or typographical error and was meant to refer to 'Trbić.' 2993. In relation to the fuel delivery, the Trial Chamber also considered the evidence of Witness RM-322 and Butler which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D.

2994. Momir Nikolić testified that the people who had been killed in Kravica, on the Bratunac-Konjević Polje road, and in the Bratunac and Srebrenica municipalities in July 1995 had been buried in mass graves in Glogova, in Bratunac Municipality.<sup>12968</sup> In September 1995, Lieutenant-Colonel Vujadin Popović, the Chief of Security of the DK, came to the Bratunac Brigade command.<sup>12969</sup> Popović told the witness's commander Colonel Vidoje Blagojević, and then the witness, that the VRS Main Staff had decided that the two mass graves near Glogova should be moved to the greater Srebrenica area.<sup>12970</sup> According to the witness, the initiative to relocate the graves had come from the representatives of the civilian authorities, namely Srbislav Davidović, President of the Bratunac Municipality Executive Board; Ljubisav Simić, President of the Bratunac Municipality; and Miroslav Deronjić, President of the Bratunac SDS.<sup>12971</sup> In this respect, Witness RM-260 stated that in September or October 1995, Miroslav Deronjić ordered that workers be brought to the Bratunac Brigade command at 9 or 10 p.m. where they were to report to Momir Nikolić.<sup>12972</sup> The witness was told the work would take a few days and would be the same as former assignments.<sup>12973</sup> The witness later learned that the workers had worked until late in the morning and that the job took a few days to complete.<sup>12974</sup> Nikolić testified that the military police of the Bratunac Brigade, the civilian police of the Bratunac SJB, and the 5th Engineering Battalion of the DK participated in the operation to move the graves by exhuming, transferring, and reburying the bodies.<sup>12975</sup> The DK command logistical service provided fuel for the Bratunac Brigade during this operation on two occasions (first, five tons and then, two tons).<sup>12976</sup> Witness RM-265 stated that this reburial operation was secured by the military police of the Bratunac Brigade.<sup>12977</sup> According to the witness' knowledge, the VRS Main Staff, more specifically Beara, was in charge of the operation which lasted several days.<sup>12978</sup>

2995. Nikolić testified that he briefed his commander Popović on a daily basis about the ongoing reburial operation.<sup>12979</sup> The executive authorities of Bratunac municipality planned and organized the move and provided equipment, such as earth-moving machines.<sup>12980</sup> The President of the Executive Council provided logistical support in the form of diggers and other machines from the Bratunac public utilities company.<sup>12981</sup> Companies from Srebrenica Municipality, including the Sase mine, the transport company, and the Radnik construction company, provided machines, trucks, and earth-moving machines.<sup>12982</sup> Although it was initially supposed to be a covert operation, given its length and the number of participants, it soon became public knowledge.<sup>12983</sup>

2996. On 22 September 1995, 'Niđo' Mihalić informed Popović that he was out of fuel.<sup>12984</sup> Popović inquired if Trbić knew about it and Mihalić told him that he was working on it but that he had said that not much work would be done that day.<sup>12985</sup> Popović instructed Mihalić to call the gas station and find out if the fuel had arrived.<sup>12986</sup>

2997. Nikolić testified that on 16 October 1995 he met with Colonel Blagojević, the Brigade command staff, and its battalion commanders.<sup>12987</sup> The witness reported that the Brigade was at that point engaged in hygiene and sanitation tasks issued by the VRS Main Staff.<sup>12988</sup> The witness explained that the reburial operation was being conducted under the name ‘asanacija’.<sup>12989</sup> The witness believed that the reason for the reburial operation was to conceal the large number of killings.<sup>12990</sup> A 16 October 1995 note attributed to Momir Nikolić in the Bratunac Brigade notebook states that on that day, ‘[w]e are engaged in tasks issued by the Army of the Republika Srpska Main Staff (hygiene and sanitation measures).’<sup>12991</sup> The BCS original of the meeting minutes reads ‘asanacija’.<sup>12992</sup> The subject of reburials was discussed in the command meeting which was attended by VRS members including key Assistant Commanders, the Chief of Operations, and the Battalion Commanders or their deputies.<sup>12993</sup> According to Butler, investigations of the alleged crimes in the zone of the Bratunac Brigade indicated that between an undetermined date and 18 October 1995, the primary site known as Glogova 2 was disturbed and the remains were reburied near Zeleni Jadar.<sup>12994</sup>

2998. Damjan Lazarević stated that sometime after the initial burial operations around Zvornik, he was urgently ordered by Slavko Bogičević, pursuant to Major Jokić’s order, to supervise exhumations together with three members of his unit, the Engineering Company of the Zvornik Brigade, and soldiers from other units of the Zvornik Brigade, the names of whom all appeared on a list that was shown to him.<sup>12995</sup> Similar to the previous burial operations, Lazarević was in charge of controlling his men during the digging, and as far as he knew neither members of his company, nor its equipment, were involved in the transportation or reburial of remains in secondary gravesites.<sup>12996</sup> Large, heavy-duty trucks from the Karakaj hauling company were used to transport the bodies after exhumation.<sup>12997</sup> The exhumations were conducted at first in Orahovac, then Kozluk, and finally at the Branjevo Military Farm.<sup>12998</sup> The excavators arrived at the respective sites in the evenings and the exhumations started when it was already dark.<sup>12999</sup> The entire reburial operation in which his unit was involved lasted for about five to six days.<sup>13000</sup> Major Trbić from the Zvornik Brigade, whose superior was Drago Nikolić, was in command of the reburial operation around Zvornik, including the transfer of the bodies, and would summon the soldiers, including Lazarević, to inquire on their progress after each job.<sup>13001</sup> All of the fuel for the reburial operation came from the Zvornik Brigade.<sup>13002</sup>

3000. Butler testified that in contrast to the pattern of normal military accountability procedures followed by the DK and subordinate units during the alleged commission of crimes in July 1995, the attempt to conceal such crimes through the reburial operation was much more secretive. For this reason, there were few existing orders relating to the reburial operation.<sup>13003</sup> The vehicle logs and daily operating records of July 1995 showed that vehicle operators followed the normal procedures of recording the miles driven, hours that the vehicles were in operation, and how much fuel they used. For August and September 1995, however, those same engineering and vehicle logs did not have similar notations, and the fuel being consumed was not reported as usual. The locations of the work were not recorded and the hours in which the vehicles were stated to have been operative did not correspond with the level of activity that was occurring at the time.<sup>13004</sup>

3001. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the connections between primary and secondary gravesites discussed in chapters 7.4, 7.7, 7.8.2, 7.9, and 7.10.2.

3002. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that during several weeks in September and early October 1995, members of the VRS and MUP including members of the VRS Main Staff; the DK; the Bratunac Brigade, including members of its military police; and members of the Zvornik Brigade, engaged in what was intended to be a covert operation to exhume human remains from several primary mass graves, and then rebury those remains in remote secondary graves in the Zvornik and Bratunac municipalities in an effort to hide them. These primary mass graves had been identified by the international community before the reburial operation started. Fuel to support the reburial operation was organized by the VRS Main Staff on 14 September 1995, which approved the delivery of fuel for carrying out engineering works in the DK area of responsibility, and ordered the Logistics Sector of the Main Staff to deliver the fuel. On the same day, the Main Staff Technical Service Division issued an order releasing the approved amount of fuel to the DK.

3003. During the reburial operation human remains were exhumed and reburied from Glogova to gravesites in the Srebrenica area including Zeleni Jadar; from Petkovci Dam to gravesites near Liplje; from Orahovac to gravesites along Hodžiči Road; and from Kozluk and Branjevo Military Farm to gravesites along Čančari Road.

3004. In relation to the reburial operation in the Bratunac area, the Trial Chamber finds that in September 1995, Popović came to the Bratunac Brigade Command where he told Beara and Momir Nikolić that the VRS Main Staff had decided that the two primary graves near Glogova, which included the remains of victims killed in Kravica Warehouse, should be moved to the greater Srebrenica area. Within the Bratunac Brigade, Captain Momir Nikolić, Chief of Security and Intelligence, was tasked with the organisation of the reburial operation. Civilian authorities, namely the Presidents of the Bratunac Municipality Executive Board (Srbislav Davidović), of Bratunac municipality (Ljubisav Simić), and of the Bratunac SDS (Miroslav Deronjić), planned, organized, and provided logistical support and equipment from the Bratunac public utilities company for these reburials. Companies from Srebrenica Municipality provided trucks, earth-moving equipment, and other machines. The DK Command logistical service provided diesel fuel for the Bratunac Brigade during this operation on two occasions: first, five tons; and then, two tons. Members of the Bratunac Brigade Military Police, civilian police of the Bratunac SJB, and the 5th Engineering Battalion of the DK participated in the transferring and reburying the bodies. Those selected to participate worked mostly at night and the operation took a few days to complete. Momir Nikolić briefed Popović on a daily basis about the operation until it was complete. On 16 October 1995, Momir Nikolić met with Blagojević, the command staff, and battalion commanders or their deputies, and reported that members of the Brigade were engaged in a reburial operation conducted under the name 'asanacija,' or hygiene and sanitation measures, which had been ordered by the VRS Main Staff. The VRS Main Staff, specifically Beara, were responsible for ordering and supervising these reburials.

3005. The Trial Chamber further finds that within the Zvornik area, 2nd Lieutenant Drago Nikolić, Assistant Commander for Security for the Zvornik Brigade, was responsible for, and participated in, the reburial operation. A copy of the 14 September 1995 Main Staff order for fuel, discussed above, was forwarded to the Zvornik Brigade for information. The order specified that the fuel required was to be delivered to the Standard Barracks in Zvornik to Captain Milorad Trbić, Deputy Chief of Security for the Zvornik Brigade and Drago Nikolić's subordinate, and that Trbić was to be responsible for the proper accounting of engineering-machine usage and fuel consumption. Sometime in mid-September 1995, Bogičević, pursuant to an order of Major Jokić, urgently ordered selected members of the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Unit to exhume remains at Orahovac, then Kozluk, and then Branjevo Military Farm. Those selected, including members of other units of the Brigade, worked at night and the operation lasted about five days. Large, heavy-duty trucks from the Karakaj hauling company were used to transport the remains after exhumation. Popović and Beara visited the burial sites in civilian clothing during the reburial operation. Popović also brought members of the DK Military Police to control traffic and secure the areas where reburials were taking place. Trbić was in command of the reburial operation around Zvornik, including the transfer of remains, and would summon the soldiers, including members of the Zvornik Brigade Engineering Unit, to inform him of their progress after each job. All of the fuel for this reburial operation came from the Zvornik Brigade. On 14 September 1995, the DK Duty Officer called the Zvornik Brigade Duty Officer to report that five tonnes of fuel were to be given to Trbić for a task. An officer of the Zvornik Brigade, thinking that it was strange to have so much fuel sent to Trbić and the security organ, called the DK Duty Officer who then said that he did not know about the fuel. A few minutes later, Popović called the Zvornik Brigade officer back, asked how he knew about the fuel, and when he was told that the DK Duty Officer was the source of the information, Popović said that the Duty Officers were incompetent and must have made a mistake. After seeing the Main Staff order for fuel, Pandurević went to the DK Command to look into the matter the next day. When he returned to the Brigade, Pandurević stated that the fuel was intended for engineering equipment and trucks that would be used by Popović and his men who were in charge of reburying the bodies of executed Bosnian Muslim detainees. On 22 September 1995, Mihalić informed Popović that he was out of fuel. After asking if Trbić knew about it, Popović instructed Mihalić to call the gas station and find out if the fuel had been delivered.

3006. The Trial Chamber will further consider this finding in relation to the alleged Srebrenica JCE discussed in chapter 9.6 below.

3007. With regard to the number of victims, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 1476 stating that between 7,000 and 8,000 Bosnian-Muslim men were systematically murdered. The Trial Chamber understands this Adjudicated Fact to refer to the killings of Bosnian-Muslim males separated from the Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly in Potočari and captured from the column following the take-over of Srebrenica in July 1995. In chapters 7.2-7.14 and 8, for a considerable number of these men, the Trial Chamber established connections between bodily remains found in primary and secondary mass graves and the incidents specifically charged in the Indictment. Its findings in this respect are consistent with Adjudicated Fact 1476, also considering its approach on calculating the number of victims, set out in Appendix B.<sup>13005</sup>

8. Legal findings on crimes

8.1 Violations of the laws or customs of war: general elements and jurisdictional requirements

8.1.1 Applicable law

3008. The Indictment charges the Accused with four counts of violations of the laws or customs of war under Article 3 of the Statute. Count 6 charges him with murder, based on Common Article 3 (1) (a) to the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. Count 9 charges him with acts of violence the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population. Count 10 charges him with unlawful attacks on civilians. Count 11 charges him with taking of hostages, based on Common Article 3 (1) (b) to the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. Article 3 of the Statute states: ‘The International Tribunal shall have the power to prosecute persons violating the laws or customs of war’. The jurisdictional requirements and general elements are analyzed below.

3009. Article 3 of the Statute is a ‘residual clause’ which gives the Tribunal jurisdiction over any serious violation of international humanitarian law not covered by Articles 2, 4, or 5 of the Statute.<sup>13006</sup> Article 3 of the Statute provides a non-exhaustive list of specific violations of the laws or customs of war.<sup>13007</sup> To fall within this residual jurisdiction, the offence charged must meet four conditions: (i) it must violate a rule of international humanitarian law; (ii) the rule must bind the parties at the time of the alleged offence; (iii) the rule must protect important values and its violation must have grave consequences for the victim; and (iv) such a violation must entail the individual criminal responsibility of the perpetrator.<sup>13008</sup>

3010. It is well established in the jurisprudence of this Tribunal that violations of Common Article 3 to the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 fall within the ambit of Article 3 of the Statute.<sup>13009</sup> The charges of murder under Common Article 3 (1) (a) and taking of hostages under Common Article 3 (1) (b) meet the four jurisdictional requirements set out above. The rules contained in Common Article 3 are part of customary international law applicable in both international and non-international armed conflicts.<sup>13010</sup> The acts prohibited by Common Article 3 breach rules protecting important values and involve grave consequences for the victims. They also entail individual criminal responsibility.<sup>13011</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore has jurisdiction over such violations.

3011. The charges of terror and unlawful attacks on civilians fall within the ambit of Article 3 of the Statute. The prohibitions of these two acts are found in Article 51(2) of Additional Protocol I and Article 13(2) of Additional Protocol II.<sup>13012</sup> They are also part of customary international law in both international and non-international armed conflicts.<sup>13013</sup> The prohibitions breach rules protecting important values and involves grave consequences for the victims as well as entailing individual criminal responsibility.<sup>13014</sup> The Trial Chamber, therefore, has jurisdiction over such violations.

3012. Once jurisdiction is established, certain general conditions must be met for the applicability of Article 3 of the Statute: first, there must be an armed conflict; second, there must be a nexus between the alleged offence and the armed conflict;<sup>13015</sup> and third, for charges based on Common Article 3, the victim must not take active part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged offence.<sup>13016</sup>

3013. Armed Conflict. The test for determining the existence of an armed conflict was set out by the Appeals Chamber in the Tadić Jurisdiction Decision:

[A]n armed conflict exists whenever there is a resort to armed force between States or protracted armed violence between governmental authorities and organized armed groups or between such groups within a State.<sup>13017</sup>

3014. In its Judgment in Tadić, the Appeals Chamber observed that it is ‘indisputable that an armed conflict is international if it takes place between two or more States’.<sup>13018</sup>

The Appeals Chamber went on to find that an internal armed conflict, may become international (or, depending on the circumstances, be international in character alongside an internal armed conflict) if (i) another State intervenes in that conflict through its troops, or alternatively if (ii) some of the participants in the internal armed conflict act on behalf of that other State.<sup>13019</sup>

The Appeals Chamber subsequently set out the standard of ‘overall control’ for determining when an organized armed group may be considered to be acting on behalf of another State, thereby making the conflict international in character.<sup>13020</sup> This test is satisfied where, inter alia, a State has a role in organizing, coordinating or planning the military actions of the organized armed group and that State finances, trains, equips or provides operational support to that group.<sup>13021</sup> The test calls for an assessment of all the elements of control taken as a whole, and thus contains no requirement, e.g., that the third-party State issue specific instructions or orders to the organized armed group.<sup>13022</sup>

3015. The armed conflict extends to the whole territory of the warring States or, in the case of internal conflicts, the whole territory under the control of a party, whether or not actual combat takes place there.<sup>13023</sup> The armed conflict ends when there is a general conclusion of peace (for international armed conflicts) or when a peaceful settlement is achieved (for armed conflicts not of an international character).<sup>13024</sup>

3016. Nexus. The alleged crime need not have occurred at a time and place in which there was actual combat, so long as the acts of the perpetrator were ‘closely related’ to hostilities occurring in territories controlled by parties to the conflict.<sup>13025</sup> The existence of this close relationship between the crime and the armed conflict will be established where it can be shown that the conflict played a substantial part in the perpetrator’s ability to commit the crime, his or her decision to commit it, the manner in which it was committed, or the purpose for which it was committed.<sup>13026</sup>

3017. Status of Victims. The final requirement for the application of an Article 3 charge based on Common Article 3 is that the victim was not actively participating in the hostilities at the time the offence was committed.<sup>13027</sup> The Appeals Chamber has explained that active participation in hostilities means participating in acts of war intended by their nature or purpose to cause actual harm to the personnel or equipment of enemy armed forces.<sup>13028</sup> Protected victims include members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause.<sup>13029</sup> The perpetrator must know or should have known the status of the victims as persons taking no active part in the hostilities.<sup>13030</sup>

8.1.2 Findings on armed conflict

3018. The Trial Chamber has considered a number of Agreed Facts and Adjudicated Facts regarding the outbreak, development, and conclusion of the armed conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13031</sup> The Trial Chamber also received evidence from, among others, Robert Donia, a historian specializing in Modern Balkan History.<sup>13032</sup>

3019. The Trial Chamber considered, in particular, that on 6 March 1992, open conflict erupted in Bosnia-Herzegovina and the units of the JNA present in the territory were actively involved in the fighting that took place.<sup>13033</sup> Between March and May 1992, there were several attacks on and takeovers by the JNA of areas that either constituted main entry points into Bosnia-Herzegovina or were situated on major logistics or communications lines such as those in Bosanski Brod, Derventa, Bijeljina, Kupres,

8.2 Crimes against humanity: general elements and jurisdictional requirement

8.2.1 Applicable law

3021. The Indictment charges the Accused with five counts of crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute. Count 3 charges him with persecution under Article 5 (h). Count 4 charges him with extermination under Article 5 (b). Count 5 charges him with murder under Article 5 (a). Count 7 charges him with deportation under Article 5 (d). Count 8 charges him with inhumane acts (forcible transfer) under Article 5 (i). Article 5 states: ‘The International Tribunal shall have the power to prosecute persons responsible for the following crimes when committed in armed conflict, whether international or internal in character, and directed against a civilian population’. The jurisdictional requirement and general elements are analyzed below.

3022. Committed in armed conflict. The crimes must be committed in an armed conflict, whether international or internal in character. This requirement is not part of the customary law definition of crimes against humanity.<sup>13037</sup> It is a jurisdictional requirement,<sup>13038</sup> which translates into the need for proof that there was an armed conflict at the relevant time and place.<sup>13039</sup> The definition of armed conflict is found above, in chapter 8.1.1.

3023. Widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population. The general elements for the applicability of Article 5 of the Statute are:

- (i) there was an attack;
- (ii) the attack was widespread or systematic;
- (iii) the attack was directed against a civilian population;
- (iv) the acts of the perpetrator were part of the attack; and
- (v) the perpetrator knew that there was, at the time of his or her acts, a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population and that his or her acts were part of that attack.<sup>13040</sup>

3024. Attack. An attack on a civilian population is a separate and distinct concept from that of an armed conflict.<sup>13041</sup> The attack is not limited to the use of force, but

encompasses any mistreatment of the civilian population, and can commence before, outlast, or continue during the armed conflict.<sup>13042</sup> An attack is composed of acts of violence, or the kind of mistreatment referred to in Article 5 (a) through (i) of the Statute.<sup>13043</sup>

3025. Widespread or systematic. ‘Widespread’ refers to the large-scale nature of the attack and the number of targeted persons.<sup>13044</sup> ‘Systematic’ refers to the ‘organized nature of the acts of violence’.<sup>13045</sup> The existence of a plan or policy can be indicative of the systematic character of the attack but it is not a distinct legal element.<sup>13046</sup>

3026. Directed against a civilian population. ‘Directed against’ indicates that it is the civilian population which is the primary object of the attack.<sup>13047</sup> The attack does not have to be directed against the civilian population of the entire area relevant to the indictment.<sup>13048</sup> It is sufficient to show that enough individuals were targeted in the course of the attack, or that they were targeted in such a way as to satisfy the Trial Chamber that the attack was in fact directed against a civilian ‘population’, rather than against a limited and randomly selected number of individuals.<sup>13049</sup>

3027. According to the Appeals Chamber, the definition of civilian for the purpose of Article 5 of the Statute corresponds with the definition of civilian contained in Article 50 of Additional Protocol I to the 1949 Geneva Conventions.<sup>13050</sup> Additional Protocol I defines a ‘civilian’ as an individual who is not a member of the armed forces or otherwise a combatant.<sup>13051</sup> The Appeals Chamber has emphasized that the fact that an attack for the purpose of crimes against humanity must be directed against a civilian population, does not mean that the criminal acts within that attack must be committed against civilians only.<sup>13052</sup> A person placed hors de combat, for example by detention, may also be a victim of an act amounting to a crime against humanity, provided that all the other necessary conditions are met, in particular that the act in question is part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population.<sup>13053</sup>

3028. Acts of the perpetrator are part of the attack. Acts which cannot reasonably be understood to be objectively part of the attack fail this requirement.<sup>13054</sup>

3029. Perpetrator's knowledge. The perpetrator must know that there is a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population and that his or her acts are part of that attack.<sup>13055</sup> The perpetrator does not need to have detailed knowledge of the attack or share the purpose of it.<sup>13056</sup>

8.2.2 Legal findings

3030. As the Trial Chamber concluded in chapter 8.1.2, there was an armed conflict in the territory of Bosnia-Herzegovina, which extended throughout the period relevant to crimes charged in the Indictment. This jurisdictional requirement for crimes against humanity is therefore met. The Trial Chamber will now deal with the general elements of crimes against humanity.

3031. According to the Indictment, all acts and omissions charged as crimes against humanity that formed part of the sniping and shelling campaign in Sarajevo were part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against the civilian population of Sarajevo.<sup>13057</sup> All other acts and omissions charged as crimes against humanity were part of a widespread or systematic attack against the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilian population of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13058</sup>

3032. When considering whether the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, the Trial Chamber has considered the extensive Adjudicated Facts describing the general situation in the Municipalities and Srebrenica during the Indictment period. It has also considered evidence which gives a broader picture of the events. As indicated further below, it has also recalled and considered its findings with regard to the individual counts in the Indictment.

3033. With regard to the ARK, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts. They set out that the ARK Crisis Staff issued orders to dismiss non-Serbs from holding key posts in public enterprises and institutions.<sup>13059</sup> In a decision adopted on 22 June 1992 and directed to all the municipal Crisis Staffs, the ARK Crisis Staff held that all posts important for the functioning of the economy may only be held by personnel of Serb ethnicity.<sup>13060</sup> In addition, Bosnian-Serb personnel were expected to have 'confirmed their Serbian nationality' in the plebiscite and expressed their loyalty to the SDS.<sup>13061</sup> The ARK Crisis Staff's decision of 22 June 1992 was forwarded by the Chief of the Banja Luka CSB, Stojan Župljanin to all SJBs for its immediate implementation within the ARK.<sup>13062</sup> In accordance with the decision, numerous municipalities dismissed non-Serb personnel.<sup>13063</sup> Ultimately, by the end of 1992, almost the entire Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat community had been dismissed from their jobs and were replaced by Bosnian-Serb personnel, thus guaranteeing an overall Bosnian-Serb control over public and private enterprises and institutions throughout the ARK.<sup>13064</sup> Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to movement restrictions; they were required to pledge their loyalty to the Bosnian-Serb authorities.<sup>13065</sup> Campaigns of intimidation specifically targeting Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were undertaken.<sup>13066</sup>

3034. Following attacks on towns and villages, Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat men, women and children were rounded up and often separated.<sup>13067</sup> In the spring of 1992, camps and other detention facilities were established throughout the territory of the Bosnian Krajina in army barracks and compounds, factories, schools, sport facilities, police stations and other public buildings.<sup>13068</sup> These camps and detention facilities were set up and controlled by the Bosnian-Serb army, civilian authorities or the Bosnian-Serb police.<sup>13069</sup> Non-Serb civilians were arrested en masse and detained in these camps and detention facilities.<sup>13070</sup> As the events in the Bosnian Krajina developed, from the spring of 1992 onwards, convoys of buses and trains were organized by the Bosnian-Serb authorities to drive tens of thousands of men, women, and children out of Bosnian-Serb claimed territory to either Bosnian-Muslim held territory within Bosnia-Herzegovina or to Croatia.<sup>13071</sup>

3035. The resettlement policy within the territory of the Bosnian Krajina was coordinated at the regional level by the ARK Crisis Staff.<sup>13072</sup> On 12 June 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff established in Banja Luka an Agency for the Movement of People and Exchange of Properties, aiding in the implementation of the resettlement policy, while at the municipal level other agencies were established.<sup>13073</sup> The municipal agencies throughout the ARK, along with other competent institutions, were charged with establishing the resettlement procedures.<sup>13074</sup> Departures of non-Serbs from the ARK had to be authorised by these competent institutions.<sup>13075</sup> In order to obtain permits to leave the territory of the ARK, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats usually had to 'deregister' from their places of residence and either relinquish their property to the Bosnian-Serb Republic without compensation or in a minority of cases exchange their property for property located outside the ARK.<sup>13076</sup> Moreover, in many instances the Bosnian-Serb authorities made the non-Serbs sign documents stating that they renounced claims to all the property that they left behind in favour of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>13077</sup> This measure was intended to dissuade the Bosnian Muslims and the Bosnian Croats leaving the territory from returning at a later stage.<sup>13078</sup> At the same time, some areas in northern Bosnia-Herzegovina had been emptied of Bosnian

Muslims and Bosnian Croats and were re-populated by resettling Serbian refugees coming from Croatia.<sup>13079</sup>

3036. Specifically concerning Prijedor, one of the municipalities in the ARK, killings were perpetrated on a massive scale against the non-Serb population.<sup>13080</sup> More than 1,500 people were killed in the municipality between 30 April and 30 September 1992.<sup>13081</sup> Beginning 25 May 1992, Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians were detained by the police and the Bosnian-Serb military at Omarska camp, Keraterm camp, Trnopolje camp, the Miška Glava Community Centre, the Ljubija football stadium, and the Prijedor SUP and barracks, until sometime during September 1992.<sup>13082</sup> The non-Serb population was not permitted to return to Kozarac after the 24 May 1992 attack on the city, and, subject to some exceptions, the men were taken either to the Keraterm or Omarska detention camps and the women and elderly to the Trnopolje detention camp.<sup>13083</sup> The Crisis Staff, presided over by Milomir Stakić, was responsible for establishing the Omarska, Keraterm, and Trnopolje camps.<sup>13084</sup> There was coordinated cooperation between the Crisis Staff, later the War Presidency, and members of the police and army in operating the camps.<sup>13085</sup> The Crisis Staff participated through its oversight of security in the camps, took decisions on the continuing detention of Prijedor citizens, provided transport (and the necessary fuel) for the transfer of prisoners between the various camps and from the camps to territory not controlled by Serbs, and coordinated the provision of food for detainees.<sup>13086</sup> The Crisis Staff prohibited the release of detainees from the camps and prevented them from returning to Prijedor.<sup>13087</sup> In chapter 4.10, the Trial Chamber has reviewed in great detail the extensive evidence concerning crimes committed in Prijedor Municipality.

3037. On 22 August 1992 an unsigned report stamped ‘Command of Doboj Operative Group 2’ addressed to the Prijedor Operations Group command stated: ‘all are now washing their hands regarding camps and reception centres, attempting to pass responsibility for issuing orders for mass execution of civilians in the camps and centres onto someone else. This has become particularly noticeable since the visit of foreign reporters to Prijedor, more precisely to Omarska and Trnopolje. Forged (antedated) documents about this are even appearing ... One thing is certain: we are already starting to feel the cost of the needless spilling of Muslim blood.’<sup>13088</sup> On 28 August 1992, Simo Drljača, in response to a request from the Ministry of Health, informed the CSB that there were no camps, prisons, or collection centres in Prijedor and that 1,335 ‘prisoners of war’ had been moved to Manjača.<sup>13089</sup> On or about 24 September 1992, Milomir Stakić answered complaints by local Serbs on the release of detainees from Keraterm, Omarska, and Trnopolje, stating that the Government in Pale had decided to release them for two reasons: ‘pressure from international public opinion and official policy and the steep cost of maintaining the prisons.’<sup>13090</sup>

3038. The non-Serbs in Prijedor Municipality who were not sent to detention camps were required to wear white armbands to distinguish themselves and were continuously subject to harassment, beatings and worse, with terror tactics being common.<sup>13091</sup> Propaganda was used to encourage Serbs who had not previously exhibited nationalistic tendencies to accept the policy of discrimination against non-Serbs, and those Serbs who refused to comply with the Serb policy of discrimination against non-Serbs were branded traitors.<sup>13092</sup> On 30 May 1992, Nusret Sivac heard radical ‘Chetnik’ songs on the radio calling for all Turks and other non-Serb people to be killed.<sup>13093</sup> All Serbs with assigned weapons were encouraged to defend the town and to destroy the group led by a person called Ećimović.<sup>13094</sup> During the day the witness heard radio announcements that the non-Serb population should put white flags outside their houses.<sup>13095</sup> The announcements also said that until further notice, non-Serbs would not be allowed to move freely around Prijedor Town.<sup>13096</sup>

3039. With regard to Sanski Most Municipality, another municipality in the ARK, in the period from the end of May to August 1992, in total, more than 88 Muslim civilians were killed by Serb forces.<sup>13097</sup> In this respect, the Trial Chamber also refers to its findings concerning murders and other crimes in Sanski Most Municipality, in chapter 4.12. These forces attacked many majority-Muslim villages and settlements in the municipality and destroyed mosques and Muslim houses and business premises.<sup>13098</sup>

Witness RM-016, a Bosnian Serb from Banja Luka,<sup>13099</sup> testified that after the attack on Mahala, Muslim and Croat civilians who were found there were taken to collection centres and registered.<sup>13100</sup> In late May 1992, Serb forces began to arrest Croat and Muslim leaders.<sup>13101</sup> Some, including the secretary of the SDA municipal board, a Muslim judge, and the municipal chief of police, were killed.<sup>13102</sup> Serb forces detained more than 1,500 mainly Muslim and Croat civilians in 18 detention facilities in Sanski Most Municipality, where they were mistreated on a regular basis.<sup>13103</sup>

3040. Turning to Ključ Municipality, Atif Džafić, the Bosnian-Muslim police commander of the Ključ SJB from 1991 to 21 or 22 May 1992,<sup>13104</sup> stated that the municipality had a number of collection centres, that is, detention facilities where people were gathered up to a few days before they were sent to a long-term detention facility.<sup>13105</sup> He estimated some 10,000 to 12,000 people were collected through these collection centres and then sent to detention camps.<sup>13106</sup> In Sanica, these collection centres included: the elementary school gym, the police office, the railway station, and the elementary school of upper Sanica.<sup>13107</sup> The following collection centres existed in the town of Ključ: Nikola Mačkić elementary school, the football ground, and the Šuma transport office.<sup>13108</sup> Smaller villages in the municipality also had collection centres.<sup>13109</sup> The collection centres were generally very crowded and there was no access to medical facilities.<sup>13110</sup> Most of the detainees were Muslims and some were Croats.<sup>13111</sup> After their stay in the collection centre most detainees were transferred to Manjača Camp.<sup>13112</sup>

3041. With regard to other areas in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Adjudicated Facts paint a similar picture. Between April and September 1992, at least 52 persons of mainly Muslim ethnicity were killed by Serb forces in Bijeljina municipality.<sup>13113</sup> The plan of the Bijeljina SDS was to kill a Muslim family on each side of town to create an atmosphere of fear.<sup>13114</sup> In September 1992, this plan was implemented by Duško Malović's special police unit, at the instigation of Drago Vuković, an employee of the local MUP and a member of the Bijeljina crisis staff.<sup>13115</sup> At the end of July and beginning of August 1992, villages such as Ljuta, Jelašca, Jezero, Mjehovina, and Daganj in Kalinovik Municipality were shelled, burnt, and taken by the VRS.<sup>13116</sup> Many villagers, including elderly and women, were killed during these attacks.<sup>13117</sup> With regard to Sokolac Municipality, Milan Tupajić, President of the Sokolac Municipal Assembly from 1991 and President of the Sokolac Crisis Staff from April 1992 until 1996,<sup>13118</sup> stated that members of the 2nd Motorized Romanija brigade arrested Muslims without grounds and held them without pressing charges in, among other places, the factory in Palez, near Knežina; a restaurant in Knežina; and the cellar of the building where the post office was.<sup>13119</sup> The Trial Chamber further recalls and refers to its findings regarding crimes in all the Municipalities in chapter 4.

3042. With regard to Srebrenica, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of several Adjudicated Facts describing the overall situation in the enclave. Thousands of Bosnian-Muslim men from the Srebrenica enclave were executed and buried in different locations in the Srebrenica, Bratunac, and Zvornik municipalities.<sup>13120</sup> Between 7,000 and 8,000 Bosnian-Muslim men were systematically murdered.<sup>13121</sup> Except for some who were wounded, all the men, whether separated in Potočari or captured from the column, were executed, either in small groups or in carefully orchestrated mass executions.<sup>13122</sup> Some were killed by the soldiers who captured them and some were killed in the places where they were temporarily detained.<sup>13123</sup> Most of the Bosnian-

Muslim men who were systematically murdered, however, were slaughtered in carefully orchestrated mass executions, commencing on 13 July 1995, in the region just north of Srebrenica.<sup>13124</sup> In executing the captured Bosnian-Muslim men, no effort was made to distinguish the soldiers from the civilians.<sup>13125</sup> All of the executions systematically targeted Bosnian-Muslim men of military age, regardless of whether they were civilians or soldiers.<sup>13126</sup> The groups of Bosnian Muslims killed by the VRS included boys and elderly men normally considered outside the range of military age.<sup>13127</sup> Some of the victims were severely handicapped and, for that reason, unlikely to have been combatants.<sup>13128</sup> Serious bodily or mental harm was done to the few individuals who survived the mass executions.<sup>13129</sup> The massacred men amounted to about one fifth of the overall Srebrenica community.<sup>13130</sup>

3043. The women of the Bosnian-Muslim community of Srebrenica have often been forced to live in collective and makeshift accommodations for many years, with a reduced standard of living.<sup>13131</sup> The vast majority of Bosnian-Muslim women refugees have been unable to find employment.<sup>13132</sup> Women who were forced to become the head of their households following the take-over of Srebrenica have had difficulties with the unfamiliar tasks of conducting official family business in the public sphere.<sup>13133</sup> Younger children who survived the take-over of Srebrenica have developed adjustment problems, such as low levels of concentration, nightmares, and flashbacks.<sup>13134</sup>

3044. As indicated above, when determining whether the general elements of crimes against humanity are met, the Trial Chamber also considered the evidence and its findings with regard to the individual counts in the Indictment. The review and analysis of this evidence is presented in chapters 4, 5, and 7. In summary, the Trial Chamber found that the SRK committed murder of civilians in Sarajevo over the course of several years. As detailed in chapters 4, 7, and 8, the Trial Chamber found that a number of perpetrators, including members of the VRS and MUP, committed murder of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities and Srebrenica as crimes against humanity. These incidents of murder were also found to be acts of persecution as a crime against humanity. Various incidents were found by the Trial Chamber to be extermination as a crime against humanity. The same perpetrators also committed a large number of incidents of unlawful detention, inhumane acts, destruction, and plunder as persecution. Moreover, as set out in detail in chapters 4, 7, and 8, the Trial Chamber finds that a number of perpetrators, including members of the VRS and MUP, committed the crimes of deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) against a large number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities and from Srebrenica. The Trial Chamber finds that these crimes were committed throughout the geographical and temporal scope of the Indictment.

3045. As set out above, the acts of violence were committed against thousands of victims throughout the Bosnian-Serb Republic and over a period of many years. These acts required a certain degree of, or in some cases extensive, organisation. This is particularly evident with regard to the establishment and running of detention facilities in the Municipalities and of the operation in Srebrenica in July 1995. Therefore, based on the evidence described above, including the findings with regard to individual counts in the Indictment, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that there was a widespread and systematic attack directed against the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilian population in Bosnia-Herzegovina, including the civilian population of Sarajevo.

3046. With regard to the requirement that the acts of the perpetrator need to be part of the attack, the Trial Chamber considered the circumstances of the acts, in particular the ethnicity of the victims, the nature of the acts (for example sniping, firing modified air bombs, rape, beatings), and the time and place of their commission, and finds beyond reasonable doubt that the acts found in chapters 4, 5, and 7 were part of the widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population.

3047. With regard to the requirement that the perpetrator knew that his or her acts are part of the attack, the Trial Chamber considers that the crimes were committed on a large scale and over a long period. In addition, the crimes were widely reported on by the international and national media as well as through communication and reporting within the VRS and the MUP and other internal channels in the Bosnian-Serb Republic. The widespread character and nature of the crimes inevitably created an awareness in the principal perpetrators that an attack as described above existed and that their acts were part of it. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators knew that their acts were part of this attack.

3048. Having determined the existence of an armed conflict and a widespread and systematic attack directed against a civilian population at the relevant time and place, the Trial Chamber will now assess the individual acts charged as crimes against humanity.

8.3 Murder

8.3.1 Applicable law

3049. Count 5 of the Indictment charges the Accused with murder as a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5 (a) of the Statute. The general elements and jurisdictional requirement for these crimes have been discussed in chapters 8.1 and 8.2, above.

3050. The crime of murder requires proof of the following elements:

- (a) the victim died;
- (b) an act or omission of the perpetrator caused the victim's death; and 3052. Death and causality. In light of its factual findings, the Trial Chamber finds that in all of the above-mentioned incidents the victims died and that their deaths were caused by acts of the perpetrators. The causes were mostly shooting, shelling, or beating. In one instance, death was caused by suffocation.

3053. Intent. With regard to most of the Schedule A incidents, the victims were targeted or detained prior to their killing. The Trial Chamber finds that the intent requirement is met in these incidents. In one of the remaining two incidents, Scheduled Incident A.6.1, over 800 inhabitants of Kozarac were killed during the shelling of the town. The shelling was followed by the advance of tanks and infantry, during which houses were set on fire and civilians and policemen were killed. When a doctor tried to negotiate safe passage of a severely injured boy to a hospital, the perpetrators responded that they would kill the Muslims anyway. In the other remaining incident (Scheduled Incident A.6.9), some of the victims died during a shelling attack. As in Kozarac, the advance of the attacking forces in Briševo following the shelling resulted in the killing of many inhabitants. The Trial Chamber finds that under these circumstances there is no reasonable doubt that the perpetrators shelled Kozarac and Briševo with the requisite intent for the crime of murder.

3054. In respect of each of the above Schedule B, C, and unscheduled incidents, given the circumstances of the killings, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators acted with the requisite intent for the crime of murder.

3055. The scheduled and unscheduled Srebrenica (Schedule E) incidents relate to killings in the surroundings of Srebrenica. In some incidents, victims were lined up prior to the killings or shot in the back. In other incidents, the victims were killed in large numbers, insulted, beaten, or threatened prior to their killing, or killed upon a clear order. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators in the Srebrenica incidents acted with the requisite intent for the crime of murder.

3056. The Schedule F and other incidents relate to sniping in Sarajevo. In many incidents, there was either a single shot or very few shots towards the victims or a series of shots following the initial shot aimed at preventing rescuers from approaching. The Trial Chamber also considered its findings about the general conditions in Sarajevo as set out in chapter 5.1.1. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the perpetrators in the incidents at issue acted with the requisite intent for the crime of murder.

3057. The Schedule G and other incidents relate to shelling in Sarajevo. In all incidents, the shelling hit residential areas. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.6 that the perpetrators in all incidents wilfully made civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of their shelling. The Trial Chamber finds that in all these incidents, the perpetrators acted with the requisite intent for the crime of murder.

3058. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.1 and 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws and customs of war.

3059. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber did not rely on Tabeau's determinations with regard to the status of victims, as further explained in Appendix B.

3060. In relation to the Schedule A incidents, the Trial Chamber finds that most of the victims were civilians. For some incidents (Scheduled Incident A.6.1 (the day after the attack at the Benkovac training grounds), Scheduled Incident A.6.2 (Aziz Behlić), Scheduled Incident A.6.6 (Hegići), and Scheduled Incident A.7.3), it remained unclear whether the victims were civilians or combatants. However, those people were at least detained at the time of killing, thus hors de combat. Accordingly, they did not actively participate in the hostilities at the time of the killings. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.2.1, Izet Ćolo was returning fire when he was killed. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that this victim was a combatant who actively participated in hostilities at the time of the killings. Accordingly, the killing of this man will not be further considered in relation to Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment.

3061. In relation to the Schedule B, C, and unscheduled incidents, the Trial Chamber recalls that almost all victims were civilians. Where it remained unclear whether they were civilians, they were at least detained at the time of killing, thus hors de combat.

3062. In relation to the Srebrenica (Schedule E) incidents, the Trial Chamber finds that a number of the victims were civilians. For many incidents, for example Scheduled Incident E.1.1 (majority of the 15 victims), Scheduled Incident E.2.1 (three victims without information on clothing), Scheduled Incident E.4.1, Scheduled Incident E.6.1, Scheduled Incident E.6.2 (some in military clothing), Scheduled Incident E.7.1, Scheduled Incident E.7.2, Scheduled Incident E.8.1 (some of the victims), Scheduled Incident E.8.2 (some of the victims), Scheduled Incident E.9.2, Scheduled Incidents E.10.1 (some victims), E.12.1, and E.13.1, and Scheduled Incident E.15.1, it remained unclear whether the victims were civilians or combatants. However, those people were at least detained at the time of killing, thus hors de combat. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that in all Srebrenica incidents, the victims were not actively participating in the hostilities at the time of the killings.

3063. In relation to the incidents related to Schedules F and G, the Trial Chamber finds that most of the victims, who included many children, were civilians who did not actively participate in the hostilities at the time of the shootings. People were shot when shopping, playing, when on trams, or lining up for humanitarian aid. Others were shot on their way to get water or even in their apartments. Victims were hit in residential areas, sometimes with modified air bombs. In relation to the remaining victims, in Scheduled Incident G.4, the Trial Chamber found that the shells were fired at a football tournament in a residential community. The victims were civilians, who did not actively participate in the hostilities at the time of the shelling, as well as combatants. Even though the combatants were carrying out a civilian activity, they were not hors de combat. Accordingly, the killings of any combatants in Scheduled Incident G.4 will not be further considered in relation to Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment. Similarly, there was a small number of victims in Scheduled Incidents G.8 and G.18 who were combatants. These victims will also not be further considered in relation to Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment.

3064. Nexus. The Trial Chamber recalls that all of the above-mentioned incidents occurred during the period in which an armed conflict took place in the territory of Bosnia-Herzegovina. Further, the Trial Chamber finds, based on the manner in which the acts took place, that there was a close relationship between the acts and the armed conflict. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the nexus requirement has been met.

3065. Conclusion. The Trial Chamber finds that the following incidents constituted murder as charged in Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment: Scheduled Incidents A.2.1 (except for the killing of Izet Ćolo), A.3.3, A.4.4, A.6.1 – A.6.9, A.7.1 – A.7.5, A.8.1, A.9.1, B.1.1, B.1.2, B.1.4, B.2.1, B.5.1, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.10.1, B.10.2, B.13.1 – B.13.5,

8.4 Extermination

8.4.1 Applicable law

3066. Count 4 of the Indictment charges the Accused with extermination as a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5 (b) of the Statute. The general elements and jurisdictional requirements for this crime have been discussed in chapter 8.2, above.

3067. The crime of extermination subsumes the elements of murder under Article 5 of the Statute.<sup>13136</sup> The actus reus of extermination requires that the killings constituting murder occur on a mass scale.<sup>13137</sup> Although ‘mass scale’ refers primarily to the number of killings, it does not suggest a numerical minimum.<sup>13138</sup> Relevant factors to consider when assessing whether the killings occurred on a mass scale include the time and place of the killings, the selection of the victims, and the manner in which they were targeted, and whether the killings were aimed at the collective group rather than victims in their individual capacity.<sup>13139</sup> The actus reus of extermination may be established through an aggregation of separate incidents where they form part of the same murder operation.<sup>13140</sup> In determining whether separate incidents may be aggregated, regard must be had to the circumstances in which the incidents occurred including the time and place of the killings, the manner of the killings and the identity of the perpetrators.<sup>13141</sup> The mens rea required for extermination is the intention to either (a) kill the victim, or

In the Lukić and Lukić case, the Appeals Chamber found that the killing of 59 persons was sufficiently large so as to constitute extermination (Lukić and Lukić Appeal Judgment, para. 543). In the Akayesu case, the ICTR Appeals Chamber upheld the finding that the killing of 16 persons constituted extermination (see Akayesu Appeal Judgment, paras 423-424; Akayesu Trial Judgment, paras 737-744).

8.4.2 Legal findings

3068. In chapters 4.1.1, 4.2.1, 4.3.1, 4.4.1, 4.5.1, 4.6.1, 4.7.1, 4.8.1, 4.10.1, 4.11.1, 4.12.1, 4.13.1, 4.14.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, 7.5, 7.6, 7.7, 7.8.1, 7.8.2, 7.9, 7.10, 7.11, 7.12, 7.13.1, 7.13.2, 7.14.1, 7.14.2, 7.15 the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the incidents of alleged extermination against the applicable law.

3069. Actus reus. The Trial Chamber recalls that the crime of extermination subsumes the elements of murder under Article 5 of the Statute as noted in chapter 8.4.1 above. The Trial Chamber also recalls that in chapter 8.3.2 it found that certain incidents of killing constitute murder as a crime against humanity.<sup>13143</sup> In assessing whether the element of mass scale was established for these incidents of murder, the Trial Chamber considered the number of deaths in each incident and the circumstances surrounding the deaths, including the selection of the victims, the time and place of the killings, and the manner in which the killings were carried out.

3070. In relation to Schedule A, in respect of the mass scale requirement for extermination, the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations which follow in the paragraphs below.

3071. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.3.3, the killing of at least 189 Bosnian Muslims including women, older men, and one baby in Biljani by VRS soldiers military police and reserve police members occurred in a single day on 10 July 1992 in the context of a ‘mopping-up operation’ conducted pursuant to an order from Drago Samardžija, Commander of the VRS 17th Ključ Light Infantry Brigade. The killings were methodical with the perpetrators reading names from lists and selecting groups of people to be killed in succession. Constant derogatory remarks were made about the group of victims’ Bosnian-Muslim ethnicity. The killings also took place in close geographical proximity, in and around Biljani School, although some detainees were transported away from the school in buses and then killed.

<sup>13143</sup> In relation to Schedule A, the Trial Chamber recalls that in chapter 8.3.2 it was found that in Scheduled Incident A.2.1, Izet Ćolo was a combatant and that the killing of this man would not be further considered in relation to Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment. The Trial Chamber will not consider this killing further in relation to Count 4 of the Indictment.

3072. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.4.4, there was organised selection, transport, and subsequent killing of approximately 150 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men by the same set of perpetrators, namely the 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade, in a single day on 4 November 1992. The killings were at proximate locations (in Duboka, Maljava and the Grabovica School sports hall) and occurred after the victims were detained together at the Grabovica School.

3073. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.1, from 24 until around 26 May 1992, the killing by shelling of over 800 inhabitants in Kozarac during an attack on the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim town of Kozarac and its surrounding Bosnian-Muslim villages, as well as the killing of at least 80 Bosnian-Muslim civilians and 10-14 surrendered Bosnian-Muslim policemen after the attack by VRS units of the Banja Luka Corps, Duško Tadić, the Serb police, and Andžić's paramilitaries upon their entry into the village. In respect of the other incident in Schedule A.6.1 on the day after the attack, which concerned the killing of 66 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats by Bosnian Serbs, wearing different kinds of uniforms, the killings occurred in the context of 100 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats being arrested and then transferred to the Benkovac training grounds. The 66 people were taken out in groups and killed during the course of the day, except one man who had a Croatian passport, who was killed before the transfers to Benkovac.

3074. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.4, all 19 killings occurred on 14 June 1992 and the victims were resident in the village of Jaskići. Of the 19 men, 14 were taken by the soldiers from Jaskići and were buried together in the same mass grave in Jakarina Kosa, Prijedor Municipality, and five were found in Kevljani-Sivci and Kevljani-Jaskići, Prijedor Municipality, mass graves. These killing incidents, therefore, demonstrably formed part of the same murder operation.

3075. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.5, the killing of at least 21 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians occurred during an attack on the village of Čarakovo between 1 and 23 July 1992, as part of a wider military operation in the Brdo area, by members of the Bosnian-Serb military and police some of whom directed derogatory remarks at the group as a whole as they were killing them. At least 16 of the 21 civilians were killed in the raid on 23 July and were shot in front of their houses and the rest were shot after having been forced to jump off a bridge.

3077. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.7 and Scheduled Incident A.6.8, the killings, around 25 July 1992, of all but two of 50 predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees at the 'Kipe' iron-ore mine after their detention at the Ljubija football stadium and of 15 predominantly Bosnian-Muslim men detained at the Ljubija football stadium occurred in closely related circumstances; both incidents occurred in close geographical proximity near the stadium, at the same time, and targeted victims who were detained together as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. Accordingly, both incidents formed part of a single murder operation.

3078. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.9, the killing of at least 68 people, in the mainly Bosnian-Croat village of Briševo, occurred in a single evening on 25 July 1992 and was in the context of an attack by the VRS on the village. The VRS killed the inhabitants, despite them being unarmed, first through shelling and then by shooting upon entering the village.

3079. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.7.1, VRS soldiers and paramilitaries rounded up, transported, and subsequently killed 32 Bosnian-Muslim men on the way to and at Vrhopolje Bridge in a single day on 31 May 1992. Some of the the victims were shot and killed after the perpetrators had lined them up, and others were shot and killed after being forced to jump off the bridge one-by-one into the water.

3080. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.7.2, the killing of around 31 Bosnian-Muslim men from households of Jelečevići, a Bosnian-Muslim hamlet in the area of Hrustovo, occurred in a single instance on 31 May 1992 after they had all taken refuge in a garage.

3081. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.7.3, the killing of at least 17 Bosnian-Muslim men around 27 June 1992 occurred after they were taken by the perpetrators from Kenjari to a house in the Blaževići hamlet. The men were killed as a group using explosives and gunfire in and around the house in which they were detained; the bodies of those who were killed outside were brought back into the house which was subsequently set on fire.

3082. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.8.1, the killing of 40-45 Bosnian-Muslim men and one Bosnian-Muslim woman occurred on a single day on 22 September 1992, as the perpetrators attacked the village of Novoseoci where the victims were present. The killings occurred in the context of the village population showing no resistance; the perpetrators entirely surrounded the village and carried out the killings contemporaneously as a single murder operation.

3084. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that, in the above incidents, killings on a mass scale have been proven.

3085. The Trial Chamber finds that Scheduled Incidents A.2.1, A.6.3, A.7.4, and A.7.5 did not satisfy the requirement of mass scale given the significantly low numbers of people killed in each incident and the absence of any other circumstances indicating that the killings were on a mass scale.<sup>13144</sup> The Trial Chamber also considered that the incidents above were not sufficiently connected to other incidents with regard to time, geographical proximity or through affiliation of the perpetrators so as to aggregate them for the purposes of assessing the mass scale requirement. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider these killing incidents in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

<sup>13144</sup> In Scheduled Incident A.2.1 ten people were killed; in Scheduled Incident A.6.3 nine people were killed; in Scheduled Incident A.7.4 14 people were killed, in Scheduled Incident A.7.5 nine people were killed.

3086. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.2, the Trial Chamber finds that the killing of the two men occurred after the main attack on Hambarine and that there was insufficient evidence tying the killing of the two men either to the main attack or to each other as they occurred on different dates, at different locations and by different perpetrators; one man was killed on 11 June 1992 by Serb police in Hambarine and the other on 1 July 1992 by men who were described as ‘Chetniks’ in Behlići. The victims were targeted in their individual capacity rather than as a collective group as demonstrated by the single and isolated deaths. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3087. In relation to Schedule B, Schedule C, and unscheduled incidents, in respect of the mass scale requirement for extermination, the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations which follow in the paragraphs below.

3088. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.1.2, approximately 24 Bosnian-Muslim detainees, among a larger group, were suffocated to death en route to Manjača camp after having been transported in conditions which inevitably led to extreme dehydration, oxygen deprivation, and subsequent death, as demonstrated by the remarks of the perpetrators, which included ‘we will see how many will arrive in Manjača’.

3089. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.5.1, the killing of 36 Bosnian-Muslim detainees in June and July 1992 and the killing of hundreds in the second half of 1992 at KP Dom were proximate in time and location, constituted a large number of detainees, and the perpetrators were camp guards sharing the same affiliation. These killing incidents, therefore, demonstrably formed part of a single murder operation.

3090. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.7.1, the killing of 23 Bosnian-Muslim detainees in Rantine occurred after they were transported together with their hands tied and brought to a stable where they were summarily shot and their bodies set on fire.

3091. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.8.1, the killing of at least 77 Bosnian-Muslim detainees held at Velagići School occurred after they were lined up and summarily shot. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.10.2, the killing of at least 47 Bosnian-Muslim detainees from the oil cisterns near Rajlovac Barracks occurred by concentrated gun-fire and fire-bombing that targeted the buses in which they were all being transported to the village of Sokolina.

3092. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.13.1, the killing of between 190 and 220 detainees, all or almost all of whom were Bosnian-Muslim and/or Bosnian-Croat, held in Room 3 at Keraterm camp occurred by corralling them into a single room, using some form of chemical gas to cause the detainees to panic, and then using a machine-gun aimed at the entrance of the room to shoot the detainees as they exited. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.13.3, the killing of at least 126 detainees, who were almost exclusively Bosnian-Muslim and/or Bosnian-Croat, from Omarska and Keraterm camps occurred after they were transported together towards Kozarac and Sanski Most. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.13.4, the killing of approximately between 100 and 180 detainees, all or almost all of whom were Bosnian-Muslim or Bosnian-Croat, in Omarska camp, who had been brought from the Brdo region occurred in a single day and after the detainees were selectively and severely beaten upon their arrival at the camp.

3093. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.14.2, the killing of 24 Bosnian-Muslim detainees at Duljevac was in the context of some of them having been used as human shields. They also had their hands tied behind their backs, were lined up and then summarily shot. The perpetrators returned to the incident site to kill two detainees who survived the initial shooting. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.16.2, the killing of between 140 and 150 Bosnian-Muslim detainees occurred in a single evening on 30 September 1992. The detainees were systematically removed from Sušica camp by MUP officers and then killed.

3095. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that in the above incidents, killings on a mass scale have been proven.

3096. The Trial Chamber finds that Scheduled Incidents B.1.1, B.1.4, B.2.1, B.5.1 in respect of the killing in June 1993, B.10.1, B.13.5, B.14.1, B.16.1, C.9.1, C.15.3, C.15.5 and C.16.3, the unscheduled incident in Foča Municipality, and the unscheduled incident in Kotor Varoš Municipality in respect of the killings on 13 June 1992, do not satisfy the requirement of mass scale given the significantly low numbers of people killed in each incident and the lack of any other circumstances indicating that the killings were on a large scale.<sup>13145</sup> The Trial Chamber also considers that the incidents above were not sufficiently connected to other incidents with regard to time, geographical proximity or through affiliation of the perpetrators so as to aggregate them for the purposes of assessing the mass scale requirement. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider these killing incidents in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3097. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.13.2, the Trial Chamber considered that the killings were too disparate to have been aimed at a collective group although they occurred in the same place, at Omarska camp, and mainly by perpetrators who were camp guards. The killings occurred on separate occasions over a relatively prolonged period of time between 29 May and August 1992. Although the killings were cruel and brutal there was no pattern to the killings and the perpetrators targeted individuals or small groups within the population detained at the camp. The Trial Chamber finds that the killings were orchestrated to kill individual victims and, therefore, the mass scale requirement is not satisfied. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3098. In relation to Schedule E, the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations, which follow in the paragraphs below, in respect of the mass scale requirement for extermination.

3099. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.1.1, on 13 July 1995, 15 Bosnian-Muslim males were killed in a single instance after being taken out from the Kravica warehouse where they were detained, lined-up and then shot. A 14-year-old boy was among those killed. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.2.1, approximately 150 Bosnian-Muslim males including minors were transported in a convoy, between 13 and 17 July 1995, shot and buried afterwards in a mass grave. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.3.1, from 13 to 14 July 1995, approximately 1,000 Bosnian-Muslim males who were detained in Kravica Warehouse were killed by perpetrators who discharged hand grenades, anti-tank rockets and bullets into the warehouse once it was full; the perpetrators killed those who survived the initial round of fire or those who were attempting to escape. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.5.1, on 14 July 1995, approximately 21 Bosnian-Muslim males, who were detained at Luke School, were transported together from the school to a nearby pasture and shot.

3100. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.6.2, at least 819 Bosnian-Muslim males, who were detained at Grbavci School, were transported in an organised manner to two meadows near Orahovac, having been directed to the school gym first, then loaded onto trucks in groups and brought to the meadows in turns until the gym was empty. The victims were lined up in the meadows and killed in one single day on 14 July 1995.

3101. In relation to Scheduled Incidents E.7.1 and E.7.2, about 20 Bosnian-Muslim men, detained at Petkovci School, were killed on 14 July 1995. About 401 Bosnian-Muslim males, including minors, who had been detained at Petkovci School were transported to Petkovci Dam and subsequently killed there on 14 and 15 July 1995. The fact that the victims were detained together in the same school prior to the killings, the killings were committed on or around 14 July 1995 and the perpetrators targeted Bosnian Muslims demonstrates that the killings formed part of a single murder operation. Accordingly, Scheduled Incident E.7.1 is aggregated to Scheduled Incident E.7.2 for the purpose of assessing the mass scale requirement.

3102. In relation to Scheduled Incidents E.8.1 and E.8.2, on 14 or 15 July 1995 at least 12 Bosnian Muslims were killed behind the Ročević School after being detained there; and on 15 July 1995 at least 575 Bosnian-Muslim males, who were previously detained at Ročević School, were killed after being transported to a site where they were summarily shot. The fact that the victims were detained together in the same school prior to the killings, the killings were committed on or around 15 July 1995 by the same perpetrators, namely members of the Zvornik or Bratunac Brigades, and the perpetrators targeted Bosnian Muslims demonstrates that the killings formed part of a single murder operation. Accordingly, Scheduled Incident E.8.1 is aggregated to Scheduled Incident E.8.2 for the purpose of assessing the mass scale requirement.

3103. In relation to Scheduled Incidents E.9.1 and E.9.2, on 14 or 15 July 1995 at least eight Bosnian-Muslim men were killed at the Kula School near Pilica by members of the VRS Zvornik Brigade after being detained there by the same perpetrators; and on 16 July 1995 between 1,000 and 1,200 male Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Kula School in Pilica were summarily executed at the Branjevo Military Farm by VRS soldiers, including members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment and a group of soldiers from Bratunac. The fact that the victims were detained together in the same school prior to the killings, the killings were committed on or around 15 and 16 July 1995 by the VRS, and the perpetrators targeted Bosnian Muslims demonstrates that the killings formed part of a single murder operation. The Trial Chamber also considered that the killing of the men at Kula School was linked to the subsequent killings at the Branjevo Military Farm given the remarks of the Zvornik Brigade Command when informed of the situation of the detainees at Kula. The members of the Zvornik Brigade Command remarked ‘why aren’t you killing them off?’ and informed the VRS guards at Kula School prior to the killings at the Branjevo Military Farm that the detainees were to be ‘taken away’. Accordingly, Scheduled Incident E.9.1 is aggregated to Scheduled Incident E.9.2 for the purpose of assessing the mass scale requirement.

3104. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.10.1, approximately 500 Bosnian-Muslim men and women were grouped together in the Pilica Cultural Centre and killed at the same time in a single day on 16 July 1995. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.12.1, 39 men and boys almost all of whom were Bosnian Muslims, who were being transported together, were summarily shot, killed and buried together at a site in Bišina on 23 July 1995.

3105. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that, in the above incidents killings on a mass scale have been proven.

3106. The Trial Chamber finds that Scheduled Incidents E.4.1, E.14.1 and E.14.2, the unscheduled incidents of 13 July 1995, 18 July 1995 and 23 July 1995, do not independently satisfy the requirement of mass scale given the significantly low number of people killed in each incident and the lack of any other circumstances indicating that the killings were on a large scale.<sup>13146</sup> The Trial Chamber also finds that the incidents above were not sufficiently connected to other incidents with regard to geographical proximity, the manner in which the victims were killed or through affiliation of the perpetrators so as to aggregate them for the purposes of assessing the mass scale requirement.<sup>13147</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider these killing incidents in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

<sup>13146</sup> In Scheduled Incident E.4.1 16 people were killed, in Scheduled Incident E.14.1 nine people, in Scheduled Incident E.14.2 one person, in the unscheduled incident of 13 July 1995 15 people were killed, in the unscheduled incident of 18 July 1995 four people were killed, in the unscheduled incident of 23 July 1995 ten people were killed.

3107. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.6.1 the Trial Chamber finds that the killing of two detainees at Grbavci School in Orahovac on 14 July 1995 does not satisfy the requirement of mass scale given the number. Although the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the two victims in Scheduled Incident E.6.1 were detained in the same detention facility and killed on the same day as the killings in Scheduled Incident E.6.2 and that the victims were all of Bosnian-Muslim ethnicity, it notes that the manner of the killings in Scheduled Incident E.6.1 differed significantly from the killings in Scheduled Incident E.6.2, as the two victims were taken out of the sports hall in response to specific individual circumstances, namely because one victim spoke up to the guards in the sports hall and the other complained about the conditions in the hall, and shot outside. Therefore, the Chamber finds that the two men were targeted in their individual capacity rather than as part of the collective group. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3108. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.13.1, the Trial Chamber finds that the killing of six Bosnian-Muslim males in Trnovo, sometime between mid-July and mid-August 1995, does not satisfy the mass scale requirement given the low number of people killed. The perpetrators of the killings were not temporally or geographically proximate to other incidents which took place on or about 13 July 1995. The Trial Chamber also finds that the circumstances of Scheduled Incident E.13.1 were not sufficiently connected to other incidents in Schedule E such that it could not aggregate the killings with other killing incidents in Schedule E. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

<sup>13147</sup> In relation to the unscheduled incident of 23 July 1995, the perpetrators were VRS soldiers of the Zvornik Brigade. The Zvornik Brigade had carried out other killings in Srebrenica but the location, and time of this incident was relatively removed from other killing incidents.

3109. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.15.1, the Trial Chamber notes that more than 50 Bosnian-Muslim men were killed in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School over a short duration of time, from 12 to 14 July 1995, which are relevant factors assisting in establishing mass scale. The killings, however, should be seen in the context of the several thousand Bosnian-Muslim civilians and soldiers held in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and the fact that there was a broad mix of perpetrators killing in a sporadic fashion which indicates that the killings were not grouped together either in numerical terms or that there was patterned killings targeting the wider group held at Vuk Karadžić Elementary School. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the killings were isolated incidents which, although related in a broad fashion, do not meet the mass scale requirement. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3110. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.15.3, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the killing of one 'mentally unstable' Bosnian-Muslim man who was taken off a bus parked in front of Vuk Karadžić Elementary School and summarily executed on the evening of 13 July 1995 was committed by perpetrators affiliated with those of other incidents in Schedule E and took place at the same time as other incidents, namely, on or about 13 July 1995. The Trial Chamber, however, finds that the killing was not aimed at the collective group of Bosnian-Muslim men or part of a wider murder operation. The victim was targeted in his individual capacity. He had fallen asleep in the bus despite an order from a military policeman to not sleep at night, was hit by a policeman on the shoulder and, in turn, he hit the policeman back. The man was subsequently taken out of the bus and then shot. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that this incident was an isolated and not directly related to the mass scale requirement. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not further consider this killing incident in respect of the charge of extermination under Count 4 of the Indictment.

3111. Mens rea. The Trial Chamber recalls from chapter 8.4.1 that relevant factors to consider when assessing whether the killings occurred on a mass scale include the time and place of the killings, the selection of the victims, and the manner in which they were targeted, and whether the killings were aimed at the collective group rather than victims in their individual capacity. In relation to Schedule A, the Trial Chamber had regard to the following considerations in respect of the intent requirement for extermination. In respect of Scheduled Incidents A.4.4, A.6.1, A.6.6, A.6.7, and A.6.8, the Trial Chamber considered the large number of victims of the killings, the organisation that preceded the killings in order to group the victims together, and the wholesale manner in which the grouped victims were killed. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.6.4, the Trial Chamber considered the derogatory remarks that the perpetrators directed towards part of the group and the way the bodies of the victims were disposed of together in mass graves. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.6.5, the Trial Chamber considered the derogatory remarks that the perpetrators directed towards the group as they were killed and that they were killed by being shot at in an indiscriminate fashion. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.7.1, the Trial Chamber considered the fact that the victims were systematically led on to the bridge, forced to jump into the river prior to being killed, and the perpetrators were told to kill 70 Muslims on that day because seven Serb soldiers had been killed in that area. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.7.2, the Trial Chamber considered the fact that the victims were all taking refuge in a garage from a wider military operation by the same brigade in the area, that one of the victims tried to mediate but was killed and that the rest of the killings followed immediately after. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.7.3, the Trial Chamber considered the fact that the victims were detained together and were told that they were being taken for exchange prior to being taken to a house and killed. In respect of Scheduled Incidents A.8.1 and A.9.1, the Trial Chamber considered the wider military operations in the villages of Novoseoci and Drum respectively in which the perpetrators selected, in an organised fashion, the two large groups of men, one of which included one woman, whom they then summarily shot. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.9, the Trial Chamber considered the wider military operation in the village of Briševo, where the perpetrators first shelled the village where there was no combat activity and then selected, in an organised fashion the unarmed villagers, to shoot them in a wholesale manner. The Trial Chamber, accordingly, finds that all the victims in Scheduled Incidents A.4.4, A.6.1, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, A.6.9, A.7.1, A.7.2, A.7.3, A.8.1, and A.9.1 died as a result of acts of the perpetrators who intended to kill on a mass scale.

3112. In relation to Schedule B and unscheduled incidents, the Trial Chamber had regard to the following considerations in respect of the intent requirement for extermination. In respect of Scheduled Incident B.1.2, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.1.1 that the victims suffocated during transport in trucks which were hot, cramped and covered in tarpaulins. The perpetrators confiscated the victims' water bottles and forced some to consume salt prior to transport and remarked about 'how many will arrive' at the intended destination. The Trial Chamber, accordingly, considered the fact that the perpetrators created conditions in the vehicle transporting the detainees such that the only reasonable inference is that those conditions would inevitably lead to death. In respect of Scheduled Incidents B.5.1 in relation to the killings in June, July, and the second half of 1992, B.8.1, B.10.2, B.13.1, B.13.3, B.13.4, B.14.2, and B.16.2, the Trial Chamber considered the large number of victims of the killings, the organisation that preceded the killings including selection of detainees, and the co-ordinated or collective manner in which they were killed in each respective incident. Furthermore, in respect of Scheduled Incidents B.10.2 and B.14.2, the perpetrators returned to kill survivors. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.7.1, the perpetrators corralled the group of detainees together, killed them in a collective manner and set the bodies of the victims on fire. In respect of Scheduled Incident B.13.1, the perpetrators sang songs both during and after the killings. In relation to the unscheduled incident on 2 July 1992 in Kotor Varoš Municipality, the Trial Chamber considered that the killings occurred in retaliation for an ambush of VRS forces by armed Muslims and targeted Muslims in the context of the attack on Vrbanjci. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds that all the victims in Scheduled Incidents B.1.2, B.5.1 in respect of the killings in June, July, and the second half of 1992, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.10.2, B.13.1, B.13.3, B.13.4, B.14.2, B.16.2 and the unscheduled incident on 2 July 1992 in Kotor Varoš Municipality, died as a result of acts of the perpetrators who intended to kill on a mass scale.

3113. In relation to Schedule E, the Trial Chamber had regard to the following considerations in respect of the intent requirement for extermination. In respect of Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.5.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, and E.10.1, the Trial Chamber considered the organisation that preceded the killings in order to group the victims together, and the wholesale manner in which the grouped victims were killed. In respect of Scheduled Incidents E.2.1, E.3.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, and E.10.1, the Trial Chamber considered in particular the significantly high number of victims killed in one single murder operation.<sup>13148</sup> In respect of Scheduled Incidents E.3.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, and E.7.2 the Trial Chamber considered additionally the derogatory remarks that the perpetrators directed at the whole group while they killed the victims and the indiscriminate manner in which the perpetrators shot them. In respect of Scheduled Incident E.7.2, the Trial Chamber additionally considered the fact that one perpetrator ordered other perpetrators to examine the rows of bodies and kill every detainee who was still alive with a bullet in the head. The Trial Chamber further considered the fact that in respect of Scheduled Incident E.10.1, the perpetrators threw, inter alia, hand-grenades at the group of victims and in respect of Scheduled Incident E.7.1 that the perpetrators killed the victims, inter alia, by indiscriminate gunfire. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.12.1, the Trial Chamber considered the fact that the detainees were transported, all summarily killed and subsequently buried in a hole - several of the bodies exhumed from the gravesite in Bišina had ligatures on their hands and a few had blindfolds on. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds that all of the victims in Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.5.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, E.10.1, and E.12.1 died as a result of the acts of the perpetrators who intended to kill on a mass scale.

3114. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity.

3115. Status of victims. In relation to Schedule A, Schedule B, unscheduled incidents, and Schedule E the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.3.2 with regard to the status of the victims.

3116. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the killings constituting murder in Scheduled Incidents A.3.3, A.4.4, A.6.1, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, A.6.9, A.7.1, A.7.2, A.7.3, A.8.1, A.9.1, B.1.2, B.5.1 in respect of the killings in June, July, and the second half of 1992, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.10.2, B.13.1, B.13.3, B.13.4, B.14.2, B.16.2, the unscheduled incident of 2 July 1992 in Kotor Varoš Municipality, E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.5.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1 E.9.2, E.10.1 and E.12.1 constitute extermination as a crime against humanity punishable under Article 5 of the Statute.

<sup>13148</sup> In Scheduled Incident E.2.1 approximately 150 people were killed, in Scheduled Incident E.6.2 at least 819 people, in Scheduled Incident E.7.1 and Scheduled Incident E.7.2 about 643 people in total, in Scheduled Incident E.10.1 approximately 500 people, in Scheduled Incident E.8.1 and Scheduled Incident E.8.2 at least 575 in total, in Scheduled Incident E.9.1 and Scheduled Incident E.9.2 between 1,000-1,200 in total.

8.5 Deportation and forcible transfer

8.5.1 Applicable law

3117. Counts 7 and 8 of the Indictment charge the Accused with deportation and forcible transfer as crimes against humanity. According to the Indictment, ‘restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, and destruction of houses and cultural monuments and sacred sites, all targeting Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities, as well as the threat of further such acts, caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear’.<sup>13149</sup> The crime of deportation (Count 7) is listed in Article 5 (d) of the Statute, whereas forcible transfer (Count 8) is a charge under ‘other inhumane acts’ in Article 5 (i). The general elements and jurisdictional requirements for these crimes have been discussed in chapters 8.2, above.

3118. Deportation and forcible transfer both entail the forcible displacement of persons from the area in which they are lawfully present, without grounds permitted under international law.<sup>13150</sup> The crime of deportation requires that the victims be displaced across a de jure state border, or, in certain circumstances, a de facto border.<sup>13151</sup> Forcible transfer involves displacement of persons within national boundaries.<sup>13152</sup>

3119. Forcible displacement means that people are moved against their will or without a genuine choice.<sup>13153</sup> Fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression, and other such circumstances may create an environment where there is no choice but to leave, thus amounting to the forcible displacement of people.<sup>13154</sup> Displacement of persons carried out pursuant to an agreement among political or military leaders, or under the auspices of the ICRC or another neutral organization, does not necessarily make it voluntary.<sup>13155</sup>

3120. International humanitarian law recognizes limited circumstances under which the displacement of civilians during armed conflict is allowed, namely if it is carried out for the security of the persons involved, or for imperative military reasons.<sup>13156</sup> In such cases the displacement is temporary and must be carried out in such a manner as to ensure that displaced persons are returned to their homes as soon as the situation allows.<sup>13157</sup> Whether a forcible displacement of people is lawful is, however, more appropriately dealt with when considering the general elements of crimes against humanity.<sup>13158</sup>

3121. The perpetrator of deportation or forcible transfer must intend to forcibly displace the persons, however, the intent need not be to displace on a permanent basis.<sup>13159</sup>

8.5.2 Legal findings

3122. In chapters 4.1.7, 4.2.7, 4.3.7, 4.4.7, 4.5.7, 4.6.7, 4.7.7, 4.8.7, 4.9.7, 4.10.7, 4.11.7, 4.12.7, 4.13.7, 4.14.7, and 7.17, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged forcible transfers and deportations of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, against the applicable law:

He was transferred from KP Dom to the Kalinovik police station on 18 September 1992, where on 21 March 1993 Serb soldiers, including Zoran Samardžić or Pedrag a.k.a. Pedo Trifković/Trivun, both of whom headed, or were members of, sub-units under Marko Kovač, Commander of Foča Tactical Group, threatened him with a knife and a rifle and told him that he had 15 minutes left to live before letting him go; (vi) the transfer from Foča to Goražde by bus on 23 October 1992 of a group of Bosnian-Muslim women and children who had been detained for a month at the Partizan Sports Hall ; and (vii) the exchange on 15 June 1994 of a Bosnian Muslim from Foča Municipality who was detained at KP Dom until July 1993 and then Kula prison. (e) Kalinovik Municipality - the departure of a Bosnian-Muslim man, after having survived a killing incident in Ratine on 5 August 1992, for Zenica in Muslim-controlled territory, where he arrived on 20 September 1992, as further set out in chapter 4.5.7;

Several convoys were initially organized by the War Presidency and from 29 June 1992 by an agency established by the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff to oversee the resettlement of persons that arranged buses for the transfer. Those leaving did so because they were either made to leave or left because of the living conditions. Some of the convoys left for Travnik, as further set out in chapter 4.7.7;

(h) Novi Grad Municipality - the expulsion of all Muslims who had survived the attack on Ahatovići, together with Serbs and Croats married to Muslims on or about 27 May 1992 by forces, including the White Eagles and others in JNA uniforms, as further set out in chapter 4.8.7;

(1) Sanski Most Municipality - the departure of almost all Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Sanski Most Municipality between 27 May 1992 and 13 October 1995, with the vast majority having left by the end of 1992, in particular: (i) the evacuation of women, children, the elderly and able-bodied men living in the Bosnian-Muslim Mahala neighbourhood in Sanski Most Town by the 6th Krajina Brigade, first to Pobjeđe on 29 May 1992, after which they were rounded up and transferred in buses to Velika Kladuša around 2 June 1992; (ii) the departure of the surviving inhabitants of the Bosnian-Muslim village of Hrustovo after they were forced out by the perpetrators of the attack on Hrustovo village along with approximately 200 inhabitants of the neighbouring villages to Doboj. He then went to Croatia in December 1992; (iv) the transportation of a group of Bosnian Muslims from Sanski Most Municipality to Bihać Municipality at the end of May 1992 under escort by Serb soldiers, after arrangements for their departure had been made by Boško Banjac, a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff earlier that month; (v) the departure in May 1992 of one convoy, comprised of approximately 1,200 women, children, and elderly Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Mahala to Velika Kladuša. They left against their will and were escorted by the Bosnian-Serb police; (vi) the departure on 11 June 1992 from Sanski Most Municipality to Velika Kladuša of one convoy comprising 850 Bosnian Muslims who were threatened at gunpoint and forced into buses by guards under the direction of Davidović, the Commander of the Serb Crisis Committee of Banja Luka; (vii) the departure between August and September 1992 of at least 6,100 Bosnian Muslims from Sanski Most Municipality to Travnik in at least three convoys organized by the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and the SDS. One of the convoys left on 17 August 1992 and composed of at least 1,600 people from Sanski Most Town who had been ordered to leave town that morning; (viii) the transfer of one Bosnian-Muslim woman along with her children from Hrustovo to Tomina in July 1992. They left to Karlovac in Croatia; and (xii) the exchange on 20 July 1993, by the authorities of Batković camp in Čelebići of one Bosnian Croat from Sanski Most Municipality. He had been previously detained in Batković camp. These incidents are further set out in chapter 4.12.7;

(m) Sokolac Municipality - (i) the departure of the Muslim population of Sokolac Town from 12 May 1992, most of them leaving for Olovo because of the threat of violence perceived by the Muslim population against them in the town of Sokolac and the village of Knežina and a lack of protection from the municipal authorities, including the Crisis Staff and its President, Milan Tupajić; (ii) the transportation on 22 September 1992 by bus of the women and children from the Muslim village of Novoseoci to Sarajevo by members of the VRS 2nd Romanija Brigade, including Momčilo Pajić; and (iii) the exchange at the Sarajevo airport on 20 August 1993 of a Bosnian-Muslim man, detained in various detention centres in 1992 and 1993. Then the group had to walk to Kladanj. The transfer took place following an attack on Zaklopač on 16 May, during which approximately 60 to 80 people were killed; (ii) the transfer of women and children from Gradina, Sušica, and other Bosnian-Muslim hamlets to Vlasenica Town in May and June 1992 by the Vlasenica SJB special police platoon, led by Kraljević under the command of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, and supported by a VRS unit; (iii) the capture and subsequent transfer on 2 June 1992 of 500 Muslims from Drum village in Gradina to different locations – Sušica camp, the Vlasenica bus station, or the football field – by Kraljević's unit, accompanied by VRS forces, after which they were taken to Kladanj; (iv) the transportation on 6 June 1992 to Luke in buses and trucks of approximately 800 Bosnian-Muslim women, following the separation of men from women and children at Sušica camp. Once in Luke, some women continued to Kladanj on foot while others were taken to Cerska in Vlasenica Municipality; (v) the release as part of an exchange of Witness RM-004 and Witness RM-030 between December 1992 and July 1993, both Bosnian-Muslim men from Vlasenica, from Batković camp where they had been detained after their transfer from Sušica camp; Witness RM-030 was exchanged in Tuzla; and (vi) the transfer in July or August 1992 from Sušica camp to either Kladanj or Cerska, of a large number of Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and elderly men, in three buses by Serb police or military. These incidents are further set out in chapter 4.14.7;

(o) Srebrenica – the transportation organised by VRS and the MUP, following the takeover of Srebrenica by VRS forces, of around 25,000 Bosnian Muslims, mostly women, children, and elderly out of Potočari on 12 and 13 July 1995 to Bosnian-Muslim controlled territory. This incident is further set out in chapter 7.17.

First element of the actus reus – displacement

3123. First the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were lawfully present in the areas they left.

3124. Displacement across a de jure state border. With regard to the displacement of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats to foreign countries: Croatia as described in incidents (a)(i), (k)(vii), (j)(ii), (l)(iii), (l)(xi); Hungary via Serbia as described in incident (b)(ii); Montenegro, Sweden and other countries as described in incident (c)(i); Serbia as described in incident (c)(ii); and Montenegro as described in incident (k)(v), the Trial Chamber finds that these were instances of displacements across a de jure border and that therefore the first element of the actus reus for the crime of deportation is met for these incidents.

3125. Displacement within national boundaries. With regard to the displacement of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats to: Tesanj and Tuzla as described in incident (a)(ii); Travnik, Turbe, Doboј, Banja Luka, Tuzla and Gračania as described in incident (j)(i); Tuzla as described in incident (n)(v); Turbe as described in incidents (a)(iii) and (l)(ix); Rogaj as described in incident (c)(iii); Goražde as described in incident (c)(vi) and (k)(i); Sarajevo as described in incidents (d), (i), (k)(iv), (k)(viii) and (m)(ii); Zenica as described in incident (e); Pokrivenik, Kopljevići and Rudine Forest as described in incident (k)(ii); Olovo as described in incidents (k)(iii) and (m)(i); Zvornik as described in incident (k)(vi); Velika Kladuša as described in incidents (l)(i), (l)(v), and (l)(vi); Muslim-held territory as described in incidents (l)(ii), (l)(viii), (o); Bihać as described in incident (l)(iv); Travnik as described in incidents (f)(i), (f)(ii), (l)(vii), (l)(x); Travnik and outside of Kotor Varoš municipality as described in incident (g)<sup>13160</sup>; Čelebići as described in incident (l)(xii); Kladanj as described in incidents (n)(i) and (n)(iii); Kladanj and Cerska and described in incidents (n)(iv) and (n)(vi); and Vlasenica town as described in incident (n)(ii), the Trial Chamber notes that they involved displacements within national boundaries and, as such, it finds that the first element of the actus reus for the crime of inhumane acts (forcible transfer) is met for these incidents.

3126. The Trial Chamber also made findings regarding the exchanges of detainees in Sarajevo and at the Sarajevo airport in incidents (c)(v), (m)(iii) and (k)(vi) and finds that these victims were displaced within national boundaries. With regard to incident (c)(iv), the Trial Chamber found that a Bosnian-Muslim detainee at KP Dom was taken to Kalinovik where he was exchanged, and therefore finds that he was displaced within national boundaries. Thus, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the first element of the actus reus for the crime of inhumane acts (forcible transfer) is met for these incidents.

<sup>13160</sup> Regarding incident (g), the Trial Chamber understands that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who were transferred to other places outside Kotor Varoš Municipality were also displaced within national boundaries.

3127. In relation to incident (b)(i), the Trial Chamber was unable to determine where the Muslims went after being transferred to no-man's land and where the other Muslims who fled Bijeljina went. With regard to incident (c)(vii) which involves the exchange of a Bosnian-Muslim detainee at Kula prison, the Trial Chamber notes the absence of information as to where this exchange took place and where this person ultimately arrived. In incident (h), the Trial Chamber was unable to determine where the Muslims, as well as Serbs and Croats married to Muslims, were expelled to. The Trial Chamber can therefore not establish that these people were moved across a de jure or de facto border but it is satisfied that the first element of the actus reus for the crime of inhumane acts (forcible transfer) is met.

Second element of the actus reus – forced

3128. Incidents of displacement following detention. In incident (c)(ii), the Trial Chamber found that the women were transported from the Bukovica Motel where they were detained to Serbia by bus and police cars. Having considered their detention and the fact that they were transported by bus and police cars, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3129. In relation to the exchange of a KP Dom detainee taken to Kalinovik as described in incident (c)(iv), the Trial Chamber considered the conditions of detention and the ill-treatment in KP Dom as described in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave. In incident (c)(v), the detainee was first transferred from KP Dom to Kalinovik police station where he was detained for months before being exchanged. Having considered the conditions of detention and the ill-treatment in KP Dom as described in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1, as well as the forced labour he had to perform while detained in Kalinovik police station (see chapter 4.5.5) and the threats he received from Serb soldiers just after being taken out of the police station (see chapter 4.5.2 Unscheduled incidents – Kalinovik police station), the Trial Chamber finds that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3130. With regard to incident (c)(iii), the Trial Chamber notes that the Bosnian-Muslim man was detained at KP Dom where the conditions of detention were very harsh and where many detainees were regularly beaten as described in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule

C.6.1. From KP Dom, he was taken to Kalinovik and then to Dobro Polje by policemen where he was ordered to walk toward Rogaj in ABiH-controlled territory. In light of these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3131. In relation to incident (c)(vi), the Trial Chamber considered that the group of displaced persons consisted of women and children, who were detained at Partizan Hall for a month prior to their transfer by bus to Goražde and finds that in light of their detention and the fact that they were transferred by bus that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3132. Turning to incident (k)(iii), insofar as it relates to the departure of 280 Bosnian Muslims held at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School escorted by guards in military vehicles to Olovo, the Trial Chamber considered its findings on the unlawful detention and cruel or inhumane treatment at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School (see chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1) and the fact that they were transferred under military escort, and finds that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave. Regarding incident (k)(iii) insofar as it relates to the transfer of the Bosnian-Muslims from Rogatica Town to Olovo under escort of members of the Sokolac police station, the Trial Chamber considered its finding that around 26 May 1992, a Serb announcement stated that the Serbs intended to ‘cleanse’ Rogatica of Muslim extremists and so-called Green Berets, and that once Rogatica Town was taken over by the Serbs, Živojin Novaković said that the town would be cleansed and that anyone found in the town would be killed. Based on the above, and on the fact that they were under escort of members of the Sokolac police station, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3133. In incident (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber notes that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained at Trnopolje prior to their transfer in early October 1992. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.4 on the conditions of detention and ill-treatments in this camp until the end of September 1992, and on the killings in Trnopolje in chapter 4.10.1 Schedule B.13.5. Having considered the above, and that the transfer was organised by Simo Drljača, the Commander of the SJB as well as by the police and the military in October 1992, the Trial Chamber finds that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3136. Exchanges following detention. Turning to incident (k)(vi), which relates to the exchange of Rasadnik camp detainees, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the killings that occurred in this camp in chapter 4.11.1 Rasadnik camp (Schedule C.16.3) as well as on the conditions of detention and the ill-treatment the detainees were subjected to in chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.3. Further, the Trial Chamber notes that these exchanges were carried out by the VRS members in charge of the camp at the time. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that these detainees did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3137. Incident (k)(vii) relates to the exchange of a Batković camp detainee by the authorities in charge of the camp. The Trial Chamber considered its findings on the conditions of detention and the ill-treatment at Batković camp (see chapter 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1) as well as the fact that this detainee was exchanged by the VRS members who were in charge of his detention, and is satisfied that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3138. With regard to incident (m)(iii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the man had been detained since 1992 and transferred to various detention centres until he was finally transferred to Kula in June 1993 to be exchanged (see chapter 4.13.7). The Trial Chamber notes that during their transfer to Kula, the detainees were told that they had been brought for exchange. Considering the above, as well as the length of time spent in detention, the conditions of detention, murders and ill-treatment in the various detention centres where he was held (see chapters 4.1.2 Schedule B.2.1, 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1, and 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1), the Trial Chamber finds that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave. Regarding incident (c)(vii), the Trial Chamber notes that Witness RM-046 was first held at KP Dom Foča and then detained at Kula, before being exchanged on 15 June 1994, and considered its findings on unlawful detention and ill-treatment in both camps as well as its finding on the killings that occurred in KP Dom Foča during his detention (see chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1, 4.3.1 Schedule B.5.1, and 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1). Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that Witness RM-046 did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3139. Incidents (l)(x) and (l)(xi) pertain to the exchange of Manjača camp detainees. Having considered its findings on murders (see chapters 4.1.1 Schedule B.1.1 and 4.1.1 Schedule B.1.4), unlawful detention and cruel or inhumane treatments (see chapter 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2) in Manjača Camp and the fact that the VRS was in charge of the camp and organised these exchanges, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3140. In incident (l)(xii), a Bosnian Croat detained in Batković camp was exchanged. Having considered its findings on the conditions of detention and the ill-treatment in Batković camp in chapter 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1 as well as the fact that this detainee was exchanged by the authorities in charge of the camp, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3141. In incident (n)(v), two Bosnian Muslims were first detained at Sušica camp, then transferred to Batković camp from where they were exchanged between December 1992 and July 1993. Considering the conditions of detention, the ill-treatment, the killings in both Sušica camp and then in Batković as set out in chapters 4.14.2 Schedule C.19.3, 4.14.1 Schedule B.16.1, 4.14.1 Schedule B.16.2, 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1, and 4.2.2 Schedule B.2.1, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3142. Incidents of displacement due to the circumstances in the municipalities. In relation to Banja Luka Municipality, the Defence argued that both Serbs and Muslims left the municipality voluntarily due to the war.<sup>13161</sup> With regard to incident (a)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats left out of fear and that the departures were exacerbated by the conduct of the civilian authorities, including members of the ARK Crisis Staff, who facilitated the departure of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Banja Luka Municipality in 1992; in 1992 Brđanin called upon Bosnian Muslims to leave the Krajina; on 29 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff decided that it would permit Muslims and Croats to leave ARK territory on the condition that Serbs were allowed to move into the ARK and the Bosnian-Serb Republic; it also decided to oppose and prevent all attempts to pressure or force the population to move. Further, it recalls its findings on the circumstances surrounding these departures, such as the discriminatory measures in chapter 4.1.6 that from 12 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued decisions to remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their positions in publicly-owned enterprises in Krajina and that those who had lost their jobs were also evicted from employer-owned apartments. Considering all the above, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who left Banja Luka Municipality did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard because they were dismissed from their jobs and evicted from their apartment while the Bosnian Serbs were not. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these displacements were civilian authorities, including members of the ARK Crisis Staff.

3145. In relation to Kalinovik Municipality, the Defence argued that its residents wanted to leave due to an escalation of paramilitary activity.<sup>13164</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding on the killing incident in Ratine, where 24 detainees were severely beaten, shot and killed by Serb soldiers in chapter 4.5.1 Schedule B.7.1. Further it recalls that incident (e) relates to the departure of the only surviving Bosnian-Muslim man after these killings. He was shot in the leg. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this man left the municipality out of fear for his life. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence’s argument in this regard. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of this displacement were members of a unit subordinated to the Foča TG.

decision on 21 July 1992, stating that all central positions in public institutions and companies were to be filled only by Serbs loyal to the Bosnian-Serb Republic. Several Bosnian Muslims were subsequently dismissed from municipal positions. Finally, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in the same chapter that in May 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff and Serb police severely restricted the freedom of movement for Bosnian Muslims in the municipality. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who left Ključ Municipality as described in incidents (f)(i) and (f)(ii) did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these displacements were the civilian authorities and the police.

3147. In relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, the Defence argued that people voluntarily made the decision to leave because of the unstable and dangerous environment created by the conflict.<sup>13166</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.7.7 that parts of the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat population, including women and children, were made to leave the municipality, and that others registered to leave because of the living conditions between June and November 1992. It also recalls its findings in chapter 4.7.6 that from 12 May 1992 onwards, local authorities in Kotor Varoš Municipality, including the Kotor Varoš MUP and the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, imposed restrictions on Bosnian Muslims' and Bosnian Croats' freedom of movement, which were implemented by the VRS, and imposed restrictions on access to medical care. From June 1992, the civilian authorities, including the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, dismissed Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from employment. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings about killing incidents in Kotor Varoš Municipality in June and in July 1992 as set out in chapter 4.7.1 Schedule C and unscheduled murder incidents. Finally, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding about unlawful detention and inhumane or cruel treatment in chapter 4.7.2 Unscheduled detention incidents – Grabovica School that during the night of 2 November 1992, around 50 women and a number of children surrendered to the VRS when attempting to escape Večići towards Travnik, after which they were detained at Grabovica School. The next morning, they were put on a bus. The busses stopped at Vbanjci in the afternoon, where a convoy of approximately 25 buses or more left for Travnik. Taking all of this into consideration, the Trial Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who left Kotor

Varoš Municipality as described in incident (g) did not have a genuine choice but to leave. The Trial Chamber therefore dismisses the Defence's argument in this regard. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these displacements were members of the MUP, Crisis Staff, and VRS.

3148. In Novi Grad Municipality, incident (h), the Defence argued that many Bosnian-Muslims and Bosnian-Croats decided to leave the municipality because of unrest in the area and despite the fact that no injury or harm had been done to them.<sup>13167</sup> The Defence further argued that a number of Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat families chose to stay in the municipality throughout the conflict.<sup>13168</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.8.3 that almost all houses belonging to Muslims in the village of Ahatovići were damaged or destroyed during the attack on the village by Serb forces stationed at the JNA barracks in surrounding villages on or about 27 May 1992. Further, having considered the circumstances surrounding the departure of the population from Novi Grad as found in chapter 4.8.7, namely that on or about 27 May 1992, tanks took up positions in the hills around the predominately Muslim village of Ahatovići in Novi Grad Municipality; using megaphones, the villagers were threatened: 'Balijas, surrender, or we kill your children'; when the villagers did not surrender, forces led by Jovan Tintor consisting of White Eagles and others in JNA uniforms attacked and entered the village, and following the attacks on Ahatovići and Dobroševići, all the surviving Muslims in Ahatovići were either arrested or expelled together with some Serbs and Croats who were married to Muslims, the Trial Chamber finds that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments.

3149. Turning to Pale Municipality, the Defence argued that at the beginning of the war, Bosnian Muslims demanded to leave due to fear of retribution following attacks on local Serbs and JNA, and that there was no forceful expulsion of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13169</sup> The Trial Chamber found that in incident (i), Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats left the municipality in convoys escorted by members of the Pale SJB and that some members of the SJB also exercised pressure on the Bosnian Muslims to leave the municipality. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls that when the Muslim delegation met with the SJB in May, they were told that Serbs did not want to continue living with Muslims and that they could not guarantee their safety. The Trial Chamber further considered Crnčalo's evidence that neither he nor other Bosnian Muslims left Pale voluntarily, but that they were forced to do so in order to protect their families. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croats residents of Pale did not have a genuine choice but to leave, and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard.

3150. Turning to Prijedor Municipality, the Defence argued that the departures were due to armed conflict and interethnic tensions and that the relocations were aided by international actors such as the ICRC and UNICEF.<sup>13170</sup> First, the Trial Chamber recalls that the displacement of persons carried out pursuant to an agreement among political or military leaders or under the auspices of an international organisation does not necessarily make it voluntary. Regarding incident (j)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings that many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats fled the villages in Prijedor Municipality following the attacks on their villages and feared for their lives, see chapter 4.10.7. The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings on the killings, destructions, and appropriation of property and plunder in several villages in Prijedor Municipality from May 1992 onwards as set out in chapters 4.10.1 Schedules A.6.1-A.6.6, 4.10.1 Schedule A.6.9, 4.10.3, and 4.10.4 and recalls that the convoys were escorted by the police and the army. Based in the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who fled from Prijedor between May and November 1992 did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3151. In relation to Rogatica Municipality, the Defence argued that the evidence does not support a finding that the population was moved against their will but rather that those who moved did so voluntarily.<sup>13171</sup> Regarding incidents (k)(i) and (k)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.11.7 that Bosnian Muslims left Rogatica Town for Vragolovi and then Goražde and other villages due to shelling, shooting, and growing insecurity. Further, the Trial Chamber considered that around 26 May 1992, a Serb announcement stated that the Serbs intended to 'cleanse' Rogatica of Muslim extremists and so-called Green Berets, and that once Rogatica Town was taken over by the Serbs, Živojin Novaković, of the VRS,<sup>13172</sup> said that the town would be cleansed and that anyone found in the town would be killed. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Bosnian Muslims left Rogatica between May and August 1992 because of the fear generated by threats and the violence in the municipality. As such, the Trial Chamber finds that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these displacements were members of the VRS.

3152. With regard to incident (k)(viii), the Trial Chamber notes that it received evidence from Milovan Milutinović set out in chapter 4.11.7 that sometime in July 1995 talks were held with Mladić, Muslim representatives of Žepa and UNPROFOR and, upon request from the Muslim representatives, it was agreed to organise the transport and departure from Žepa of the entire population. The Trial Chamber recalls that the displacement of persons carried out pursuant to an agreement among political or military leaders or under the auspices of an international organisation does not necessarily make it voluntary. In addition, considering the surrounding circumstances of this displacement and the fear expressed by the Muslim representatives by requesting guarantees from the VRS that civilians not be killed during their transportation out of Žepa, the Trial Chamber finds they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3153. With regard to Sokolac Municipality, the Defence argued that civilians were moved to ensure their safety and at their own request because of the conflict.<sup>13173</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that in incident (m)(i), the Muslim population left because of the threat of violence against Muslims and the lack of protection from the municipal authorities including the Crisis Staff and its President, therefore the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Muslim population did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's argument in this regard. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these displacements were members of the Crisis Staff. In relation to incident (m)(ii), the Muslim women and children were placed on buses, after their village had been surrounded by members of the VRS 2nd Romajina Brigade, destroyed, and 40 to 45 Muslim civilians were killed. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these women and children left out of fear for their lives and did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's argument in this regard.

3154. Turning to Bijeljina Municipality, the Defence submitted that various factors caused movement of population in this municipality, including interethnic mistrust, fear of war, inflow of Serb refugees, devastated economy, and that a significant part of the population had left before July 1992 for these reasons.<sup>13174</sup> Regarding the first incident (b)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.2.7 that starting in the summer of 1992 and until 1995, Vojkan Đurković of the SDS, aided by Mauzer's men, transferred thousands of Muslim civilians to 'no-man's land' between the front lines; some asked Đurković to transport them away out of fear of violent crimes being committed against them; during this time, other Muslims also fled Bijeljina on their own; in some instances, the transfers were preceded by Đurković breaking into houses in the middle of the night and placing Muslims in vans while beating and cursing them and the perpetrators stated that 'the minorities had no right to exist on "Serb territory"'. With regard to incident (b)(ii) specifically, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.2.4 that those who left Bijeljina through the Europa agency were required to sign statements leaving all of their property to the agency that would then place Serb refugees into the non-Serb houses. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding that from 1992 onwards, Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS, aided by Mauzer's men, extorted property from Bosnian Muslims and stripped them of their valuables before they were forced out of the municipality. Đurković and Mauzer's men looted the Bosnian-Muslim houses. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats in incidents (b)(i) and (b)(ii) did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard.

3155. With regard to Sanski Most Municipality, the Defence argued, inter alia, that people of all ethnicities exercised a genuine choice to temporarily leave the municipality.<sup>13175</sup> In relation to the events that occurred in Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings about murders in chapters 4.12.1 Schedules A.7.1-A.7.5, destructions in chapter 4.12.3, appropriation or plunder of property in chapter 4.12.4, forced labour and human shields in chapter 4.12.5, and imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures in chapter 4.12.6. Further, the Trial Chamber notes that in incident (l)(i) the population was evacuated by the 6th Krajina Brigade, rounded up and transferred in buses; in incident (l)(ii) the inhabitants were ordered by Serb soldiers to find their way to Muslim-held territory, and were forced out by the perpetrators of the attack on Hrustovo village; in incident (l)(iv) the group of Bosnian Muslims were transported under escort by Serb soldiers after their departure had been arranged by a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff; in incident (l)(v) the group of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were escorted by the Bosnian-Serb police; in incident (l)(vi) the convoy comprised 850 Bosnian Muslims who were threatened at gunpoint and forced into buses; in incident (l)(vii) Bosnian Muslims left in three convoys organised by the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and the SDS, and some Bosnian Muslims were specifically ordered to leave town; in incident (l)(ix), the convoys were organised by the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and the SDS. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that in incidents (l)(i), (l)(ii), (l)(iv), (l)(v), (l)(vi), (l)(vii) and (l)(ix) they did not have a genuine choice but to leave and dismisses the Defence's arguments in this regard.

3156. Incident (l)(iii) relates to one Bosnian Croat who obtained permission to leave the municipality, following the imposition of discriminatory measures and the broadcasting of announcement informing Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats of the procedure to follow in order to leave the municipality. He left for Croatia in December 1992. While that person was not physically forced to leave the municipality, the Trial Chamber finds that the overall circumstances surrounding his displacement and the situation in the municipality as recalled in the previous paragraph, establish that he did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3157. For incident (l)(viii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that a Bosnian-Muslim woman was taken from her village of Hrustovo together with her children by 'Mitra' and another soldier to Tomina where she was detained. Two weeks later, she was instructed by Serb soldiers to walk to Muslim-held territory. Considering its findings on the murders committed in Hrustovo on 31 May 1992 in chapter 4.12.1 Schedule A.7.2, the destruction in chapter 4.12.3, the plunder in chapter 4.12.4, and the fact that this woman was detained with her children before being instructed to walk to Muslim-held territory, the Trial Chamber finds that she did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3158. In relation to Vlasenica Municipality, the Defence argued that the movement of civilians there was voluntary and due to fear, panic, and tensions.<sup>13176</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on killings (chapter 4.14.1 Schedule A.9.1), destructions (chapter 4.14.3), appropriation or plunder of property (chapter 4.14.4), and discriminatory measures (4.14.6) in Vlasenica Municipality. In incident (n)(i), a group composed of women and one elderly man was transferred by Serbs in a bus; in incident

(n)(ii), the group of women and children were transferred by the Vlasenica special police platoon supported by a VRS unit. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that both groups did not have a genuine choice but to leave. With regard to incident (n)(iii), i.e. the capture and subsequent transfer of Muslims by the Vlasenica SJB special police platoon, accompanied by other VRS forces, the Trial Chamber is also satisfied that they did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3159. Regarding Srebrenica, the Defence argued that the relocations were a natural consequence of the ongoing armed conflict and the instability and violence in the region.<sup>13177</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that the evacuation of the Bosnian-Muslim civilians gathered in Potočari was organised by the VRS and the MUP and took place, for the first convoy only, under the supervision and escort of UNPROFOR. However, the Trial Chamber recalls that the displacement of persons carried out pursuant to an agreement among political or military leaders or under the auspices of an organisation does not necessarily make it voluntary. The Trial Chamber also recalls: (i) the circumstances surrounding the movement of population from Srebrenica to Potočari, including the orders by the 10th Sabotage Detachment to Srebrenica Town inhabitant to leave, the shells fired by the VRS at the UNPROFOR Bravo compound in Srebrenica, the mortars fired along the road taken by the Bosnian Muslims fleeing towards Potočari; (ii) the situation in the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari and its surroundings, where the population sought refuge, namely the shots and shelled fired around the compound, the dire living conditions, the fear and exhaustion of the Bosnian Muslims who had sought refuge there; and (iii) that the VRS, assisted by MUP units, coordinated the boarding of buses, ultimately forcing women children and elderly onto the buses while some were hit by members of the MUP, and escorted the buses towards Bosnian-Muslim controlled territory. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that the approximately 25,000 Bosnian Muslims, mostly women, children, and elderly who left Potočari to go to Bosnian-Muslim controlled territory in incident (o) did not have a genuine choice but to leave.

3160. Negative findings. In relation to incidents (a)(ii) and (a)(iii), the Trial Chamber notes that they occurred in August and September 1994, and that it did not receive any evidence regarding the circumstances surrounding these displacements at that time and therefore is unable to determine that they had no genuine choice but to leave.

3161. With regard to incident (k)(iv), the Trial Chamber notes that it concerns the escape of a Bosnian-Muslim detainee from Rasadnik camp/detention facility, who reached Sarajevo two months later. Considering the elapsed time between his escape from the camp and his arrival in Sarajevo, the Trial Chamber does not find that the VRS in charge of the camp coerced him to leave the municipality and will therefore not further consider it.

3162. Incident (k)(v) relates to the departure in August or September 1993 of a Bosnian-Muslim family previously detained at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School following the attacks on Rogatica Town. The Trial Chamber considered its findings on the unlawful detention and cruel or inhumane treatment in Veljko Vlahović Secondary School (chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1). However, the Trial Chamber also considered that this family was detained from July 1992 in Veljko Vlahović Secondary School for approximately three and a half months and then left the school and only left the municipality in August or September 1993 by their own means. Considering the time elapsed between the attacks on the town, their detention and their arrival in Montenegro, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the authorities in charge of the school, i.e. Rajko Kušić, the camp commander, and the local Serbs under his authority, civilian police, Serb TO, and paramilitary unit members who were guarding the camp between June and August 1992 coerced them to leave the municipality and will therefore not further consider this incident.

3163. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber will not further consider incidents (a)(ii), (a)(iii), (k)(iv) and (k)(v).

Circumstances under which displacement would be allowed

3164. As set out in the applicable law, the displacement of civilians is allowed in limited circumstances. The Trial Chamber notes that the evidence received did not indicate any imperative military reasons that would have justified the displacement of civilians from the municipalities considered. Furthermore, as also discussed above, the transfer of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats was not carried out for the security of the persons involved, but rather to transfer them out of certain municipalities and, in other cases, to other countries. This is also supported by the fact that the perpetrators of the displacements did not take measures to ensure that the transfers happened in a humane manner, and, in some cases, subjected the displaced to ill-treatment. In addition, no measures were taken to ensure that families were kept together, and in certain instances, families were purposely separated. Finally, the Trial Chamber finds that no steps were taken to secure the return of those displaced. Some victims did return to the area they were transferred out of, but did so on their own volition and not with the assistance of those involved in displacing them. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that there were no circumstances that justified the displacement of the persons involved in the incidents set out above as recognized by international law.

Mens rea

3165. Regarding the Defence's argument that the transfer or deportation of persons was not intended to be permanent,<sup>13178</sup> the Trial Chamber refers to the jurisprudence of the Appeals Chamber, as set out in chapter 8.5.1, that the perpetrators of the crimes of forcible transfer or deportation do not need to have the intent to displace the persons on a permanent basis.

3166. Forcible transfer: organized or secured by the perpetrators. With regard to the acts described in incidents (b)(i), (f)(i), (f)(ii), (g), (h), (i), j(i), (k)(viii), (l)(i), (l)(ii), (l)(iv), (l)(v), (l)(vi), (l)(vii), (l)(ix), (m)(ii), (o), the Trial Chamber recalls that the victims were forcibly displaced. The Trial Chamber further notes that the perpetrators of these acts organized, or assisted with the security of, the transportation of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats to other municipalities in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13179</sup> The Trial Chamber further recalls below excerpts of factual findings related to some of these incidents, relevant to establish the mens rea of the perpetrators of these incidents. In the case of incident f(i), in early May 1992, the SNO President, told the President of the Ključ Municipality's executive board, that Serbs, Muslims and Croats that constituted a minority in any territory would need to move, so that minorities would amount to no more than five or six per cent. Although the Trial Chamber received evidence that on 20 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff decided that there was no reason for anyone to move out of the ARK territory, and broadcast this conclusion on the radio over the following days, it also received evidence that the ARK Crisis Staff kept control over the modalities of the departure of Muslims and Croats from the ARK territory, including on the amount of money that those leaving could take. It further received evidence that the ARK Crisis Staff allowed Muslims and Croats to move out of the ARK territory on the condition that Serbs living outside of the territory would move into the ARK territory. Further, on 30 July 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff decided that those leaving were required to declare that they were leaving permanently and voluntarily and had to exchange their property or surrender it to the municipality. In the case of incident (f)(ii), Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats were required, prior to their departure, to sign statements leaving all their property. Concerning incident (i), the Defence argued that Bosnian Serbs did everything in their power to convince Bosnian Muslims to stay but that ultimately the Pale SDS Main Board decided that they could leave in accordance with their constitutional right to freedom of movement.<sup>13180</sup> In this regard, the Trial Chamber recalls its analysis on the coercive nature of these departures. With regard to incident (j)(i), the perpetrators, on one occasion, told people, transported from Trnopolje camp, to get off a bus and go towards barricades nearby; '[d]own there are your folk, Alija, Tudjman, are awaiting you'. In the case of incident (l)(i), the perpetrators of the acts of forcible transfer participated in the rounding up of Mahala inhabitants and their transfer to Velika Kladuša. They told inhabitants of Mahala that those who did not wish to fight had three hours to evacuate Mahala before the attack on the neighbourhood. In the case of incident (l)(ii), the perpetrators of the attack on Hrustovo made the Bosnian-Muslims inhabitants, who survived the attack on Hrustovo and the neighbouring villages, go to Doboje, where Serb soldiers told them to find their way to Muslim-held territory. With respect to incident (l)(vi), the Trial Chamber notes that on 11 May 1992 guards under the direction of Davidović, the Commander of the Serb Crisis Committee of Banja Luka, threatened at gunpoint and forced into buses Bosnian Muslims. Concerning incident (l)(vii), Bosnian Muslims who left in one of the convoys on 17 August 1992 had been ordered to leave Sanski Most Town the same morning. Concerning incident (o) and during the fall of the Srebrenica enclave on 11 July 1995, some of the perpetrators of the attack against the enclave ordered the Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica Town and its surrounding villages to go to the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari. Although the Trial Chamber found that the ABiH as well as DutchBat troops similarly told Bosnian-Muslim women and children who had gathered in Srebrenica Town to head for the UNPROFOR compound in Potočari, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding on the coercive context in which Bosnian-Muslim civilians left Srebrenica. Further, the perpetrators organized and supervised the evacuation of Bosnian-Muslim civilians to Kladanj Municipality, including the supply of fuel and buses, the boarding of the Bosnian Muslims onto trucks and buses, and the escorting of Bosnian Muslims to a non-man's land between the Bosnian-Serb and Bosnian-Muslim lines from which they were forced to continue the last leg of their journey on foot. Therefore, for all the incidents mentioned in this paragraph, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators had the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3167. Deportation: organized or secured by the perpetrators. With regard to the acts of deportation described in incidents (b)(ii), (c)(i), and (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber notes that the perpetrators of these acts organized or assisted with the security of the transportation of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats to other countries. In the case of incident (b)(ii), Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats were required to sign statements leaving all their property prior to their departure to the perpetrators organizing their transport. Further, for a year and a half, the perpetrators used one route to bus people out of the area via Serbia and took them to the Hungarian border. In the case of incident (c)(i) and following a discussion with a representative of the Bosnian-Serb Republic in mid-June 1991, the Foča War Commission tasked the civilian and military authorities to arrange transportation and provide security to individuals leaving the municipality. The Trial Chamber further found that these people were taken to Sweden and Montenegro. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators had the intent to forcibly displace Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats across a de jure border.

3168. Forcible transfer of detainees: organized and secured by the perpetrators. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer described in incidents (c)(iii), (c)(iv), (c)(v), (c)(vi), (c)(vii), (k)(iii), (k)(vi), (l)(x), (l)(xii), (m)(iii), (n)(i), (n)(ii), (n)(iii), (n)(iv), (n)(v), and (n)(vi) the Trial Chamber notes that the perpetrators of these acts organized the transfer of Bosnian Muslims detained in various places to other municipalities within Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Trial Chamber further recalls specific evidence it received relevant to establish the mens rea of the perpetrators of these incidents. In the case of incident (c)(iii), the perpetrators of these acts ordered a Bosnian Muslim transported to Dobro Polje, to walk towards ABiH-controlled territory. Regarding incident (k)(iii), on 22 June 1992, one of the perpetrators announced, prior to the displacements, that the Muslims held at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School with relatives in the 'free zone' would be transported there. In the case of incident (k)(vi), one of the perpetrators of these acts had approved the exchange in Sarajevo of some of the Bosnian Muslims detained in Rasadnik camp. In the case of incident (n)(i), the perpetrators of the attack on Zaklopač organized and escorted the departure of Bosnian Muslims to Kladanj. Further, prior to their departure, Bosnian-Muslim women had to sign statements giving away their houses and properties to the Serbs. In the case of incident (n)(iv), the authorities of the detention centres where Bosnian-Muslim women were detained ordered that they sign statements stating they left of their own volition. In the case of incidents (c)(iv), (c)(v), the perpetrators of the detention exchanged Bosnian Muslims transported from Foča to Kalinovik and Sarajevo. In the case of incident (m)(iii), the perpetrators of the detention exchanged a Bosnian Muslim detained in various centres in 1992 and 1993 at the Sarajevo airport. In the case of incident (n)(vi), the perpetrators of the detention exchanged the Bosnian Muslim following his detention. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators had the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3169. Deportation: organized and secured by the perpetrators. With regard to the acts of deportation described in incidents (c)(ii), (k)(vii), and (l)(xi), the Trial Chamber notes that the perpetrators of these acts organized the transfer of Bosnian Muslims detained in various places to other countries. In incident (c)(ii), the perpetrators of the detention had said a day prior to the departure of the Bosnian-Muslim women that they would send them out of Foča. The Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators transported the women by bus and police cars to Novi Pazar in Serbia. Regarding incident (k)(vii), a Bosnian Muslim detained in Batković camp was exchanged in Croatia. Concerning incident (l)(xi), three Bosnian Muslims detained in Manjača camp were transferred to Karlovac, Croatia, as part of an exchange. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators had the intent to forcibly displace these Bosnian Muslims across a de jure border.

3170. Other incidents of forcible transfer or deportation. With respect to the acts of deportation described in incidents (a)(i), the Trial Chamber notes that in May 1992, the perpetrators of these acts broadcasted announcements indicating that there was no reason for anyone to move out of the ARK and decided to oppose and prevent all attempts to pressure or force the population to move. However, the Trial Chamber also received a large amount of reliable evidence establishing that in May 1992, the perpetrators of these acts also issued orders and decisions establishing that they exercised control over the departures of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the municipality. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls that in 1992, one of the perpetrators, Radoslav Brđanin, called upon Bosnian Muslims to leave the Krajina. The Trial Chamber also recalls that between 1 April 1992 and 31 December 1992, non Serbs were forced to sign over or exchange their property for property in Croatia. Moreover, 'Brđanin's agency' managed all aspects of relocation of the population and people left the municipality by bus for Croatia on a daily basis. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that in this incident the perpetrators acted with the intent to forcibly displace these Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats across a de jure border.

3171. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (d), the Trial Chamber notes that the Bosnian-Muslim family left Ilidža Municipality to Sarajevo after a member of the White Eagles threatened the family's lives if they were to refuse to comply with the ultimatum to leave the municipality or to take up arms and become loyal to the Serb authorities. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrator of this act acted with the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3172. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (l)(viii), the Trial Chamber notes that two weeks after the attack on Hrustovo in July 1992, 'Mitro' and another soldier specifically instructed a Bosnian-Muslim woman and her children whom they had taken to Tomina, to walk to Muslim-held territory. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these acts had the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3173. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (k)(i), the Trial Chamber notes that by August 1992, almost all of the Bosnian Muslims who had gathered in Vragolovi had left for Goražde due to shelling by Serb forces and a warning about another Serb attack. Regarding the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (k)(ii), the Trial Chamber notes that between May and August 1992, other Bosnian Muslims from Rogatica Municipality left due to the shelling of Rogatica Town and Serb attacks on several other Muslim villages. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that there were no circumstances justifying the displacement of the persons involved in these incidents and that the shelling of Muslim villages and, in the case of incident (k)(i), the warning about another Serb attack, establishes that the perpetrators of these acts had the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3174. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (m)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls that the municipal authorities did not protect the Muslim population of Sokolac Municipality from May 1992, and that on one occasion, when told that Muslims were scared and leaving the municipality, the President of Sokolac Municipality said ‘Let leave to wherever they want to. If you ever try anything against us, we will destroy you.’ Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these acts had the intent to forcibly displace the victims.

3175. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (e), the Trial Chamber notes that this incident concerns the flight and arrival in Muslim-held territory of a Bosnian-Muslim survivor of a killing incident in Kalinovik Municipality.<sup>13181</sup> Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is unable to establish that the perpetrators of the killing incident intended to forcibly displace this Bosnian Muslim and will not consider incident (e) any further.

3177. With the exception of incidents (e) and (l)(iii), the perpetrators of the displacements possessed the requisite intent.

3179. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer or deportation described in incidents (a)(i), (b)(i), (c)(i), (f)(i), (k)(viii), (l)(vi), (o), the Trial Chamber finds that these acts were carried out against civilians.

3180. With respect to the acts of forcible transfer or deportation described in incidents (b)(ii), (d), (f)(ii), (g), (h), (i), j(i), (j)(ii), (k)(i), (k)(ii), (l)(i), (l)(ii), (l)(iv), (l)(v), (l)(vii), (l)(viii), (l)(ix), (m)(i), (m)(ii), (n)(i), (n)(ii), (n)(iii), the Trial Chamber finds that these were committed against individuals in residential areas and, in some cases they were committed after attacks on civilians and against people having been forced out of their homes; some of the victims included women, children and elderly. Concerning incidents j(i) and (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber notes that some of the victims of these incidents were also the victims of unlawful detention (see chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.4). Given that context, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the victims of these acts were predominantly civilians.

3181. In relation to the acts of forcible transfer or deportation described in incidents (c)(iii), (c)(iv), (c)(v), (c)(vii), (k)(iii), (k)(vi), (k)(vii), (l)(x), (l)(xi), (l)(xii), (m)(iii), (n)(iv), (n)(v), (n)(vi), the Trial Chamber notes that the victims of these incidents were also the victims of unlawful detention (see chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1, 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1, 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1, 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.3, 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1, 4.12.2 Schedule C.19.3, and 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2). The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the status of the persons detained in these detention centres in chapter 8.9.2 (d). At KP Dom Foča, Manjača camp, Batković camp, Kula prison, and Sušica camp the detainees were mostly civilians. At Veljko Vlahović Secondary School and at Rasadnik camp, the detainees were civilians. In addition, the Trial Chamber found that those detainees found not to be civilians were placed hors de combat as a result of their detention. Accordingly, the acts of forcible transfer or deportation listed in this paragraph were carried out against the same categories of victims and were therefore committed against civilians but including also persons placed hors de combat at the time of their displacement.

3182. With regard to incident (c)(vi), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.4 that at Partizan Hall, the detainees were civilians. With regard to incident (c)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.3 that women were detained in Bukovica Motel. For this incident the Trial Chamber also considered that the detainees included women and children, and that some detainees were taken from their homes and some from Partizan Hall, where they were previously detained. In this regard and considering the finding on the status of the detainees in Partizan Hall, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees at Bukovica Motel were civilians.

Conclusion

3183. The Trial Chamber finds that the following incidents constituted deportation as charged in Count 7 of the Indictment: (a)(i); (b)(ii); (c)(i); (c)(ii); (j)(ii); (k)(vii); and (l)(xi). The Trial Chamber further finds that the following incidents constituted forcible transfer as charged in Count 8 of the Indictment: (b)(i); (c)(iii); (c)(iv); (c)(v); (c)(vi); (c)(vii); (d); (f)(i); (f)(ii); (g); (h); (i); (j)(i); (k)(i); (k)(ii); (k)(iii); (k)(vi); (k)(viii); (l)(i); (l)(ii); (l)(iv); (l)(v); (l)(vi); (l)(vii); (l)(viii); (l)(ix); (l)(x); (l)(xii); (m)(i); (m)(ii); (m)(iii); (n)(i); (n)(ii); (n)(iii); (n)(iv); (n)(v), (n)(vi), and (o).

8.6 Acts of violence the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population

8.6.1 Applicable law

3184. Count 9 of the Indictment charges the Accused with acts of violence the primary purpose of which were to spread terror among the civilian population ('the crime of terror'), as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute. The general elements and jurisdictional requirements for this crime have been discussed in chapter 8.1, above.

3185. The Defence argued that the Tribunal does not have jurisdiction over the crime of terror and therefore any conviction for this crime would violate the principle of nullum crimen sine lege.<sup>13182</sup> The Appeals Chamber has confirmed that the Tribunal has jurisdiction over this crime,<sup>13183</sup> and the Trial Chamber finds nothing in the Defence's submissions which would lead it to deviate from the established case law.

3186. The crime of terror requires proof of the following elements:

- a) acts or threats of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities causing the victims to suffer grave consequences;
- b) the offender wilfully made the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of those acts or threats of violence; and
- c) the above acts or threats of violence were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.<sup>13184</sup>

3187. The acts or threats of violence directed against civilians are not limited to direct acts or threats of violence against civilians, but may include indiscriminate or disproportionate acts or threats of violence.<sup>13185</sup> The meaning of 'civilian population' is given in chapter 8.2.1, above.<sup>13186</sup> Grave consequences include, but are not limited to, death or serious injury to body or health.<sup>13187</sup>

3188. The mens rea for the crime of terror consists of the intent to make the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of the acts of violence or threats thereof, and of the specific intent to spread terror among the civilian population.<sup>13188</sup> Such intent may be inferred from the circumstances of the acts or threats, i.e. from their nature, manner, timing and duration.<sup>13189</sup> While spreading terror must be the primary purpose of the acts or threats of violence, it need not be the only purpose.<sup>13190</sup> The Appeals Chamber has suggested that terror could be defined as ‘extreme fear’.<sup>13191</sup>

(j) Unscheduled shelling incident – on 19 July 1995, a member or members of the SRK fired a 120-millimetre shell at the Sokolovići settlement, injuring three people, as further set out in chapter 5.3.11.

3192. Acts of violence. All the incidents concern sniping and shelling. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that they constitute acts of violence.

3193. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.3.2 that most of those killed as a result of the sniping and shelling incidents were civilians who were not taking direct part in the hostilities at the time they were killed. With regard to Scheduled Incidents G.4, G.8, and G.18, the Trial Chamber recalls that a number of victims killed in these incidents were not civilians, and has therefore not considered these victims further in relation to Counts 9 and 10 of the Indictment (see chapter 8.3.2). With regard to Scheduled Incident G.4, there were also combatants among the wounded. Similarly, the Trial Chamber finds that even though these combatants were carrying out a civilian activity, they were not hors de combat and, as such, are excluded from the protection of Common Article 3. Thus, it will not further consider non-civilians wounded as a result of Scheduled Incident G.4.

3194. For the remainder of the victims, namely those wounded as a result of the shelling and sniping incidents listed above, and with the exception of the victims of incident G.4, the Trial Chamber considered factors such as their age, gender, appearance at the time of the incidents, and the circumstances in which the incidents took place, in order to determine whether the victims were civilians not taking part in hostilities. Most victims of the above listed incidents were wearing civilian clothing and were engaged in acts of everyday civilian life when the incidents took place, such as fetching water or collecting firewood, walking with civilian friends, travelling by tram, returning from school, playing in or watching a football tournament, queuing for humanitarian aid, or were simply present in residential areas of Sarajevo which were not in the vicinity of any legitimate military targets. At least ten of the victims were under the age of 16.<sup>13192</sup> In addition, none of these victims had taken up arms or were participating in any sort of military activity. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that all the victims were civilians not taking direct part in hostilities.

3195. Grave consequences. The Trial Chamber recalls that, with the exception of the unscheduled incident of 1 July 1995 in which a modified air bomb landed in a residential garden east of the PTT building, the victims of the above-mentioned sniping and shelling incidents either suffered serious bodily injury,<sup>13193</sup> or were killed,<sup>13194</sup> while others' houses or apartments were destroyed or severely damaged.<sup>13195</sup> With regard to the 1 July 1995 incident in which a modified air bomb landed in a residential garden, the Chamber notes that it did not receive evidence demonstrating that this attack resulted in grave consequences. The Trial Chamber finds, therefore, that with the exception of the 1 July 1995 garden bombing, the victims of the shelling and sniping incidents suffered grave consequences as a result of acts of violence.<sup>13196</sup>

3196. The perpetrator wilfully made the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of those acts or threats of violence. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings for Scheduled Sniping Incidents F.1, F.4, F.5, F.9, F.12, F.16; as well as Unscheduled Sniping incidents of 27 June 1993, 5 August 1993, 2 November 1993, 9 November 1993, and 13 June 1994, that the victims were targeted by members of the SRK. For the remaining sniping and shelling incidents, the Trial

In chapter 8.3.2, the Trial Chamber already determined that the six children that died were civilians.

Chamber considered a number of factors in determining whether civilians or the civilian population were targeted.

3197. The Trial Chamber also considered the Defence arguments that the victim of Scheduled Incident F.3 was not targeted by a member of the SRK, and that the victim of Scheduled Incident F.16, if targeted by the SRK, was reasonably mistaken for a combatant.<sup>13197</sup> With regard to Scheduled Incident F.3, the Defence argues that armed ABiH soldiers were in close proximity to the victim and that she was most probably killed as the result of combat, by either a ricochet or burst of fire from a shorter distance than alleged. The Trial Chamber recalls, however, that before the victim, Munira Zametica, was killed, she had joined a group of civilians taking shelter from sniping below a bridge on the Dobrinja River. After some time had passed without any sniping, members of this group decided to collect water one by one. While collecting water, Zametica was first hit by a bullet in the right side of her chest and when she turned around she was hit by another bullet on the right side of her neck. After she had fallen near the river bank, the perpetrator repeatedly shot towards her, preventing rescuers from approaching. The Trial Chamber considered (i) that the victim was hit by two bullets within several seconds of each other; (ii) that sniping had been ongoing at that location not long before she was shot; and (iii) that the shooting continued in her direction after she had fallen, as factors showing that she was targeted and shot by sniper fire rather than being mistakenly hit by a ricochet or burst of fire. The Trial Chamber therefore rejects the Defence's suggestion that Zametica might have been killed unintentionally as a result of combat.

3198. With regard to Scheduled Incident F.16, the Defence argues that the victim might have been misidentified as a combatant because he was wearing jeans and a green jacket, and because some members of the ABiH dressed like civilians. The Trial Chamber recalls, however, that the victim, Tarik Žunić, was only 14 years old, was carrying a blue rucksack, and wearing what he described as a 'Benetton green' jacket when he was shot, which the Trial Chamber understands to mean a bright green jacket as opposed to the olive-drab green associated with ABiH uniforms. The Trial Chamber also recalls that there were no barracks, trenches, or other military installations close to the place where he was shot. The Trial Chamber considered the Defence suggestion that a civilian could be reasonably mistaken for a combatant because some members of the ABiH wore civilian clothing, to completely disregard the fundamental and well-established principle of distinction in international humanitarian law which obliges warring parties to distinguish at all times between the civilian population and combatants.<sup>13198</sup> For all of these reasons, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's argument that the shooter might have reasonably mistaken Žunić for a combatant.

3199. With regard to the 9 November 1994 sniping incident, the Trial Chamber notes that of the five victims, three were ABiH soldiers and two were civilians in close proximity to those soldiers when they were shot. For this reason the Trial Chamber cannot determine beyond a reasonable doubt that the sniping was directed at the two civilians rather than at the ABiH soldiers and has, therefore, not considered this incident further. With regard to Scheduled Incident G.4, the Trial Chamber recalls that although some ABiH soldiers were present at the incident site, the large majority of persons present were civilians not taking direct part in hostilities and that the mortars were not fired at the nuclear shelter located 100 metres from the parking lot or the nearby trenches. While the Trial Chamber cannot determine whether the perpetrators intended to specifically target civilians or soldiers, it considers that the football pitch was in a residential area, that the football match in progress was a civilian activity, and that only approximately 20 to 30 per cent of the participants were soldiers. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the shelling described in incident G.4 was both indiscriminate and disproportionate and, therefore, falls within the definition of an attack directed at a civilian population. With regard to Scheduled Incident G.8, the Trial Chamber recalls that although not all of the victims were civilians, most were and these included women, children, and elderly who were present at the explosion site, a market, engaging in a typically civilian activity. Furthermore the Trial Chamber recalls that there was no ABiH presence in the vicinity of the explosion site. With regard to Scheduled Incident G.18, the Trial Chamber recalls that there was one ABiH soldier killed in the attack while the large majority of the people killed were civilians. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding above that the victims were civilians and that they were in residential areas when they were targeted. The Trial Chamber also considers that for most incidents it found that there were no military targets in the vicinity and that for the remaining incidents there is no evidence showing that the victims were near legitimate military targets.<sup>13199</sup>

3200. The Trial Chamber also considered the inherent inaccuracy of modified air bombs as discussed in chapter 5.1.2, and that their use in residential or civilian areas constitutes indiscriminate attacks on either individual civilians or the civilian population as a whole. The Trial Chamber finds that the use of such an indiscriminate weapon when fired at predominantly residential areas supports the conclusion that civilians were targeted, irrespective of whether the perpetrator also intended to strike a military target. With regard to the sniping incidents, the Trial Chamber considered the role of snipers and the nature of sniping. It also considered the number, timing, and sequence of the shots fired, as well as the frequency with which certain areas were targeted by sniper fire. For all of these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable conclusion is that the perpetrators of the above listed sniping and shelling incidents, with the exception of the 9 November 1994 sniping incident, wilfully made civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of their sniping and shelling.

3201. The acts or threats of violence were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population. The Trial Chamber considered the nature, manner, timing, location, and duration of the sniping and shelling attacks set out above. The Trial Chamber further considered that many civilians were targeted while carrying out daily activities of a civilian nature or when present at sites that were known as locations where civilians gathered. Civilians were targeted while at the market, standing in line for food or while collecting water or firewood, while in or around their own homes or in parks and hospitals.<sup>13200</sup> Civilians were frequently targeted when travelling by tram.<sup>13201</sup> Children were also targeted while in school or playing or walking outside their house or on the street.<sup>13202</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber considered that civilians were more prone to being targeted when circumstances suggested the shooting or shelling had stopped and it was safe for civilians to continue their daily activities.<sup>13203</sup> Several of the sniping and shelling attacks were carried out during cease-fires or quiet periods.<sup>13204</sup> Numerous civilians were targeted while they were at home or in neighbourhoods where there was no military activity or military personnel and equipment present in the immediate vicinity.<sup>13205</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 5.1.1 that civilians in Sarajevo were living in constant fear of being hit by sniper or artillery fire and that this inevitably took its toll on their psychological well-being. The Trial Chamber finds that this, in combination with the challenging living conditions civilians were subjected to as set out in chapter 5.1.1, demonstrates the existence of the intent to spread terror. Moreover, the length of the period of sniping and shelling attacks, from late May 1992 until November 1995, also supports the finding that the perpetrators intended to spread terror. The Trial Chamber also considered the indiscriminate nature of some of the shelling attacks when determining if such attacks were committed with the intent to spread terror. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 5.1.2 in which it found that modified air bombs are highly inaccurate weapons. Such bombs were used by the VRS in Scheduled Incidents G.10, G.13, and G.15; as well as Unscheduled Shelling Incidents of 16, and 22 June 1995; the incidents of 1 and 23 July 1995; and the incident 22 August 1995. The Trial Chamber also considered that the fear experienced by civilians in Sarajevo was extreme, going beyond the fear generally felt by civilians in an armed conflict, particularly considering that civilians felt that they or their loved ones could be targeted at any moment and were not safe anywhere in the city. For all of the above reasons, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators intended to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo, and that the only reasonable conclusion is that the infliction of terror was the primary purpose of the sniping and shelling incidents.

3202. Considering the above, the Trial Chamber finds that the sniping and shelling incidents, with the exception of the incident of 9 November 1994, constitute the crime of terror.

3203. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.1 with regard to the general elements of violations of the laws or customs of war.

3204. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber has addressed this element in relation to the first element of the crime of terror, above.

3205. Nexus. The Trial Chamber finds that all of the above-mentioned incidents occurred when an armed conflict was taking place in the territory of Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Trial Chamber further finds, based on the affiliation of the perpetrators and the manner in which the acts took place such as firing on ABiH-controlled or Muslim sections of the city, that there was a close relationship between the acts of sniping and shelling, and the armed conflict. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the nexus requirement has been met.

3206. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that all the acts referred to and listed above, with the exception of the 9 November 1994 sniping incident, and the non-civilian victims of G.4, G.8, and G.18, constituted the crime of terror as a violation of the laws or customs of war.

8.7 Unlawful attacks on civilians

8.7.1 Applicable law

3207. Count 10 of the Indictment charges the Accused with unlawful attacks on civilians as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute. The general elements and jurisdictional requirements for this crime have been discussed in chapter 8.1, above.

3208. The crime of unlawful attack on civilians requires proof of the following elements:

- (i) an act of violence directed against civilians not taking direct part in hostilities;<sup>13206</sup>
- (ii) the act caused death, serious injury to body or health, or any other consequence of the same gravity;<sup>13207</sup>
- (iii) the act was committed wilfully, that is with intent or recklessness.<sup>13208</sup>

3209. When determining whether an act of violence can be seen as being ‘directed’ against civilians not taking direct part in hostilities, a trial chamber can consider, inter alia, the means and methods used in the course of the attack (e.g. the type of weapon), the status of the victims, their number, the discriminatory nature of the attack, the nature of the crimes committed in its course, the resistance to the assailants at the time, and the extent to which the attacking force may be said to have complied or attempted to comply with the precautionary requirements of the laws of war.<sup>13209</sup>

8.7.2 Legal findings

3210. In chapters 5.2 and 5.3, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider a number of incidents of alleged sniping and shelling attacks in Sarajevo, in light of the applicable law. They have been discussed in chapters 8.3.2 and 8.6.2.

3211. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that, with the exception of the sniping incident of 9 November 1994 in which two civilians were in close proximity to ABiH soldiers when they were shot, the alleged shelling and sniping incidents were wilful acts of violence directed against civilians not taking part in hostilities.<sup>13210</sup> Furthermore, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that these incidents resulted in grave consequences.<sup>13211</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that such consequences included death, serious injury to body or health, or consequences of the same gravity. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding that the nexus between the armed conflict and these attacks has been met for the shelling and sniping incidents.

3212. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that all the acts referred to in chapter 8.6.2, with the exception of the 9 November 1994 sniping incident, and the non-civilian victims of G.4, G.8, and G.18, constituted unlawful attacks on civilians.

8.8 Taking of hostages

8.8.1 Applicable law

3213. Count 11 of the Indictment charges the Accused with taking of hostages as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under article 3 of the Statute. The general elements and jurisdictional requirements of the crime of violations of the laws or customs of war have been discussed in chapter 8.1 above.

3214. The Appeals Chamber has clarified that the crime of hostage-taking is prohibited by Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and thus prohibits hostage-taking of any persons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of the armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed 'hors de combat' by detention.<sup>13212</sup>

3215. The crime of taking hostages requires proof of the following elements:

- a) the unlawful confinement or deprivation of liberty of another person;
- b) the issuance of a threat to kill, injure or continue to detain another person; and
- c) the threat is intended to obtain a concession or gain an advantage.<sup>13213</sup>

3216. With regard to the first requirement of the offence, the Trial Chamber in the Karadžić case, relying on findings in the Blaškić Trial Judgment, clarified that the lawfulness of the confinement or deprivation of liberty 'does not depend on the circumstances in which any individual comes into the hands of the enemy but rather depends upon the whole circumstances relating to the manner in which and the reasons they are held. Thus, the unlawfulness of the detention relates to the idea that civilians or those taking no active part in hostilities are taken or held hostage not to ensure their safety or to protect them, but rather to gain an advantage or obtain a concession'.<sup>13214</sup> The Karadžić Trial Chamber further held that the existence of threats or use of violence against the individuals taken hostage are other factors to take into account to assess the lawfulness of their detention.<sup>13215</sup>

8.8.2 Legal findings

3217. In chapter 6, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the incidents described in that chapter, and recalled below, against the applicable law.

3219. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapter 6.7 that the VRS, including members of the military police, threatened to kill or to continue to detain the UNMO and UNPROFOR personnel.

3220. Finally, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 6.7 that the above-mentioned threats were issued to exert leverage over NATO to end its air strikes, to recover Serb weapons under UNPROFOR control, or to secure the compliance of UNPROFOR personnel with an order to surrender to their captors. On one occasion, the threats were made to obtain the withdrawal of UNPROFOR soldiers from certain positions and secure an exchange with Serb prisoners.

3221. Based on the above and having considered the circumstances and the way in which the UNPROFOR and UNMO personnel were captured, detained, and subjected to threats, as well as the reasons behind their detention, the Trial Chamber finds that the UN personnel were unlawfully detained for the purpose of gaining advantages and in some cases obtaining a concession. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the three elements of the crime of hostage-taking.

3222. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in 8.1 with regard to the general elements of violations of the laws or customs of war.

3223. Nexus. The Trial Chamber finds, based on the affiliation of the perpetrators and the manner and context in which the acts took place, that there was a close relationship between the taking of the hostages and the armed conflict.

3224. Status of victims. The Defence argued that UN personnel were combatants at the time of the conflict and not entitled to the protection of Common Article 3.<sup>13216</sup> With regard to the status of the UN personnel, the Trial Chamber recalls the applicable law on Common Article 3 in chapter 8.1.1 and finds that the determination of their status as combatants or civilians is irrelevant. The law clearly establishes that the protection of Common Article 3 applies to any person taking no active part in the hostilities including combatants placed hors de combat, at the time the offence was committed. Irrespective of their status prior to their detention, to the extent UN personnel were in possession of weapons prior to their arrest, they were disarmed at the time of their arrest and rendered hors de combat by their detention. Therefore, the captured UNMO and UNPROFOR personnel fell within the protection guaranteed by Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions.

3225. The Trial Chamber will now turn to its analysis of the requirement that the perpetrator must know or should have known the status of the victims. The Trial Chamber, recalling its factual findings in chapter 6.7, in particular the circumstances of the deprivation of liberty and the communication between the perpetrators and the VRS Main Staff, finds that the perpetrators knew that the UNMO and UNPROFOR personnel were taking no active part in the hostilities at the time of the offence.

3226. Conclusion. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts described in chapter 6.7, and recalled above, constitute the crime of hostage-taking, as a violation of the laws or customs of war punishable under Article 3 of the Statute.

8.9 Persecution

8.9.1 Applicable law

Common elements of persecution as a crime against humanity

3227. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution as a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5 (h) of the Statute, committed against Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats in certain municipalities, including Srebrenica. The general elements and jurisdictional requirements for this crime have been discussed in chapter 8.2, above.

3228. The crime of persecution consists of an act or omission which:

- (a) discriminates in fact and denies a fundamental human right laid down in international law; and
- (b) is carried out with the intention to discriminate on political, racial or religious grounds.<sup>13217</sup>

3229. Acts listed under the other sub-headings of Article 5 of the Statute or provided for elsewhere in the Statute, as well as acts not explicitly mentioned in the Statute, may qualify as underlying acts of persecution.<sup>13218</sup> The underlying act itself need not constitute a crime in international law.<sup>13219</sup> However, not every denial of a fundamental human right will be serious enough to constitute a crime against humanity.<sup>13220</sup> The underlying act committed on discriminatory grounds, considered in isolation or in conjunction with other acts, must be of the same gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.<sup>13221</sup>

Underlying acts of persecution

(a) Murder

3230. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through murder. These acts are also charged elsewhere in the Indictment as murders as crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute and murders as violations of the laws or customs of war under Article 3 of the Statute. The elements of the crime of murder have been discussed in chapter 8.3.1, above.

3231. An act of murder, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13222</sup>

(b) Cruel and inhumane treatment

3232. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through cruel and inhumane treatment. The Indictment specifies these acts of cruel and inhumane treatment as: (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse during and after the takeovers in Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after the takeovers in the Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (iv) terrorising and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari; and (v) beating of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution.<sup>13223</sup>

3233. Cruel and inhumane treatment require proof of the following elements:<sup>13224</sup>

- (a) an act or omission caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury or constituted a serious attack on human dignity,<sup>13225</sup> and

(b) the act or omission was committed with intent, or alternatively with knowledge that the act or omission was likely to cause serious mental or physical suffering or a serious attack on human dignity and the perpetrator was reckless as to whether such consequences would result from his act or omission.<sup>13226</sup>

3234. An act of cruel or inhumane treatment, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13227</sup>

(c) Deportation and forcible transfer

3235. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through ‘deportation and forcible transfer’. These acts are also charged elsewhere in the Indictment as deportation and forcible transfer as crimes against humanity punishable under Article 5(d) and (i) of the Statute. The elements of deportation and forcible transfer have been discussed in chapter 8.5.1, above.

3236. An act of forcible transfer or deportation, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13228</sup>

(d) Unlawful detentions

3237. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through ‘unlawful detentions’. Unlawful detention is not specifically listed as a crime in the Statute although Article 5(e) of the Statute provides for the act of imprisonment as a crime against humanity. The Trial Chamber interprets the charge in paragraph 59 of the Indictment as relating to imprisonment.

3238. The term imprisonment in Article 5(e) of the Statute is understood as arbitrary imprisonment, that is deprivation of liberty of an individual without due process of law.<sup>13229</sup> The crime of imprisonment consists of the following elements:

- (1) an individual is deprived of his or her liberty;
- (2) the deprivation of liberty is carried out arbitrarily, that is, there is no legal basis for it; and
- (3) the perpetrator acted with the intent to arbitrarily deprive the individual of his or her liberty.<sup>13230</sup>

3239. If there is a legal basis for the deprivation of liberty, it must apply throughout the period of imprisonment, for the deprivation of liberty will be rendered arbitrary as soon as its legal basis ceases to exist.<sup>13231</sup> When a national law is relied upon to justify a deprivation of liberty, that law must not violate international law.<sup>13232</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that the question of legal basis is appropriately dealt with when considering the general elements of crimes against humanity and when considering whether an act is carried out on discriminatory grounds.<sup>13233</sup>

3240. Unlawful detention, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13234</sup>

(e) Forced labour and the use of human shields

3241. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecutions through, inter alia, ‘forced labour including digging graves and trenches and other forms of forced labour at front lines and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields’.<sup>13235</sup> The Trial Chamber considered the scope of this charge in 8.2.1.

3242. Forced labour. When determining whether the labour was forced, a Trial Chamber may consider whether the objective circumstances surrounding the performance of work were so coercive as to negate any possibility of consent.<sup>13236</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that forced labour as an underlying act of persecutions as a crime against humanity requires a perpetrator to have intended for a victim to perform prohibited work.<sup>13237</sup>

3243. Under international humanitarian law not all forms of labour are prohibited, provided that the labour is performed under certain protective conditions.<sup>13238</sup> These conditions include that detainees must be granted suitable working conditions, especially as regards accommodation, food, clothing, equipment, and safety.<sup>13239</sup> In relation to digging graves and trenches and other forced labour performed at front lines, the Trial Chamber considers that acts at the front lines, by its nature, cannot ever be performed in suitable working conditions. Therefore, such acts cannot fall within any lawful exceptions to the prohibition of forced labour.

3244. Forced labour at front lines, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the common elements of the crime of persecution as well as the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13240</sup> Other forced labour, considered in conjunction with ‘a series of acts comprising unlawful detention and beatings’, not at the front lines, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the common elements of the crime of persecutions as well as the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13241</sup>

3245. Human shields. The Trial Chamber understands human shields to mean the placement or detention of persons in areas where they may be exposed to combat operations, for the purpose of rendering certain areas or activities immune from military operations or armed attack.<sup>13242</sup>

3246. The use of persons as human shields, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the common elements of the crime of persecution as well as the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13243</sup>

(f) Appropriation or plunder of property

3247. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through the ‘appropriation or plunder of property’.

3248. The crime of plunder requires proof of the following elements:

- (a) an act of appropriation of public or private property;
- (b) the appropriation was unlawful; and
- (c) the act was committed with intent.<sup>13244</sup>

3249. As to the first element of the actus reus, all forms of seizure of public or private property constitute acts of appropriation, including isolated acts committed by individual soldiers for their private gain and acts committed as part of a systematic campaign to economically exploit a targeted area.<sup>13245</sup>

3250. The second element of the actus reus requires that the appropriation must have been unlawful. In certain circumstances appropriation of property may not be regarded as unlawful where it can be justified under international humanitarian law.<sup>13246</sup> Under international humanitarian law there is a general exception to the prohibition of appropriation of property when the appropriation is justified by military necessity.<sup>13247</sup> In the context of an international armed conflict, treaty law and international customary law justify battlefield seizures of military equipment of the adverse party as war booty.<sup>13248</sup>

3251. The third element concerns the mens rea requirement which is satisfied when the perpetrator acts knowingly with the intent to appropriate public or private property unlawfully.<sup>13249</sup>

<sup>13249</sup> Prlić et al. Trial Judgment, para. 131. The Trial Chamber notes that the trial chamber’s finding in the Prlić et al. case concerned plunder charged as a war crime under Article 2 (d) of the Statute. The Trial Chamber considers that the same must be satisfied when dealing with plunder charged as an underlying crime of persecution as a crime against humanity under Article 5(h) of the Statute.

3252. With regard to whether acts of appropriation or plunder of property are to be considered of the same gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber notes that in the Flick case, the American Military Tribunal held that the scale of the appropriation was not the critical issue when the act is considered as a crime against humanity. Rather, it was the impact of the appropriation on the victim.<sup>13250</sup> Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber considers that plunder of public and private property as an underlying act of persecution is to be understood as any intentional and unlawful appropriation of public or private property that has a serious impact on the owner or user of the property.<sup>13251</sup>

3253. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds that an act of plunder that has a serious impact on the victim, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13252</sup>

3254. The Appeals Chamber confirmed in the Kordić and Čerkez case that plunder, in conjunction with ‘killings, beatings, unlawful attacks on civilians and civilian objects, the unlawful imprisonment of civilians, [and] destruction of civilian objects’, constitutes persecution.<sup>13253</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber considers that an act of plunder which in itself does not have a serious impact on the victim, may still, when carried out on discriminatory grounds, and when the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitute the crime of persecution, when considered in conjunction with other acts.<sup>13254</sup>

<sup>13250</sup> United States v. Friedrich Flick et al., American Military Tribunal (22 December 1947), in 6 TWC 1187, 1214-1215. ‘A distinction could be made between industrial property and the dwellings, household furnishings, and food supplies of a persecuted people. In this case, however, we are only concerned with industrial property ... The ‘atrocities and offenses’ listed [in Article 6(c) of the Charter] ‘murder, extermination,’ etc., are all offenses against the person. Property is not mentioned. Under the doctrine of ejusdem generis the catch-all words ‘other persecutions’ must be deemed to include only such as affect the life and liberty of the oppressed peoples’. This reasoning was adopted by the American Military Tribunal in the I.G. Farben case when considering various instances of plunder and spoliation of industrial property in German occupied territory (United States v. Carl Krauch et al. (I.G. Farben case), American Military Tribunal (30 July 1948), in 8 TWC 1081, 1129-1130).

(g) Wanton destruction of private property

3255. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through the ‘wanton destruction of public and private property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites’.

3256. The crime of wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages requires proof of the same elements as devastation not justified by military necessity.<sup>13255</sup> These elements are:

- (a) an act or omission caused destruction of property on a large scale;
- (b) the destruction was not justified by military necessity;
- (c) the act or omission was committed with intent or in reckless disregard of the likelihood of the destruction.<sup>13256</sup>

3257. The prohibition on wanton destruction covers property located in any territory involved in the armed conflict.<sup>13257</sup> The requirement of destruction ‘on a large scale’ may be met either if many objects are damaged or destroyed, or if the value of one or a few destroyed objects is very high.<sup>13258</sup> Military necessity may never justify the targeting of civilian objects.<sup>13259</sup> Civilian objects are defined by opposition to military objectives, which are limited to those objects which by their nature, location, purpose, or use make an effective contribution to military action and whose total or partial destruction, capture, or neutralization, in the circumstances ruling at the time, offers a definite military advantage.<sup>13260</sup> As a rule, destruction carried out before fighting begins or after fighting has ceased cannot be justified by military necessity.<sup>13261</sup>

3258. The Appeals Chamber has clarified that acts of destruction of property, ‘depending on the nature and extent of the destruction’, may constitute persecution.<sup>13262</sup>

As with appropriation of property, it is the impact on the victims that is the determining factor.<sup>13263</sup> The Appeals Chamber has held that there are ‘certain types of property whose destruction may not have a severe enough impact on the victim as to constitute a crime against humanity, even if such a destruction is perpetrated on discriminatory grounds: an example is the burning of someone’s car (unless the car constitutes an indispensable and vital asset to the owner)’.<sup>13264</sup>

3259. The Trial Chamber considers that destruction of private property as an underlying act of persecution is to be understood as any intentional destruction of private property that has a serious impact on the victim and that was not justified by military necessity.<sup>13265</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that the question of whether the destruction was justified by military necessity is appropriately dealt with when considering the general elements of crimes against humanity and when considering whether an act is carried out on discriminatory grounds.<sup>13266</sup>

3260. The Appeals Chamber has confirmed that ‘destruction of civilian objects’, in conjunction with ‘killings, beatings, unlawful attacks on civilians and civilian objects, the unlawful imprisonment of civilians, [...] and looting’, constitutes persecution.<sup>13267</sup>

3261. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds that an act of destruction of property that has a severe impact on the victim, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitutes the crime of persecution.<sup>13268</sup>

3262. An act of destruction of property which in itself does not have a severe impact on the victim, may still, when carried out on discriminatory grounds, and when the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitute the crime of persecution, when considered in conjunction with other acts.<sup>13269</sup>

(h) Imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures

3263. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with persecution through the ‘imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures’.<sup>13270</sup> According to the Indictment, the alleged imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures includes the (i) denial of freedom of movement; (ii) removal from positions of authority in local government institutions and the police, and the general dismissal from employment; (iii) invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes; (iv) unlawful arrest and/or the denial of the right to judicial process; and/or (v) denial of equal access to public services.<sup>13271</sup>

3264. The Tribunal’s jurisprudence provides that the imposition of various restrictive and discriminatory measures can constitute persecution. For example, the Brđanin Trial Chamber considered the denial of freedom of movement, the denial of employment, and the denial of the right to judicial process, concluding that in light of the circumstances in that case, these acts amounted to persecution because when taken in conjunction with one another, they were denials of fundamental rights and of the same gravity as the crimes listed in Article 5 of the Statute.<sup>13272</sup> This was confirmed and upheld by the Appeals Chamber.<sup>13273</sup>

3265. The Trial Chambers in Krajišnik, Stanišić and Župljanin and Karadžić found that in addition to the three restrictive and discriminatory measures considered in Brđanin, the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes, unlawful arrests, and the denial of equal access to public services also constituted persecution when considered in conjunction with other acts.<sup>13274</sup> The Trial Chamber in Krajišnik reviewed the Brđanin Trial Judgment and the jurisprudence pursuant to the Nuremberg Charter and Control Council Law No. 10, including inter alia the Justice case.<sup>13275</sup> Having regard to this jurisprudence, the Krajišnik Trial Chamber held that the denial of freedom of movement, the denial of employment, and the denial of the right to judicial process, the denial of equal access to public services and the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes could only constitute persecution when considered in conjunction with other acts.<sup>13276</sup> Ultimately, the Krajišnik Trial Chamber found that these restrictive and discriminatory measures constituted persecution when considered in conjunction with the other acts of killings, arbitrary arrests, detention, destruction of property, rape, and plunder.<sup>13277</sup> Similarly, the Stanišić and Župljanin Trial Chamber found that the above-mentioned restrictive and discriminatory measures constituted persecution when considered in conjunction with the other acts, such as unlawful detentions, the plunder of property, and so forth.<sup>13278</sup> Although the Karadžić Trial Chamber also considered that these restrictive and discriminatory measures could constitute persecution when considered in isolation, it declined to follow that approach.<sup>13279</sup> Instead it found that these restrictive and discriminatory measures constituted persecution when considered in conjunction with other underlying acts of persecution which were perpetrated against the same category of victims contemporaneously in the municipalities, namely killings, torture, beatings, physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, cruel and inhumane living conditions, forcible displacement, unlawful detention, forced labour, plunder, and the wanton destruction of private and public property.<sup>13280</sup>

3266. The Trial Chamber therefore considers that the denial of freedom of movement, the denial of employment, the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes, unlawful arrests, the denial of the right to judicial process, and the denial of equal access to public services, when carried out on discriminatory grounds, and when the general elements of crimes against humanity are fulfilled, constitute the crime of persecution when considered in conjunction with other relevant acts, especially in conjunction with those acts that qualify as an underlying act of persecution. These restrictive and discriminatory measures may also constitute the crime of persecution when considered in isolation.

8.9.2 Legal findings

(a) Murder

3267. In chapters 4.1.1, 4.2.1, 4.3.1, 4.4.1, 4.5.1, 4.6.1, 4.7.1, 4.8.1, 4.10.1, 4.11.1, 4.12.1, 4.13.1 and 4.14.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, 7.5, 7.6, 7.7, 7.8.1, 7.8.2, 7.9, 7.10, 7.11, 7.12, 7.13.1, 7.13.2, 7.14.1, 7.14.2, 7.15, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider a number of killing incidents as alleged persecution against the applicable law. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.3.2 that some of these incidents constituted murder as a crime against humanity.<sup>13281</sup>

3268. Discrimination. The Trial Chamber recalls that all the killings constituting murder in Schedule A, Schedule B, Schedule C, unscheduled incidents, and Schedule E, were committed against Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.

3269. In relation to Schedule A, the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations as follows when assessing whether there were discriminatory grounds for the killings constituting murder.

3270. In relation to Scheduled Incidents A.2.1, A.3.3, A.6.5, A.6.7, and A.6.8 the perpetrators made derogatory remarks when referring to victims such as calling them ustašas or balijas or forcing them to sing Serb songs immediately prior to carrying out the killings. The perpetrators, in some instances, also alluded to the victims' apparent political or religious views at the time they killed them.<sup>13282</sup> In respect of Scheduled Incident A.4.4, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.7.2 Unscheduled detention incidents – Grabovica School that the perpetrators ordered the group of Bosnian Muslims to surrender and threatened to kill the balijas if they did not comply. Upon their surrender, the group of Bosnian Muslims were detained at Grabovica School and subsequently killed. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.4, the perpetrators separated eight Bosnian-Muslim men from others in a house and killed them. The perpetrators had earlier threatened, while searching the house, that the owner and her family 'were to be off to Turkey'. The same perpetrators later killed eleven other Bosnian-Muslim men from the same village.

<sup>13281</sup> In relation to Schedule A, the Trial Chamber recalls that in chapter 8.3.2 it was found that in Scheduled Incident A.2.1 Izet Ćolo was a combatant and that his killing would not be further considered in relation to Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment. The Trial Chamber will not consider this killing further in relation to Count 3 of the Indictment.

3271. In relation to Scheduled Incidents A.6.3, A.6.9, A.7.2, A.7.3, A.8.1, and A.9.1 the perpetrators attacked either predominantly or exclusively Bosnian-Croat or Bosnian-Muslim villages or hamlets and targeted unarmed Bosnian-Muslim or Bosnian-Croat inhabitants who remained in the areas taken. In respect of Scheduled Incident A.6.1, the perpetrators attacked the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim town of Kozarac, threatened to kill all balijas in response to a request for evacuation from Kozarac of a severely injured boy, and in Benkovac targeted 'Croats'. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.6, the perpetrators ordered the Bosnian-Muslim population of Bišćani to gather at various collection points throughout the village prior to their killing and one perpetrator used the term pejgamber in a derogatory sense in respect of one victim. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.7.1, the perpetrators were ordered to kill 70 Bosnian Muslims in Kljevci as revenge for seven Serbs soldiers who had been killed in that area prior to the killing of at least 32 Bosnian-Muslim males. In relation to A.7.4 and A.7.5 the Trial Chamber recalls its findings from chapter 4 that the physical perpetrators were: part of a unit led by Mićo 'Kudra' Praštalo who had attacked a predominantly Bosnian-Muslim village and killed Bosnian Muslims in May 1992; or members of the 6th Krajina Brigade who had targeted and committed crimes against Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats in a discriminatory manner from May 1992 onwards.

3272. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds with respect to Scheduled Incidents A.2.1, A.3.3, A.4.4, A.6.1, A.6.3, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, A.6.9, A.7.1, A.7.2, A.7.3, A.7.4, A.7.5, A.8.1, and A.9.1 that the perpetrators committed the murder on political, racial or religious grounds.

3273. In relation to Scheduled Incidents A.6.2 the Trial Chamber did not receive any evidence indicating that the victims were targeted in a discriminatory manner or that the perpetrators had the requisite discriminatory intent. There was no evidence indicating why these Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats were identified and targeted, as opposed to others from the same locality, and later killed. The Trial Chamber, from the evidence received, was also unable to infer that the only reasonable inference was that the perpetrators carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds, as these incidents were too remote from other discriminatory incidents. Accordingly, these murder incidents will not be further considered in relation to the charge of persecution under Count 3 of the Indictment.

3274. In relation to Schedule B, Schedule C, and Unscheduled Incidents the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations as follows when assessing whether there were discriminatory grounds for the killings constituting murder.

3275. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2(d) that in relation to Scheduled Incidents B.1.1, B.1.2, B.1.4, B.2.1, B.5.1, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.13.1, B.13.2, B.13.4, B.13.5, B.14.1, B.14.2, B.16.1, B.16.2, C.9.1, C.15.3, C.15.5, and C.16.3 the victims were taken from groups that were either exclusively or predominantly Bosnian-Muslim or Bosnian-Croat, detained in discriminatory circumstances, and subsequently killed by the same set of perpetrators who had detained them. The Trial Chamber also had regard to the following specific circumstances in certain detention contexts. In respect of Scheduled Incidents B.1.1, B.1.2, B.2.1, B.7.1, B.8.1, and B.14.2 the perpetrators referred to the victims as balijas or ustaša or made other derogatory remarks directed towards the victims as a group.<sup>13283</sup> The perpetrators also sometimes referenced the victims' apparent political or religious views at the time of killing them.<sup>13284</sup> In respect of Scheduled Incident B.14.2, one of the perpetrators remarked that he had killed balijas after the killings and the remark is seen in light of the circumstances in which the detainees were kept prior to the killings as set out in chapter 4.11.5. In respect of Scheduled Incident B.5.1, the perpetrators specifically targeted the Bosnian-Muslim detainees at KP Dom as opposed to Serb detainees who were also present at the camp. Similarly, the hundreds of Bosnian-Muslim detainees killed in this incident in the second half of 1992 at KP Dom were systematically processed and were killed under the pretext of being taken for exchange. In relation to the unscheduled incident in Foča Municipality, two of the perpetrators of the killings at KP Dom brought three elderly Bosnian-Muslim women to Marko Kovač, who was the Commander of the Foča Tactical Group, also known as the 11th Herzegovina Light Infantry Brigade, who referred to the victims as 'scum' prior to giving the order to kill them. The Trial Chamber understands the word 'scum' to have a discriminatory connotation given the manner in which the three Bosnian-Muslim women were detained and then brought to the Commander of the Foča Tactical Group by two of the perpetrators of the discriminatory killings at KP Dom. In respect of Scheduled Incident B.16.2, the perpetrators specifically went to Sušica camp to take away and kill all of the remaining detainees who were exclusively Bosnian Muslims.

<sup>13283</sup> In Scheduled Incident B.7.1, the victims were also sometimes made to sing Serbian songs.

3276. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.10.2, the victims were taken from a cistern where only Bosnian Muslims or non-Serbs were brought and detained; derogatory remarks were made at the time of their capture and all of those detained were taken out to be killed. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.10.1, a Bosnian-Muslim detainee was killed while being held in the same cistern as in Scheduled Incident B.10.2.

3278. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds with respect to Scheduled Incidents B.1.1, B.1.2, B.1.4, B.2.1, B.5.1, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.10.1, B.10.2, B.13.1, B.13.2, B.13.4, B.13.5, B.14.1, B.14.2, B.16.1, B.16.2, C.9.1, C.15.3, C.15.5, C.16.3, and unscheduled incidents in Foča Municipality and Kotor Varoš Municipality that the perpetrators committed the murders on political, racial or religious grounds.

3279. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.13.3, the Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence indicating whether the perpetrators intended to kill these men on political, racial or religious grounds. While the Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.9.2(d) that the victims had been detained under discriminatory circumstances, it could not establish that the perpetrators of the killings shared an affiliation with the perpetrators of the detention. The Trial Chamber, from the evidence received, was also unable to infer that the only reasonable inference was that the perpetrators carried out this killing on political, racial or religious grounds, as this incident was too remote from other discriminatory incidents. Accordingly, this killing incident will not be further considered in respect of the charge of persecution under Count 3 of the Indictment.

3280. In relation to Schedule E, the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations as follows when assessing whether there were discriminatory grounds for the killings constituting murder.

3281. In relation to Scheduled Incidents E.3.1, E.4.1, E.6.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.9.2, E.13.1 and the unscheduled incidents of 18 July 1995 and 23 July 1995, the perpetrators referred to the victims as balijas or ustaša, or treated them in other disparaging ways based on the victims' religious, racial, or political identity immediately prior to killing them.<sup>13285</sup> The perpetrators also sometimes referenced the victims' apparent political or religious views at the time of killing them.<sup>13286</sup> In respect of Scheduled Incident E.9.1, the victims were taken from the Kula School near Pilica where only Bosnian Muslims were brought and detained. At least eight of the victims were killed prior to the hundreds of other Bosnian-Muslim males at the Kula School by the same perpetrators, as set out in Scheduled Incident E.9.2. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.4.2 that the killings were part of one single murder operation. The Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference from these facts is that the killings were specifically directed against victims of Bosnian-Muslim origin. In respect of Scheduled Incident E.5.1, one perpetrator identified as a 'commander' stated, prior to the killing, that it was time for the victims to make up for what happened to him while detained by the ABiH. The Trial Chamber considers that the commander was associating Bosnian Muslims with the ABiH and, therefore, finds that the only reasonable inference is that the killing was specifically directed against Bosnian Muslims.

3282. With regard to other Srebrenica killing incidents, in Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.10.1, E.14.1, E.14.2, E.15.1, and E.15.3, the Trial Chamber considered the close geographical proximity of the incidents, the fact that the killing incidents occurred between 13 July 1995 and 17 July 1995 and that the perpetrators carried out killings of Bosnian Muslims in the context of the wider attack following the fall of Srebrenica on 11 July 1995. In respect of Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.8.1, and E.8.2, the killing incident of 13 July 1995, the perpetrators had detained and killed only Bosnian-Muslim males. Although 12 of the victims in Scheduled Incident E.8.1 were killed prior to the hundreds of others in Scheduled Incident E.8.2, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.4.2 that the killings were part of one single murder operation. The Trial Chamber also recalls that in the unscheduled incident of 13 July 1995, Mladić told the detainees that they had no state 'here' and had to look for their state. In respect of Scheduled Incident E.10.1, the killings occurred on 16 July 1995, the same day that Bosnian-Muslim men were being executed at the Branjevo Military Farm in Scheduled Incident E.9.2, and where a VRS lieutenant-colonel informed members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment at the farm that there were some 500 Bosnian-Muslims in the Pilica Cultural Centre who were also to be executed. Soldiers from Bratunac left the farm with the lieutenant-colonel and were involved in the killings at the Pilica Cultural Centre. In respect of Scheduled Incident E.2.1, the killings, which occurred on 17 July 1995, were committed against a high number of Bosnian-Muslim males who were captured by the perpetrators and occurred in close proximity to other Srebrenica killings. In respect of Scheduled Incident E.14.1 and Scheduled Incident E.14.2, Bosnian-Muslim men were separated from others in the UN compound in Potočari by the VRS and subsequently killed by members of the VRS near the compound. In respect of Scheduled Incidents E.15.1 and E.15.3, more than 50 Bosnian-Muslim men were killed in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School over a short duration of time, between 12 and 14 July 1995 in the context of the detention of several thousand Bosnian-Muslim civilians and soldiers held in and around Vuk Karadžić Elementary School. In relation to Scheduled Incident E.12.1, the victims were killed in Bišina by the 10th Sabotage Detachment on 23 July 1995, only days after the discriminatory killings the same perpetrators committed elsewhere. The Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference from these facts relating to the incidents above is that the killings were specifically directed against Bosnian Muslims.

<sup>13285</sup> In Scheduled Incident E.4.1, the victims were also sometimes made to sing Serbian songs.

<sup>13286</sup> See Scheduled Incident E.7.2, Scheduled Incident E.9.2, and Scheduled Incident E.5.1. With respect to Scheduled Incidents E.7.1 and E.7.2, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.4.2 that the killings formed part of a single murder operation.

3283. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds with respect to Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.4.1, E.5.1, E.6.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, E.10.1, E.12.1, E.13.1, E.14.1, E.14.2, E.15.1, E.15.3 and the unscheduled incidents of 13 July 1995, 18 July 1995 and 23 July 1995 that the perpetrators committed the murders on political, racial or religious grounds.

3284. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity.

3285. Status of victims. In relation to Schedule A, Schedule B, Schedule C, unscheduled incidents, and Schedule E the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.3.2 with regard to the status of the victims.

3286. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that Scheduled Incidents A.2.1, A.3.3, A.4.4, A.6.1, A.6.3, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, A.6.9, A.7.1, A.7.2, A.8.1, A.9.1, B.1.1, B.1.2, B.1.4, B.2.1, B.5.1, B.7.1, B.8.1, B.10.1, B.10.2, B.13.1, B.13.2, B.13.4, B.13.5, B.14.1, B.14.2, B.16.1, B.16.2, C.9.1, C.15.3, C.15.5, C.16.3, the unscheduled incident in Foča, the unscheduled incidents in Kotor Varoš, E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.4.1, E.5.1, E.6.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, E.10.1, E.12.1, E.13.1, E.14.1, E.14.2, E.15.1, E.15.3 and the unscheduled incidents in Srebrenica constitute persecution as a crime against humanity.

3288. The Trial Chamber will now proceed to consider the aforementioned alleged incidents of cruel and/or inhumane treatment pursuant to the applicable law.

3289. Serious mental or physical suffering or injury, or a serious attack on human dignity. The Indictment specifies that the alleged acts or omissions of cruel and/or inhumane treatment consist of: (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse during and after the takeovers in Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after the takeovers in the Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, in detention facilities in the Municipalities; (iv) terrorising and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari; and (v) beating of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution.<sup>13289</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls incidents (a) to (j) set out above. These incidents took place in detention facilities against the same victims of detention during their detention. The Trial Chamber considered the character and the seriousness of the incidents, including, where available, the following factors: the duration and/or repetition of the incidents, physical and mental effects on the victims, and the personal circumstances of the victims, including age, gender and health.

3290. For some incidents, the Trial Chamber found that detainees were injured, fell ill, and some died as a result of their treatment and the conditions of detention. In this respect, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2; 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1; 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1; 4.10.2 Schedules C.15.2, C.15.3, C.15.4; and 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1 in relation to incidents (a); (b); (c)(i); (h)(i), (ii), and (iii); and (i)(ii). Detainees at Manjača camp, Batković camp, KP Dom Foča and Omarska camp lost significant body weight. Insufficient food led to death by malnutrition at Batković camp, to malnutrition and starvation at Keraterm camp, to fainting from hunger at Manjača camp, and to other health problems at KP Dom Foča. The insufficient food, unsanitary and crowded conditions at Trnopolje camp caused rampant lice and scabies, as well as dysentery and a wide range of other ailments like hepatitis, chronic diarrhoea and high fevers. Even though some detainees at Trnopolje camp had maggots in their wounds, medical care was denied. An epileptic man, who was refused treatment, was found dead the next morning. There was also dysentery at Omarska camp and Keraterm camp, as well as diarrhoea, skin diseases and intestinal problems at Omarska camp. At Manjača camp and Keraterm camp, there were infestations of lice. The detainees at Rasadnik detention facility also had insufficient food, as well as no access to running water, or toilets. In each of these detention facilities, detainees were also beaten; regularly at Manjača camp and KP Dom Foča, daily at Keraterm camp, in some cases with implements such as brass knuckles and iron bars, and severely at Batković camp, Omarska camp and Rasadnik detention facility. As a result, detainees at Manjača camp were sometimes seriously injured and, through further beatings, the perpetrators prevented these detainees from seeking any medical care for their injuries. Some detainees at Batković camp and Rasadnik detention facility suffered permanent damage, such as Witness Mirsad Kuralić who suffered fractures to his skull, nose, jaw and arm at Batković camp. Detainees at Omarska camp had broken bones and teeth. Some detainees were thrown into burning tyres. Another detainee was shot in the knee. At Trnopolje camp, some detainees were beaten to death. Although some detainees at Keraterm camp were taken to hospital to treat injuries sustained during the beatings, this does not diminish the gravity of those injuries.

3291. The Trial Chamber also found that, amongst other forms of abuse, detainees were raped and subjected to other forms of sexual violence at Batković camp, KP Dom Foča, Omarska camp, Keraterm camp, Trnopolje camp, and Rasadnik detention facility.

In particular, at Omarska camp, Batković camp and Rasadnik detention facility, detainees were forced to rape and engage in other degrading sexual acts with each other. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedules C.6.2, C.6.3, C.6.4, C.6.5; 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.1; 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1; 4.14.2 Schedule C.19.3 in relation to incidents (c)(ii), (iii), (v), (vi) and (vii); (e)(i); (i)(i); and (j)(i). Women and girls detained at Karaman's house were raped every night. The youngest girl was 12 years old. One woman was detained, alone, at the apartment of a Serb soldier and regularly raped by him. At Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, detainees were also raped, including girls as young as 13 years old. At Partizan Hall, some women were raped numerous times on the same day, by many soldiers simultaneously and consecutively. At the Worker's Huts at Buk Bijela and Foča High School, women were repeatedly raped. Approximately 80 women were raped at Kalinovik Elementary School. At Sušica camp, detainees were raped or forced to engage in sexual acts. Detainees were also beaten at Kalinovik Elementary School and Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, and severely beaten and burnt with cigarettes at Foča High School. In addition, at Partizan Hall, Foča High School, Kalinovik Elementary School, and Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, the conditions were unhygienic and there was insufficient food. There was also no medical care at Partizan Hall or Foča High School.

3292. In relation to incidents (d)(i); (e)(ii); (f)(i) and (h)(iv), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1; 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.2; 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.5 that detainees were beaten, threatened and harassed at Velagići Elementary School, beaten regularly at Kula prison and Miška Glava Dom, and severely at the ammunition warehouse in Jelašaćko Polje. Detainees were also held in poor conditions: a cramped, small room held 100 detainees for one week at Kula prison, a small, hot café held 114 detainees for several days at Miška Glava Dom, and the 100 detainees at the ammunition warehouse in Jelašaćko Polje had no sanitary facilities and insufficient water. The detainees at Velagići Elementary School were beaten in a room without windows while insulted with ethnic slurs. At the ammunition warehouse in Jelašaćko Polje and Miška Glava Dom, there was also limited food. Specifically, at Miška Glava Dom, detainees only had a single loaf of bread and a packet of sweets to share between 114 detainees for three days.

3293. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the treatment of detainees and the conditions of detention in incidents (a); (b); (c)(i), (ii), (iii), (v), (vi) and (vii);

(d)(i); (e)(i) and (ii); (h)(i), (ii), (iii), and (iv); (f)(i); (i)(i) and (ii); and (j)(i) caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury and will consider these incidents further.

3294. Turning to the unscheduled incidents (d)(ii); (f)(ii) and (iii); (i)(iii); and (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.6.2 Sanica school and Sitnica school; 4.11.2 Unscheduled incidents; and 4.14.2 Other detention incidents on the conditions of detention and the treatment of detainees. In particular, detainees at the Ilidža Police Station were kept in a windowless cell which was of such a size that conditions were crowded given the number of detainees. At Kalinovik Police Station and Rogatica Police Station, detainees were severely beaten. After the beating, one detainee at Kalinovik Police Station was kept in solitary confinement for ten days without medical aid. The detainee at Rogatica Police Station was beaten so severely that he could not move for 15 days. Detainees at Sanica School and Sitnica School were not fed, and the detainees at Sitnica School only received a small sandwich on their fourth day of detention. At Sanica School, they were also escorted at gunpoint to the bathroom. At Sitnica School, they were beaten. Detainees at Vlasenica Secondary School were only fed a small slice of bread and a small portion of egg daily. There was insufficient water, and the guards severely beat the detainees. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the treatment of detainees and the conditions of detention in incidents (d)(ii); (f)(ii) and (iii); (i)(iii); and (j)(ii) caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury and will consider these incidents further.

3295. For incident (g), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.7.2 Unscheduled incidents that the detainees were soaking wet from the rain and very cold, and the women and children slept overnight on the floor. The men were ordered to line up and walk slowly with their heads down and hands tied behind their backs. The Trial Chamber was unable to determine the nature of the assault, apart from the spilt tea. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber does not find that such treatment caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury, or a serious attack on human dignity.

3296. In relation to incident (c)(iv), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.3 that it received no evidence on the conditions of detention or the treatment of the detainee. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber cannot determine whether there was any serious suffering or injury, or any serious attack on human dignity and will not consider incident (c)(iv) further.

3297. With regard to incidents (k)(i) and (k)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.1.6 concerning the conditions endured by Bosnian Muslims who gathered in Potočari following the fall of Srebrenica on 11 July 1995. Ongoing shelling and shooting, combined with the deliberate removal of men, boys, and girls, and episodes of sexual assaults, created a fearful and intimidating atmosphere in Potočari. The Trial Chamber found that while being transferred out of the enclave, mothers and children were separated from one another, and babies of ill mothers were abandoned. Those who did not want to leave, were forced to board buses and were hit, abused and insulted. Bosnian-Muslim men of military age were separated from the rest of the population and were beaten, stoned, insulted, and sometimes stabbed. The men were then taken to the White House, where they were held in overcrowded and poor conditions, and were forced to surrender their papers and belongings. They were later beaten while being loaded onto buses destined to detention centres in Bratunac. The Trial Chamber further found that the acts and threats of violence set out above, specifically the shelling, the physical and sexual violence, the separation of family members and the detention of men and boys, triggered panic and fear among the Bosnian Muslims in Potočari, to the extent that some of them committed suicide or attempted to do so. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the treatment of Bosnian Muslims in Potočari in incidents (k)(i) and (k)(ii) caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury, or a serious attack on human dignity and will consider these incidents further.

3298. Turning to the incidents listed in (k)(iii), the Trial Chamber found in chapter 7.1.6 that Bosnian-Muslim men and boys from the column were subjected to beatings prior to their killings. These beating incidents took place at various execution sites in Srebrenica and neighbouring municipalities, where Bosnian-Muslim men and boys were detained after surrendering or being captured from the column. In some incidents, detainees were beaten with rifle butts, iron bars, axes, and whips. In one incident at a building near the Konjević Polje intersection (Schedule E.1.1.), detainees were ordered to take off their clothes, thrown on the floor and then punched, beaten and kicked in the heads. At the school in Petkovci (Schedule E.7.1) and at Kula School (Schedule E.9.1) detainees were regularly beaten, and at Luke School (Schedule E.5.1) they were severely harassed and assaulted. At Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1) and at Branjevo Military Farm (Schedule E.9.2), detainees were also beaten and humiliated. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Bosnian-Muslims men and boys of Srebrenica were subjected to appalling abuse prior to their execution, and therefore considers that the incidents listed in (k)(iii) caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury, or a serious attack on human dignity, and will consider these incidents further.

3299. Mens rea. For the incidents listed in (a) to (k), apart from incidents (c)(iv) and (g), the Trial Chamber is satisfied that, having considered the factual circumstances, the only reasonable inference is that the perpetrators intended to cause serious mental or physical suffering or a serious attack on human dignity.

3300. Discrimination. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.9.2(d) that in relation to incidents (d)(ii) and (j)(ii), it did not find that the detentions were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds. In reaching this conclusion, the Trial Chamber was unable to determine that detainees were treated differently based on their ethnicity. For the remaining incidents listed in (a) to (j), apart from incident (i)(iii) which concerns Rogatica Police Station, the Trial Chamber found that the detentions were carried out on political, racial, and religious grounds. Noting that the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment took place in conjunction with these detentions, the Trial Chamber finds for the same reasons as those stated in chapter 8.9.2(d), that apart from incidents (d)(ii) and (j)(ii), the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatments were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3301. In relation to incident (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 4.14.2 – Other detention incidents – Vlasenica secondary school, that detainees were beaten when they refused to sing songs identified by one witness as ‘chetnik’ songs. Given the subject of the songs and the consequences for failing to sing them, the Trial Chamber finds that incident (j)(ii) was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3302. In respect of incident (i)(iii), the alleged cruel or inhumane treatment was inflicted against one Bosnian Muslim. The Trial Chamber also considered that this incident occurred in the context of a wider discriminatory attack against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and in conjunction with other underlying acts of persecution perpetrated at the same time, as described in chapter 8.2.1. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that incident (i)(iii) was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3303. In relation to incidents (k)(i) and (k)(ii) the Trial Chamber had regard to the specific considerations when assessing whether the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 7.16 that the shelling targeted the vicinity of the UNPROFOR compound and nearby areas, where the Bosnian-Muslim population had sought shelter after the fall of the Srebrenica enclave. Hand grenades were thrown into civilian houses in Potočari. While Bosnian Muslims were being transported out of the enclave, Bosnian-Muslim men of military age were systematically singled out from the rest of the population and later detained and mistreated. The Trial Chamber also considered that these incidents occurred in the context of a wider discriminatory attack against the Bosnian-Muslim community of Srebrenica and in conjunction with other underlying acts of persecution perpetrated at the same time, as described in chapter 8.9.2(a) and (c). Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment in incidents (k)(i) and (k)(ii) was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3304. With regard to the beating incidents listed in (k)(iii) at the school in Petkovci (Schedule E.7.1), at Kula School (Schedule E.9.1), at Branjevo Military Farm (Schedule E.9.2), and in and around Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1), the Trial Chamber found in chapter 7.16 that the perpetrators of the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment in these locations were the same perpetrators of the subsequent killings. Noting that the Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.9.2 (a) above, that the Scheduled Incidents E.7.1, E.9.1, E.9.2, and E.15.1 were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds, the Trial Chamber finds, for the same reasons as those stated in the aforementioned chapter, that the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment was also carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3305. For the remaining beating incidents listed in (k)(iii), the Trial Chamber considered specific circumstances to assess whether the alleged cruel and/or inhumane treatment was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds. In respect of the beatings at Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1) and at Luke School (Schedule E.5.1), the perpetrators made derogatory remarks when referring to the detainees, calling them balijas, and alluding to their apparent political or religious views prior and after carrying out the beatings. In relation to the beatings at the column and at Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1), the perpetrators forced the detainees to make the Serb salute and sing Serbian songs. With regard to the incident on the road to Konjević Polje and near Konjević Polje intersection (Schedule E.1.1), the Trial Chamber considered that the perpetrators carried out the cruel and/or inhumane treatment of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys in the context of a wider discriminatory attack against Bosnian Muslims following the fall of Srebrenica on 11 July 1995. This beating incident occurred on 13 July 1995 and was committed against Bosnian-Muslim males, including a 14-year-old boy. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that all the incidents listed in (k)(iii) were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3306. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (k), apart from incidents (c)(iv); (d)(ii) and (g), amount to cruel and/or inhumane treatment.

3307. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirement of crimes against humanity.

3308. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2(d), noting that the victims of detention were also the victims of cruel and/or inhumane treatment in the same detention facilities. In relation to those detainees found not to be civilians in 8.9.2(d), the Trial Chamber finds that they were placed hors de combat as a result of their detention.

3309. In relation to incident (j)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 4.14.2 – Other detention incidents – Vlasenica secondary school that the detainees at Vlasenica Secondary School were transferred to Sušica camp. Since the Trial Chamber found that Sušica camp mostly held civilians, it finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees at Vlasenica Secondary School were also mostly civilians.

3310. For incident (i)(iii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.11.2 Unscheduled incidents that the sole victim was a detainee from Rasadnik and the detainees at Rasadnik were civilians. In light of this, the Trial Chamber finds that the victim in incident (i)(iii) was civilian.

3311. With respect to the cruel and/or inhumane treatment described in incident (k)(i), the Trial Chamber finds that the victims, mainly women, children, elderly, the injured, with a small percentage of able-bodied men, were civilians. In relation to incident (k)(ii), the victims were males between the age of 12 and over 60 years old, some were unarmed and some were wearing military clothing. Although it remained unclear whether the victims were civilians or combatants, the Trial Chamber finds that they were hors de combat at the time of their separation from the rest of the population in Potočari. Regarding the acts outlined in incident (k)(iii), the Trial Chamber notes that some of the victims of the beatings were also victims of murder. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.3.2, that in all Srebrenica murder incidents the victims were detained at the time of their killing, thus hors de combat. With respect to those who survived the executions, the Trial Chamber finds that they were also placed hors de combat as a result of their detention.

3312. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the incidents listed in (a) to (k), with the exception of incidents (c)(iv); (d)(ii); and (g) constitute cruel and/or inhumane treatment as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(c) Deportation and forcible transfer

3313. In chapters 4 and 7, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider a number of incidents as alleged persecution against the applicable law. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.5.2 that some of these incidents constituted deportation or inhumane acts (forcible transfer) as crimes against humanity.

3314. Discrimination. The Trial Chamber recalls that all the incidents constituting deportation or forcible transfer were committed against Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.

Forcible transfer or deportation committed in connection with other discriminatory acts

3315. The Trial Chamber recalls that it found that the acts of forcible transfer and deportation described in incidents (b)(i), (b)(ii), (f)(i), (f)(ii), (g), (h), (j)(i), (j)(ii), (k)(i), (k)(ii), (k)(iii), (k)(vi), (k)(vii), (k)(viii), (m)(i), (m)(ii), (n)(i), (n)(ii), (n)(iii), and (n)(iv) were committed in connection with acts of murders, unlawful detention, destruction, plunder or appropriation of property, forced labour or use of human shields, and discriminatory measures in Bijeljina, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Novi Grad, Prijedor, Rogatica, Sokolac, and Vlasenica Municipalities. The acts of forcible transfer described in incident (o) were committed in connection with acts of cruel or inhumane treatment as underlying act to the offence of persecution. Further, they were committed during and following the take-over of the Srebrenica enclave by the VRS, during which Bosnian-Muslim public and private properties were destroyed. The Trial Chamber recalls that it found that these acts were discriminatory and that the perpetrators acted with discriminatory intent.<sup>13290</sup> The Trial Chamber will now recall specific excerpts of its findings relevant to establish the discriminatory intent of the perpetrators of some of these incidents. More specifically in the case of incident (k)(ii), around 26 May 1992, a Serb announcement stated that the Serbs intended to ‘cleanse’ Rogatica of Muslim extremists and so-called Green Berets. Once the Serb forces took over Rogatica Town, Živojin Novaković said the town would be cleansed and that anyone found in the town would be killed. Regarding incident (k)(iii), prior to the transfer of Bosnian Muslims detained at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, one of the perpetrators of the acts of forcible transfer, Rajko Kušić, had announced that the Muslim detainees with relatives in the ‘free zone’ would be transported there. Concerning incident (m)(i), the Trial Chamber notes that when told by a Bosnian Muslim that Muslims were scared and leaving the municipality, Milan said, ‘Let [them] leave to wherever they want to. If you ever try anything against us, we will destroy you.’ In the case of incident (n)(i), prior to their departure, Bosnian-Muslim women from Zaklopača had to sign statements giving away their houses and properties to the Serbs. In the case of incident (n)(ii), one of the perpetrators of these acts of forcible transfer ordered another one to torch all Muslim houses in order to prevent owners from returning. The Trial Chamber found that the acts of murder, unlawful detention, destruction, plunder or appropriation of property, forced labour or use of human shields, and discriminatory measures in these municipalities were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. Concerning incident (o), the Trial Chamber notes the cleansing of the area of the Bosnian-Muslim population was one of the goals of the Krivaja 95 operation from its beginning. Since most of the people found to have been victims of forcible transfer or deportation in the incidents listed above were Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, and given the circumstances of their transfer, the Trial Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were specifically targeted, and that the acts of forcible transfer or deportation were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

Forcible transfer or deportation of detainees: organized or secured by the perpetrators

3316. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer or deportation described in incidents (c)(ii), (c)(iii), (c)(iv), (c)(v), (c)(vi), (c)(vii), (m)(iii), (n)(v), and (n)(vi), the Trial

<sup>13290</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that this does not include the destruction aforementioned as it is not charged as such as an underlying act to the offence of persecution for the Srebrenica component of the Chamber notes that these displacements were committed following the detention of these Bosnian Muslims and, in the case of incident (c)(vi), were committed by the perpetrators of their detention which the Trial Chamber found to be discriminatory. Further, these acts were committed in a context where Bosnian Muslims were beaten, raped, and killed in these detention centres. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the reasonable inference is that the acts of forcible transfer or deportation were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

Other incidents of forcible transfer or deportation

3317. With respect to incident (a)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls that in 1992, one of the perpetrators specifically called upon Bosnian Muslims to leave the Krajina. Further, during July and August 1992, Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats who wished to remain in Banja Luka Municipality were threatened if they did not sign a statement of loyalty. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that with respect to incident (a)(i), the act of deportation was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3318. With regard to the acts of deportation described in incidents (c)(i), the Trial Chamber notes that the perpetrators allowed 'loyal' citizens, i.e. Serbs and Muslims, who had not violated the laws of the Bosnian-Serb Republic or endanger the safety of the Serb people in the area, to leave. Although this measure suggests that the departures did not solely concern Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats, the Trial Chamber notes that this incident happened at the time when murders, unlawful detention, and destruction were committed and discriminatory measures implemented against Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that these acts of deportation were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3319. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (d), the Trial Chamber notes that the Bosnian-Muslim family left Ilidža Municipality to Sarajevo after a member of the White Eagles threatened the family's lives if they were to refuse to comply with the ultimatum to leave the municipality or to take up arms and become loyal to the Serb authorities. The Trial Chamber further notes that the departure of this family in May 1992 took place at the time when unlawful detention was committed against Bosnian Muslims in Ilidža Municipality. Under these circumstances, the Trial case.

Chamber finds that the act of forcible transfer was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3320. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer described in incident (i), the Trial Chamber notes that the displacements out of Pale Municipality only concerned Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and therefore finds that the acts of forcible transfer were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3321. With regard to the acts of forcible transfer or deportation described in incidents (l)(i) to (l)(ii) and (l)(iv) to (l)(ix), and (l)(x) to (l)(xii), the displacements of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Sanski Most Municipality were committed at the time when murders, unlawful detention, destruction, appropriation or plunder of property were committed and discriminatory measures were implemented against them in the municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls that it found that these acts were discriminatory and that the perpetrators acted with discriminatory intent. In the case of incident (f)(ii), Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats were required to sign statements leaving all their property prior to their departure, called for the departure of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts of forcible transfer or deportation were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3323. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.5.2 with regard to the status of the victims.

3324. Conclusion. The Trial Chamber finds that incidents: (a)(i); (b)(i); (b)(ii); (c)(i); (c)(ii); (c)(iii); (c)(iv); (c)(v); (c)(vi); (c)(vii); (d); (f)(i); (f)(ii); (g); (h); (i); (j)(i); (j)(ii); (k)(i); (k)(ii); (k)(iii); (k)(vi); (k)(vii); (k)(viii); (l)(i); (l)(ii); (l)(iv); (l)(v); (l)(vi); (l)(vii); (l)(viii); (l)(ix); (l)(x); (l)(xi); (l)(xii); (m)(i); (m)(ii); (m)(iii); (n)(i); (n)(ii); (n)(iii); (n)(iv); (n)(v); (n)(vi), and (o) constitute persecution as a crime against humanity.

3325. In chapters 4.1.2, 4.2.2, 4.3.2, 4.4.2, 4.5.2, 4.6.5, 4.7.2, 4.10.2, 4.11.2, and 4.14.2 Vlasenica, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged unlawful detention to the extent that they concern Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims:

(a) in Banja Luka Municipality, between 3 June and 18 December 1992, the VRS 1KK, pursuant to instructions from the VRS Main Staff, detained predominantly civilians, primarily of Bosnian-Muslim ethnicity at Manjača camp, along with some Bosnian Croats, a few Bosnian Serbs, and at least one Roma. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2;

(b) in Bijeljina Municipality, between 27 June 1992 and the end of November 1995, the VRS held detainees, who were mostly civilians and predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat, at Batković camp. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1;

(c) in Foča Municipality: (i) between 10 April 1992 and October 1994, the Military Command under Commander Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group, detained non-Serb civilian men, mostly of Bosnian-Muslim ethnicity, at KP Dom Foča. Muslim soldiers were detained separately from the civilian detainees, and a few Serbs were detained for military offences or convictions prior to the outbreak of the conflict. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1; (ii) from early August 1992, Radovan Stanković held several groups of Bosnian-Muslim women and girls in ‘Karaman’s house’, as further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.2; (iii) from August 1992 until July 1993 a Serb soldier<sup>13291</sup> detained a Bosnian-Muslim woman taken by a member of Dragoljub Kunarac’s unit from ‘Karaman’s house’ and brought to the apartment of the Serb soldier, as further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.2; (iv) from the evening of 24 June 1992, local Serbs from Tijentište detained a Bosnian-Muslim woman at Bukovica Motel for two days, as further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.3; (v) in early July 1992, Bosnian-Muslim women were detained at the Worker’s Huts in Buk Bijela, where Gojko Janković was in charge, as further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.3; (vi) in July and August 1992, Bosnian-Muslim civilian detainees were kept at Partizan Hall and guarded by policemen, as further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.4; (vii) in June and July 1992, Bosnian-Muslim civilian detainees were kept at Foča High School and guarded by policemen. Mitar Sipčić, member of the Serb Crisis Staff in Foča, was in charge of the policemen in June 1992. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.5;

(d) in Ilidža Municipality: (i) from 12 May until October 1992, Bosnian-Muslim civilians of all ages, and from 22 or 23 June 1993 until October 1994, Bosnian-Muslim civilians and some Bosnian Croats, were detained at Kula prison. There were also Croat POWs who were held separately. Kula prison was under the jurisdiction of the Serb MUP from 12 May until the beginning of August 1992, followed by the Bosnian-Serb MoJ until October 1992, and then again under the jurisdiction of the Bosnian-Serb MoJ in 1993 and 1994. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1; and (ii) on 21 July 1992, Vojo Ninković detained two Bosnian-Muslim men, and six others, at the Ilidža Police Station. The six other detainees were transferred by mid-August 1992. One of the Bosnian-Muslim men was transferred out of the police station on or around 23 October 1992. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.4.2 Unscheduled incidents – MUP Police Station;

(e) in Kalinovik Municipality: (i) on 25 June 1992, around 60 Bosnian-Muslim civilian men were detained at Kalinovik Elementary School, and later, between 1 and 5 August 1992, almost all of the remaining Bosnian-Muslim civilian men and women from Kalinovik, and approximately 190 civilian women, children, and elderly people from Gačko, were detained at the Kalinovik Elementary School, where they were guarded by the local police, as further set out in chapter 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.1; (ii) between 6 July and the beginning of August 1992, Đorđislav Aškraba, who was at the time seconded to the VRS and ran the detention facility at Jelašačko Polje, and guards in the detention facility who were subordinated to the VRS, detained around 100 Bosnian-Muslim men at an ammunition warehouse in Jelašačko Polje, as further set out in chapter 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.2; and (iii) from at least 18 September 1992 until 21 March 1993, several people, including at least two Bosnian-Muslim men, were detained at Kalinovik Police Station, which was under the control of the Chief of Police at Kalinovik SJB, Boško Govedarica, and the Police Commander at Kalinovik SJB, Nedelko Zeljaja, as further set out in chapter 4.5.2 Unscheduled Incidents – Kalinovik police station;

(f) in Ključ Municipality: (i) on 1 June 1992, members of the VRS detained about 100 Bosnian-Muslim men at Velegići Elementary School, as further set out in chapter 4.6.2 Schedule C.10.3; (ii) between 1 and 2 June 1992, reserve police officers and Milan Tomić, who was the commander of the Sanica police, detained 400 non-Serbs at Sanica School. Almost all of the detainees were Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. This incident is further set out in 4.6.2 Sanica school and Sitnica school; (iii) between 3 June and about 7 June 1992, police forces from Ključ and Jajce detained between 200 and 250 civilian men at Sitnica School, who were previously detained in the Sanica school gym. The group included non-Serbs, almost all of whom were Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, as well as villagers from Sanica, and about five Bosnian-Muslim former policemen. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.6.2 Sanica school and Sitnica school;

(g) in Kotor Varoš Municipality, during the night of 2 November 1992, the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Brigade, under the command of Dušan Novaković detained a group of about 150 Bosnian Muslims at Grabovica School. The group were mostly men, some of whom were disarmed upon capture, as well as women and children. They were secured by the Military Police Platoon of the same brigade, under the command of Slobodan Jošić. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.7.2 Unscheduled incidents – Grabovica School;

(h) in Prijedor Municipality: (i) between 27 May and 16 August 1992, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, the VRS, the Omarska TO, and the SJB detained approximately 3,300 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats at Omarska camp. The detainees included elderly people, women, and children, mentally impaired and sick people, politicians, and religious leaders. These detainees were unofficially grouped into three categories: intellectuals and political leaders from the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat communities, who were earmarked for elimination; persons who associated themselves with those from the first category; and detainees who were, in the view of the Bosnian-Serb authorities, the least ‘guilty’, and eventually were to be released. In addition, there were a few Bosnian-Serb detainees, who were there because they were said to be on the side of the Muslims. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.2; (ii) from 25 May until at least 5 August 1992, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, the Military Police of the Banja Luka Corps/1KK, and the Prijedor SJB detained approximately 4,000 male and female detainees, including civilians. The detainees at Keraterm camp were primarily Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat men, along with a small number of Albanians, and at least one Bosnian Serb accused of not being a loyal Serb. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.3; (iii) from at least 26 May 1992 until the end of September 1992, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, members of the Prijedor TO, VRS, as well as Slobodan Kuruzović, who was the camp commander, and his deputy Slavko Puhalić, detained Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians, including women and children, at Trnopolje camp. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.4; (iv) from around 21 July 1992, the Miška Glava TO detained 114 men, who were predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat, at a small café at Miška Glava Dom, as further set out in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.5;

(i) in Rogatica Municipality: (i) between June and August 1992, local Serbs under the authority of Rajko Kušić, Commander of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, as well as members of the civilian police, the Serb TO, and paramilitary unit members detained several hundred civilians including elderly men, women, and children at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School. Almost all of the detainees were Bosnian-Muslim, except for one Serb family and two Serb women married to Bosnian-Muslim men. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1; (ii) at least between August 1992 and October 1992, the VRS and the SJB, and after October 1992 until April 1994 the VRS, detained Bosnian-Muslim males and females of all ages at Rasadnik detention facility. Serb soldiers were held separately at the facility. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.3; (iii) sometime after 23 June 1992, Mehmed Agić, the commander of the Muslim Rogatica TO during the war, was detained at the Sladara factory in Rogatica, under the authority of Rajko Kušić, the Commander of the VRS Rogatica Brigade (with regard to this brigade, see chapter 3.1.2). On at least one occasion, Agić was blindfolded and had his hands tied; (iv) from 28 July 1995 onward, 44 Muslims, including, referred to as 'POWs' by the VRS 1st Mountain Brigade, were held at the Rogatica military reception centre under the authority of the VRS 1st Mountain Brigade. The detainees included an imam and former president of the Žepa War Presidency, an electrical engineer and former president of the municipal executive committee, and a forestry engineer and former commander of civilian protection staff. The detainees were fed three times a day, had access to medical care, could use a field toilet, were registered by the ICRC, and the imam was allowed to pray;

(j) in Vlasenica Municipality: (i) between 31 May 1992 and 30 September 1992, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff and guards who were members of the VRS and the MUP detained between 2,000 and 2,500 Bosnian Muslims of both genders and all ages, including civilians, at Sušica camp. In June and July 1992, approximately half of the detainees were women. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.15.2 Schedule C.19.3; and (ii) between 31 May 1992 and 8 June 1992, approximately 160 men, including Bosnian-Muslim men aged between 13 and 87, from Papraća, Bosnian Muslims from Kusonje, a Roma couple, and Bosnian Serbs from Osmaci and Borogovo, were detained at Vlasenica Secondary School. The School was under the command of Veljko Bašić and guarded by Vojin Grabovica, a person called Zoran, Milorad Petrović, and Dragan Lukić. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.14.2 Other detention incidents – Vlasenica secondary school.

3326. The Trial Chamber will now proceed to consider the aforementioned alleged incidents of unlawful detention pursuant to the applicable law.

3327. Deprivation of liberty. Considering the factual circumstances of each of the acts of detention listed in (a) to (j), the Trial Chamber finds that individuals were held against their will and were therefore deprived of their liberty.

3328. Legal basis. Any detention carried out on discriminatory grounds, including political, racial, or religious grounds, constitutes arbitrary detention, that is without a legal basis. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will discuss the legality of detention in light of discriminatory grounds below. For this reason, the Trial Chamber's analysis of whether the perpetrator acted with the intent to deprive the individual arbitrarily of his or her liberty is bifurcated: first, the Trial Chamber considers whether the perpetrator intended to deprive an individual of his or her liberty; second, the Trial Chamber considers whether any intention to deprive was also an intention to deprive arbitrarily which is considered in relation to discriminatory grounds.

Serbs, Albanians, and Roma, does not in and of itself indicate that the detention of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats was not carried out on political, racial or religious grounds. When considering whether an incident constitutes persecution as a crime against humanity, that incident should be considered as a whole. Accordingly, there are various indicia that may indicate discrimination. These indicia include the circumstances of the detention, the reasons certain ethnicities were detained, and the ratio of detainees of certain ethnicities in comparison with others, as well as any difference in the treatment of detainees of different ethnicities.

3331. For incidents (c)(iv) and (d)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.3; 4.4.2 Unscheduled detention incidents – MUP police station that there were detainees of unknown ethnicity detained alongside Bosnian Muslims and, therefore, the Trial Chamber decided to only consider these incidents further with regard to the Bosnian-Muslim detainees. In incident (c)(iv), a Bosnian Muslim was detained at Bukovica Motel, but the majority of detainees alongside her were women of unknown ethnicity. In incident (d)(ii), two Bosnian Muslims were detained at Ilidža Police Station, but six others of unknown ethnicity were detained in the same room as them. For each of these incidents, the Trial Chamber was unable to infer the ethnicity of the other detainees. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber was unable to determine why the detainees of unknown ethnicity were detained and, for incident (c)(iv), whether the treatment of the detainees of unknown ethnicity differed from the treatment of the Bosnian-Muslim detainees. For incident (d)(ii), the detainees of unknown ethnicity were transferred out of Ilidža Police Station to an unknown destination by mid-August, whereas the Bosnian Muslims were detained for a longer period. The Trial Chamber does not consider the earlier transfer of the detainees of unknown ethnicity to an unknown destination to indicate a sufficient difference in treatment, such that the Trial Chamber could infer that the only reasonable inference is that the Bosnian-Muslim detainees were detained on political, racial or religious grounds.

3332. For incident (j)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.14.2 Other detention incidents – Vlasenica Secondary School that although some of the detainees were Bosnian Muslims, those detained also included a Roma couple and Bosnian Serbs from the villages of Borogovo and Osmaci. The Trial Chamber was unable to determine why Bosnian Serbs from these villages were detained alongside non-Serbs. It was also unable to determine the ratio of Bosnian Serbs to Bosnian Muslims detained, or whether Bosnian-Serb detainees were treated any differently to Bosnian-Muslim detainees.

3333. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that incidents (c)(iv); (d)(ii); and (j)(ii) were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds and will not consider these incidents further.

3334. For incident (e)(iii), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.5.2 Unscheduled detention incidents – Kalinovik police station that two Bosnian Muslims were detained alongside several people of unknown ethnicity at Kalinovik Police Station. Although the Bosnian Muslims were the minority, the Trial Chamber found that one Bosnian Muslim was kept in solitary confinement for about ten days without medical aid despite his sustained injuries after a severe beating, and the other Bosnian Muslim was threatened with a knife put to his throat and a rifle to his temple, and was forced to curse ‘Alija’ and his daughter.

3335. In relation to incidents (a); (h)(i) and (ii); (i)(i) and (i)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2; 4.10.2 Schedules C.15.2 and C.15.3; and 4.11.2 Schedules C.16.1 and C.16.3 that Bosnian Serbs, and detainees of other ethnicities, were detained with Bosnian Muslims in the same detention facility. In incident (a), a few Serbs and at least one Rom were detained, but the detainees were predominantly Bosnian Muslims and some were Bosnian Croats. In incident (h)(i), the detainees at Omarska camp were almost exclusively Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The few Bosnian-Serb detainees were detained because they were said to be on the Bosnian-Muslim side. In incident (h)(ii), the male detainees at Keraterm camp were primarily Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, with a small number of Albanians, and at least one Bosnian Serb accused of not being a loyal Serb. In incident (i)(i), the detainees at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were Bosnian Muslims, except for a Serb family and two Serb women married to Bosnian Muslims. In incident (i)(ii), the detainees at Rasadnik detention facility were Bosnian Muslims. There were also Serb soldiers held because of discipline violations. They were held separately at the facility. Given that those detained in these detention facilities were largely Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats, the Trial Chamber considers the number of Albanians, Roma, and Bosnian Serbs insignificant in light of the very large number of Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees. It is also significant that the few Bosnian-Serbs in incidents (h)(i) and (ii) and (i)(i) were detained because of their connection to Bosnian Muslims or for being disloyal, and the Serbs detained in incident (i)(ii) included soldiers detained for discipline violations and were held separately from the Bosnian-Muslim detainees. Moreover, ethnic slurs and insults were directed against Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees in all of these incidents.

3336. In relation to incident (c)(i), which concerns detainees at KP Dom Foča, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1 that the detainees were mostly Bosnian Muslims, including Muslim soldiers. In light of its finding that the Muslim soldiers were held separately from the civilian detainees, there may have been legitimate military reasons for their detention. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is not convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Muslim soldiers at KP Dom Foča were detained on political, racial, or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber also recalls that there were few Serb detainees at KP Dom Foča. In contrast to the Bosnian-Muslim detainees, the Trial Chamber has not received evidence that Serb detainees were also subject to ill-treatment or ethnic slurs. Serb detainees were also subject to due process, having committed military offences or having been convicted by courts of law prior to the conflict. In light of this, the Trial Chamber does not find that the few Serb detainees in incident (c)(i) were detained on political, racial, or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber will consider this incident in relation to the Bosnian-Muslim civilian detainees further below.

3337. In incident (d)(i), the detainees at Kula prison were mostly Bosnian Muslim with some Bosnian Croats, including Bosnian-Croat POWs. The Bosnian-Croat POWs were held separately from the other detainees and were considered POWs, so there may have been legitimate military reasons for their detention. Therefore, the Trial Chamber does not find that the Bosnian-Croat POWs were detained on political, racial, or religious grounds. Furthermore, in assessing whether this detention was carried out on political, racial or religious grounds, the Trial Chamber considered the number of detainees of unknown ethnicity. Having regard to the incident as a whole, the Trial Chamber found that number insignificant compared to the number of Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees. The Trial Chamber will consider the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees, who were not POWs, below.

3338. In incident (i)(iii), the person detained at the Sladara factory was Mehmed Agić, the commander of the Muslim Rogatica TO during the war. The Trial Chamber has not received any evidence that other individuals were detained with him and considers that there may have been legitimate military reasons for his detention. Therefore, the Trial Chamber does not find that this Bosnian-Muslim POW was detained on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3339. Similarly, in incidents (b) and (h)(iv), the detainees were predominantly Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. Also for incident (h)(iv), the detainees were forced to sing songs about Greater Serbia, and a detainee who said that his mother was a Serb was separated from the group. With respect to incidents (f)(ii) and (iii), the detainees at Sanica and Sitnica Schools were almost all Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. Having regard to these incidents as a whole, the Trial Chamber considers the number of detainees of unknown ethnicity insignificant compared to the very large number of Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees.

3340. With respect to incidents (c)(ii), (iii), (v), (vi) and (vii); (e)(i) and (ii); (f)(i); (g); (i)(iv) and (j)(i), these acts of deprivation of liberty were carried out against only Bosnian Muslims. With respect to incident (h)(iii), these acts of deprivation of liberty were carried out only against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. In incident (e)(i); (f)(i); (g); (h)(iii); and (j)(i) ethnic slurs and insults were also directed against Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees.

3341. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (j), insofar as they concern Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees, and except for incidents (c)(iv), (d)(ii), (j)(ii), as well as (c)(i), (d)(i), and (i)(iii) insofar as they refer to Muslim soldiers and Croat POWs respectively, were carried on political, racial, and religious grounds.

3342. In relation to whether these acts of detention had any legal basis, the Trial Chamber concludes that because these acts of detention were committed with discriminatory intent, these acts were arbitrary in nature. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (j) insofar as they concern Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees, and except for incidents (c)(iv), (d)(ii), (j)(ii), as well as (c)(i), (d)(i), and (i)(iii) as far as they refer to Muslim soldiers and Croat POWs respectively, constitute unlawful detention as an underlying act of persecution.

3343. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity.

3344. Status of victims. For incidents (c)(vi) and (vii); (e)(i); (h)(iii) and (i)(i), the Trial Chamber finds, in light of the findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedules C.6.4, C.6.5; 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.1; 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1, that the detainees at Partizan Hall, Foča High School, Kalinovik Elementary School, Trnopolje camp and Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were civilians. For incident (a), the Trial Chamber finds, in light of the finding in chapter 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2 that the detainees were almost exclusively civilians. Regarding incidents (b) and (c)(i), the Trial Chamber finds, in light of the findings in chapters 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1 and 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1, that at Batković camp, the detainees were mostly civilians and at KP Dom Foča, the non-Serb detainees were civilians apart from the small number of Muslim soldiers segregated from the other detainees.

3345. Turning to incident (e)(ii) detention at an ammunition warehouse in Jelašaćko Polje, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.5.2 Schedule C.9.2 that those detained at Kalinovik Elementary School were transferred to this warehouse. In relation to incident (c)(iii), the detainee at who was detained at the apartment of a Serb soldier in Foča had also been detained at Kalinovik Elementary School. Based on the Trial Chamber's findings above in respect of incident (e)(i), namely that those detained at Kalinovik Elementary School were civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees in incidents (c)(iii) and (e)(ii) were also civilians.

3347. The Trial Chamber will consider the status of the detainees in incidents (f)(ii) and (iii) together. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.6.2 Sanica school and Sitnica school that those detained at Sitnica School were 200 to 250 civilians. Those civilians were earlier detained at Sanica School within a larger group of 400 detainees as described in incident f(iii). Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that, in light of the finding in chapter 4.6.2 Sanica school and Sitnica school, that all the detainees in incident (f)(iii) were civilian, and that at least 200 to 250 of the 400 detainees in incident (f)(ii) were civilian.

3348. With respect to incident (h)(i), which concerns Omarska camp detainees, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.2 that the detainees at the camp were divided into three categories: intellectuals and political leaders from the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat communities; people who associated themselves with those from the first category; and detainees who were, in the view of the Bosnian-Serb authorities, the least 'guilty'. The Trial Chamber also recalls that detainees included elderly people, women, children, mentally impaired people and people who were sick, as well as a number of prominent members of the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat local communities. The Trial Chamber considers these findings to indicate that the Omarska camp detainees were civilian. It also recalls its finding that Omarska camp detainees were transferred to Manjača camp and Trnopolje camp. Considering that the detainees at Manjača camp were almost exclusively civilians, and that detainees at Trnopolje camp were also civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees at Omarska camp were almost exclusively civilians.

3349. Regarding incident (h)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.3 that male and female detainees at Keraterm camp included civilians. Furthermore, detainees were arrested from their homes and in the street. Witness RM-008 described the detainees who were arrested with him as civilians, who had not been involved in any fighting. The Trial Chamber also found that all detainees at Keraterm camp were eventually transferred to Omarska or Trnopolje camps. In this regard, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding above that detainees at Omarska camp were almost exclusively civilians and that detainees at Trnopolje camp were civilians. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees at Keraterm camp were also almost exclusively civilians.

3350. For incident (i)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.3 that Rasadnik detention facility held detainees of all ages and genders and its finding in chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1 that some of the several hundred detainees at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were transferred to Rasadnik detention facility. Based on the foregoing, and the Trial Chamber's finding in respect of incident

(i)(i) that the several hundred detainees at Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the detainees at Rasadnik detention facility were also civilians.

3351. For incident (i)(iv), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.11.2 Unscheduled incidents that the detainees at the Rogatica military reception centre included an imam and former president of the Žepa War Presidency, an electrical engineer and former president of the municipal executive committee, and a forestry engineer and former commander of civilian protection staff. The Trial Chamber notes that the detainees were referred to as ‘POWs’ on VRS correspondence. However, considering the evidence on the occupation of some of the detainees and the evidence reviewed in chapter 4.11.7 on the agreement concerning the separation, registration, and accommodation in a holding centre under the control of the VRS of the able-bodied population of Žepa at the end of July 1995, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that detainees at the Rogatica military reception centre were civilians or placed hors de combat.

3352. With respect to incident (j)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.14.2, Schedule C.19.3 that detainees of both genders and all ages, including civilians, were detained at Sušica camp. In particular, approximately half of the detainees in June and July 1992 were women. Witnesses Mane Đurić and Milenko Stanić also described the detainees as civilians. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber found that many of the detainees at Sušica camp were transferred to Batković camp, which the Trial Chamber found above to have detained mostly civilians. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the 2,000 to 2,500 Bosnian Muslims detained at Sušica camp were mostly civilians.

3353. Turning to incident (d)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.4.2 Schedule C.8.1 that Kula prison held Bosnian-Muslim civilians and, in light of that finding, finds that the Bosnian-Muslim detainees were civilians. As discussed above in relation to discriminatory intent, from 22 or 23 June 1993 until October 1994, there were also some Bosnian Croats at the prison and Croat POWs who were held separately from the other detainees. The Trial Chamber was unable to determine whether the Bosnian Croats detained at Kula prison, apart from the Croat POWs that were held separately, were also civilians or combatants who were not held separately from the Bosnian-Muslim civilians. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber does not find that the Bosnian-Croat detainees were civilians and will therefore not consider this incident further insofar as it concerns any of the Bosnian-Croat detainees.

3355. In relation to incident (g), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.7.2 Unscheduled incidents that the captured group at the Grabovica School consisted of around 50 women and a number of children, as well as a number of men, some of whom were armed. The Trial Chamber finds that the women and children were civilians. Further, considering that the group were caught during the night while attempting to escape Večići towards Travnik, after the population of Večići had surrendered to the Serb forces, the Trial Chamber considers that the men within the group were also civilians.

3356. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 4.6.2 Schedule C.10.3 that the detainees at Velagići Elementary School were between the ages of 18 and 60 years from the villages of Vojići, Nežići, Hačići, Častovići, and Hadžići. They were directed to leave their villages and gather at the checkpoint where they were detained. Approximately 30 of these detainees approached the checkpoint with a white sheet on a stick. In light of these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the detainees were civilians.

3357. Regarding incident (h)(iv), the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.5 that when the detainees were captured, they were unarmed and hiding in the forest after mistakenly entering a Serb village. Considering this, the Trial Chamber finds that the detainees were civilians.

3358. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that in relation to incidents (c)(ii), (iii), (v), (vi), and (vii); (e)(i), (ii) and (iii); (f)(i) and (iii); (g); (h)(iii) and (iv); (i)(i), (ii), the detainees were civilians. For incidents (a); (h)(i) and (ii), the detainees were almost exclusively civilians. Regarding incidents (d)(i) apart from the Bosnian-Croat detainees, the detainees were civilians. For incidents (b), (j)(i) and (ii), the detainees were mostly civilians. For incident (c)(i), the non-Serb detainees were civilians apart from the Muslim soldiers. For incident (f)(ii), at least 200 to 250 of the 400 detainees were civilian. For incident (i)(iv), the detainees were composed of civilians and or placed hors de combat.

3359. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the incidents listed in (a) to (j) insofar as they concern detained Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians, and with the exception of incidents (c)(iv), (d)(ii), (i)(iii) and (j)(ii), constitute unlawful detention as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(e) Forced labour and the use of human shields

Forced labour

3360. In chapters 4.1.5, 4.2.5, 4.3.5, 4.4.5, 4.10.5, 4.11.5, 4.12.5 and 4.14.5, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged forced labour to the extent that they concern Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims:

(a) in Banja Luka Municipality, between June and December 1992, guards at Manjača camp, VRS and SJB members, used detainees from Manjača camp to work on the front lines, dig trenches, work on a Serbian Orthodox church and a hydroelectric power plant and carry out agricultural work, as further set out in chapter 4.1.5;

(b) in Bijeljina Municipality, between July 1992 and 30 November 1995, guards at Batković camp, VRS members, used detainees from Batković camp to perform manual labour, including digging trenches on the front lines, as well as cutting trees, working in factories and in households, and performing agricultural and mechanical repair work, as further set out in chapter 4.2.5;

(c) in Foča Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.3.5: (i) between 12 May 1992 and early July 1993, Milorad Krnojelac used detainees from KP Dom Foča to dig trenches and perform agricultural, construction, and factory work; at that time, KP Dom Foča was guarded by MoJ employees and VRS members; (ii) from December 1993 to March 1994, Savo Todović, head of workers at KP Dom, used 16 detainees from KP

Dom Foča to work at Miljevina mine and perform agricultural work; (iii) between 2 or 3 August and 30 October 1992, Radovan Stanković used detainees at Karaman's house in Miljevina to perform household chores for soldiers, in particular to wash uniforms and cook for them;

(d) in Ilidža Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.4.5: (i) guards, who were under the jurisdiction of the Serb MUP until the beginning of August 1992, and after that under the jurisdiction of the MoJ used detainees from Kula prison, most of whom were Bosnian-Muslim civilians and some were Bosnian Croats, to perform manual labour such as digging trenches and graves and, on one occasion on 31 December 1993, MoJ employees used the detainees to perform labour at a worksite in the immediate vicinity of enemy trenches; (ii) between 23 June and 21 July 1992, members of the MUP used a Bosnian-Muslim detainee from Kula prison to carry material for barricades while being shot at; (iii) between 3 July 1993 and 20 August 1993, MoJ employees used Bosnian-Muslim and/or Bosnian-Croat detainees from Kula prison to work on a farm to move property in Dobrinj; (iv) between 13 August and 23 October 1992, MUP police officers used a Bosnian-Muslim detainee from the Ilidža Police Station to clean cars, kitchens, toilets, and move ammunition, as well as move property from apartments and storehouses in Ilidža together with Serb policemen; (v) sometime between 20 and 25 August 1992, MUP police officers used a Bosnian-Muslim detainee from the Ilidža Police Station to load pipes and radiators from a Serb house;

(e) in Prijedor Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.10.5: (i) in July 1992, members of the VRS ordered Bosnian Muslims including Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees from the Ljubija stadium, to collect approximately 300 to 400 human corpses in Prijedor Municipality and load them onto buses and military trucks; (ii) between 25 May and late August 1992, guards made detainees at Omarska camp load and unload corpses onto and from trucks, as well as clean the white and red houses after detainees were beaten there; (iii) from mid-July 1992, guards selected Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees at Trnopolje camp, including women and children, to perform labour, including the burial of corpses in the area surrounding the camp; (iv) around 10 August 1992, guards ordered some detainees at Trnopolje Camp to remove wire from the fencing around the camp; (v) on or around 25 July 1992, guards made detainees in Keraterm camp load and unload corpses onto a truck, clean Room 3 and the surrounding area where detainees were murdered, as well as wash the truck in which the corpses were being transported.

(f) in Rogatica Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.11.5: (i) between 9 or 10 June and the end of October 1992, detainees from Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were used to perform several types of manual labour, including digging trenches, carrying ammunition and arranging sandbags for machine-gun nests, burying corpses and cleaning streets and apartments; at that time, local Serbs under Rajko Kušić, who was Commander of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, civilian police, Serb TO, and paramilitary unit members guarded the camp (ii) between July and October 1992, Rajko Kušić, Commander of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, used four to five Muslim detainees from Veljko Vlahović Secondary School to extract dead and wounded soldiers; (iii) between the beginning of August 1992 and mid-September 1992, the use of detainees from Rasadnik camp to clean apartments and move furniture; (iv) in the first two weeks of August 1992, Radisav Ljubinac, a member of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, used detainees from Rasadnik detention facility to clean up shelling debris on a daily basis; (v) on 15 August 1992, Radisav Ljubinac, Sinan Čatić, and a Serb called 'Macola', who was a member of a paramilitary unit belonging to Arkan's men, used detainees from Rasadnik detention facility to unload a lorry at the Sladara Factory; (vi) on 21 March 1993, the guards from Rasadnik detention facility, members of the VRS, used detainees from the facility to dig trenches in Trnovo; (vii) between 9 and 11 July 1993, the warden at Rasadnik detention facility, Vinko Bojić, warden of Rasadnik camp at the time and member of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, used twelve detainees from Rasadnik detention facility, including one captured combatant, to recover the bodies of 17 Serb soldiers in a mined area in Starčići; (viii) between 1 and 17 April 1994, Vinko Bojić, warden of Rasadnik camp at the time and member of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, used more than 100 Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Rasadnik detention facility to carry food and ammunition up Trovrh Hill; (ix) between 17 and 27 April 1994, Vinko Bojić, warden of Rasadnik camp at the time and member of the VRS Rogatica Brigade used 10-15 detainees from Rasadnik detention facility to work in the forest at Gnila Hill;

(g) in Vlasenica Municipality, from at least mid-June until the end of September 1992, Vojislav Nikolić, Veljko Bašić, Milanko Sargić, and Radenko Stanić used detainees from Sušica camp to perform several types of labour including the burial of men killed in Drum, digging of trenches and carrying munitions at the front lines, and from the second half of July onwards, to work on various projects on a daily basis, as further set out in chapter 4.14.5;

(h) in Sanski Most Municipality, from early September 1993 until at least October 1994, Boro Tadić, Commander of the 1st Battalion of the 6th Krajina Brigade, selected Bosnian Muslims from Sanski Most to perform different types of manual labour for the VRS, including digging trenches, carrying and delivering food and water, and chopping wood at the front lines, as further set out in chapter 4.12.5.

3361. The Trial Chamber will now proceed to consider the aforementioned alleged incidents of forced labour pursuant to the applicable law.

3362. Forcible nature of labour. Concerning incident (e)(i), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.10.5 that the VRS ordered the work to be performed and that the work involved collecting approximately 300 to 400 human corpses. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the work was performed in circumstances objectively so coercive so as to negate any possibility of consent.

3363. Concerning incident (h), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.5 that the VRS selected Bosnian Muslims to perform different types of manual labour for the VRS, including digging trenches, carrying and delivering food and water, and chopping wood at the front lines. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the work was performed in circumstances objectively so coercive so as to negate any possibility of consent.

3365. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that labour was forced in all of the incidents listed in (a) to (h).

3366. Protective conditions. The Trial Chamber reiterates, as discussed above, that detainees performing the forced labour referred to in incidents (a) to (d), and (e)(ii) to (g), were subject to treatment that caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury. In incident (e)(i), the victims forced to perform labour were required to collect 300 to 400 human corpses, sometimes by hand. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the labour involved in each of these incidents was performed without the protective conditions discussed in the applicable law. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that regardless of the form of forced labour performed by the victims, the forced labour was prohibited.

3367. In any event, in relation to incidents (a), (b), (d)(i) with respect to the 31 December 1993 incident, (g), and (h) the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that detainees, and in the case of incident (h) Bosnian Muslims, performed labour at the front lines. Based on the applicable law discussed in chapter 8.9.1(e), labour at front lines cannot fall within any lawful exceptions to the prohibition of forced labour.

3368. Mens rea. Based on the character of the forced labour, including the circumstances discussed above, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators intended to force the victims to perform prohibited labour.

3369. Discrimination. In relation to incidents (a) to (d)(iii); (e)(ii) to (g), which concerned forced labour in and around Manjača camp, Batković camp, KP Dom Foča, Karaman's house, Kula Prison, Keraterm camp, Omarska camp, Trnopolje camp, Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, Rasadnik detention facility, and Sušica camp, the perpetrators of the forced labour were also amongst the perpetrators of unlawful detention and/or cruel treatment in these detention facilities. It is relevant that the Trial Chamber found in chapters 8.9.2(b) and (d) that the perpetrators of the unlawful detention and cruel and/or inhumane treatment in these detention facilities acted on political, racial or religious grounds. Further, in relation to incident (f)(iii), on the same day that detainees from Rasadnik detention facility performed labour, Radisav Ljubinac, Sinan Ćatić, and a Serb called 'Macola' told those detainees to declare their loyalty to the Serb state. With respect to incidents (f)(vii), when detainees were forced to recover bodies in Starčići, the warden at Rasadnik detention facility, Vinko Bojić, taunted the detainees by calling their mothers 'Baliža'. In addition, across all incidents, those forced to perform labour were predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat. The Trial

Chamber finds that this factor, in and of itself, evidences that labour was forced on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3370. In relation to incident (h), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.5 that Bosnian Muslims were selected by the VRS to perform manual labour for the VRS, including at the front lines. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that labour was forced on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3371. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators of all of the incidents listed in (a) to (h) forced labour on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3373. Incidents (d)(iv) and (v) involved a detainee that had been kept in a windowless cell which was of such a size that conditions were crowded given the number of detainees. In chapter 8.9.2(b), the Trial Chamber considered this treatment to have caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury. In light of these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that these incidents amount to acts of the same gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

3374. In incident (e)(i), Bosnian Muslims, including detainees at the Ljubija stadium, collected and loaded human corpses in Prijedor Municipality in July 1992. While the labour was not performed in conjunction with unlawful detention or beatings, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.10.1 Schedules A.6.5 and A.6.8 that detainees from the Ljubija stadium, and Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Prijedor Municipality were killed in July 1992. The victims of the forced labour were required to collect and load the corpses of those killed in these incidents, sometimes by hand. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that this incident amounts to an act of the same gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

3376. Status of victims. For incidents (d)(iv) and (v), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.4.5 that the Bosnian-Muslim detainee that was forced to perform labour at Ilidža Police Station had been previously detained at Kula prison. In light of the Trial Chamber's finding in chapter 8.9.2(d) that the Bosnian-Muslim detainees at Kula prison were civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian-Muslim detainee in incidents (d)(iv) and (v) was also a civilian.

3377. Regarding incident (e)(i), the Trial Chamber considered the circumstances in which labour was forced, including those some of the victims of the forced labour were detained, and that the victims were forced to perform labour following the killing of civilians in Scheduled Incidents A.6.5 and A.6.8, as further set out in chapter 8.3.2. Given that some victims were detained, and the proximity Scheduled Incidents A.6.5 and A.6.8 involving the killing of civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that for incident (e)(i), the victims forced to perform labour were either civilians, or placed hors de combat and were not taking an active part in hostilities at the time that labour was performed.

3378. Regarding incident (h), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.5 that Boro Tadić selected Bosnian Muslims considered to be 'fit for various jobs'. Based on the foregoing and considering that some the manual labour performed by these Bosnian Muslims included labour at the front lines, the Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference is that the victims forced to perform labour were either civilians or placed hors de combat and were not taking an active part in hostilities at the time that labour was performed.

3379. For the remaining incidents, noting that the victims of forced labour were also the victims of unlawful detention, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.9.2(d) that at Manjača camp, Keraterm camp, and Omarska camp, detainees were almost exclusively civilians. At Batković camp, they were mostly civilians. At KP Dom Foča, the detainees were civilians apart from the Muslim soldiers. At Karaman's house, Trnopolje camp, Veljko Vlahović Secondary School and Rasadnik detention facility, detainees were civilians. At Kula prison, apart from the Bosnian-Croat detainees, the detainees were predominantly civilians. At Sušica camp, the detainees included civilians. The Trial Chamber also recalls that in chapter 8.9.2(b), it found that those detainees found not to be civilians in 8.9.2(d) were placed hors de combat as a result of their detention. Accordingly, the victims of the incidents listed in (a) to (h) were either civilians or placed hors de combat and not taking an active part in hostilities at the time that labour was performed.

3380. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (h) above, insofar as they concern Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, constitute forced labour as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

Human shields

3381. In chapters 4.5.5 and 4.11.5, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged human shields to the extent that they concern Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims:

(a) in Kalinovik Municipality, sometime between 18 September 1992 and 24 March 1993, Boško Govedarica, the Chief of Police at Kalinovik SJB, and the police commander, Neđelko Zeljaja, or their subordinates, used a Bosnian-Muslim detainee, and another detainee of unknown ethnicity, from Kalinovik Police Station to drive a number of times in front of other cars in order to detect mines, as further set out in chapter 4.5.5;

(b) in Rogatica Municipality, on 15 August 1992, Dragoje Paunović, the Commander of the Kozići unit of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, forced at least 24 Muslim males brought from Rasadnik detention facility, to walk two-by-two down an alley at the front line in Duljevac, as further set out in chapter 4.11.5.

3382. For incident (a), detainees were brought to a mined area and forced to drive in front of other cars. The Trial Chamber considers the area where these mines were located amounted to a combat operation that the detainees were exposed to for the purpose of detecting mines. The Trial Chamber considers the laying of mines, under these circumstances, to constitute a military operation or armed attack. Based on the foregoing, the only reasonable inference for moving the detainees in this manner was to render the area, and/or the activities of those in the cars, or future Bosnian-Serb soldiers going through that area, immune from this military operation or armed attack.

3383. For incident (b), at least two detainees were wounded, Serb soldiers were present and that the Trial Chamber found that these detainees were used 'as a human shield'. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the detainees were placed in an area where they were exposed to combat operations. The Trial Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference for moving these detainees to the front line was to render the area and/or the activities of the Bosnian-Serb soldiers present immune from military operations or armed attack.

3384. Discrimination. These incidents took place in connection with unlawful detentions at Kalinovik Police Station and Rasadnik detention facility. Based on its findings in chapter 8.9.2(d) that the associated unlawful detentions were discriminatory, and that the victims of these incidents were almost exclusively Bosnian-Muslim, the Trial Chamber finds that the incident was carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3385. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity.

3386. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.9.2(d) that Witness RM-012, who was the Bosnian-Muslim victim in incident (a), was a civilian. It further recalls its finding that detainees at Rasadnik detention facility, who were used as human shields in incident (b), were also civilians.

3387. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the above incidents constitute the use of human shields as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(f) Appropriation or plunder of property

3388. In chapters 4.2.4, 4.5.4, 4.6.4, 4.7.4, 4.10.4, 4.11.4, 4.12.4 , and 4.14.4 the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged appropriation or plunder of property against the applicable law:

(a) in Bijeljina Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.2.4: (i) from the beginning of 1992 until the beginning of 1993, many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who left the municipality through a private agency called 'Europa', staffed by MUP personnel, were required to sign statements leaving all of their property to the agency; (ii) from 1992 onwards, Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS, aided by Mauzer's men, who joined the IBK on 3 June 1992, extorted property from Bosnian Muslims and stripped them of their valuables before they were forced out of the municipality; and (iii) after the Bosnian Muslims were forced out of the municipality,

Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS, aided by Mauzer's men, who joined the IBK on 3 June 1992, looted the Bosnian-Muslim houses;

(b) in Kalinovik Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.5.4 Kalinovik: (i) on 5 August 1992, Serb soldiers, headed by Pero Elez, who had his own sub-unit under Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group, took valuables away from around 25 Bosnian-Muslim detainees at the ammunition warehouse in Jelašačko Polje; and (ii) in July or August 1992, Čosa's men, Pero Elez's men, Zoran and Nedžo Samardžić, and Dragan Kunarac's men, all of whom headed, or were members of, sub-units under Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group, took valuables away from Bosnian-Muslim detainees at the Kalinovik elementary school;

(c) in Ključ Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.6.4: (i) on 1 June 1992, a military police platoon and members of the intervention platoon with the engineering unit took away items, including valuables and money, from approximately 100 Bosnian-Muslims civilians at the Velagići checkpoint; (ii) in late May 1992, Bosnian-Serb soldiers and soldiers from Serbia looted houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Town and took away money, a VCR, and a TV; (iii) in mid-1992, Bosnian-Serb forces looted valuables, including electronic devices, vehicles, furniture, money and jewellery from the inhabitants of the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim or Bosnian-Croat villages of Pudin Han, Prhovo and Crljeni during attacks on these villages. This attack on Pudin Han was perpetrated by a VRS battalion and other units between 28 and 31 May 1992;

(d) in Kotor Varoš Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.7.4: (i) in June and July 1992, a special unit from CSB Banja Luka, led by VRS Captain Slobodan Dubočanin, took furniture, televisions, videocassette recorders, and gold from the houses of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in towns and villages in Kotor Varoš Municipality; and (ii) on 3 November 1992, VRS members confiscated money and valuables from Bosnian-Muslim detainees in a field near Grabovica;

(e) in Prijedor Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.10.4: (i) in mid-1992, VRS members, paramilitaries and police looted houses belonging to Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of Biščani, Kozaruša, Kamičani, Kevljani, Rakovčani, Čarakovo, and Rizvanovići villages and took items including tractors, cars, cattle, farming equipment, and household goods; (ii) Serb soldiers looted property including valuables, cars, and tractors, from Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of Hambarine, after the village was attacked on 21 May 1992; (iii) on 9 June 1992, four armed men wearing JNA uniforms looted goods from a café in Hambarine that was owned by a Bosnian Muslim; (iv) Serb soldiers looted houses belonging to Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of Kozarac Town some time after the town was attacked at the end of May 1992 (see chapter 4.10.3); (v) sometime between the end of May and August 1992, Slavko Puhalić, who was a member of the VRS 43rd Motorized Brigade took a Bosnian-Muslim man's car in Prijedor Municipality, along with three trucks that belonged to the man's father and brother; (vi) property was looted from the Bosnian-Croat inhabitants of Briševo on three different occasions: soldiers, acting jointly with police and paramilitaries, looted houses on 27 May 1992, 'Chetnik' groups and regular soldiers looted property including cars, agricultural equipment, and electronic equipment during an attack on the village on 25 July 1992, and 'Chetnik' groups led by Draško Topić looted the village daily between 25 July and November 1992; (vii) on 30 May 1992, the 5th Kozarac Brigade, the 43rd Motorized Brigade, some members of the 6th Krajina Brigade and other units, as specified in chapter 4.10.3, took goods from apartments owned by Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Town; (viii) some time between 21 and 24 July 1992, small groups of soldiers repeatedly took household appliances and valuables from the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat inhabitants of Čemernica; (ix) the VRS, acting jointly with the police and paramilitary forces, collected money and jewellery from Bosnian-Muslim women and took valuables from Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat houses in Ljubija over the course of several days after the attack on the village in July 1992; (x) a law passed by the Crisis Staff required Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat villagers to sign over their property to either the ARK or the Bosnian-Serb Republic when they were forced to leave Prijedor Municipality; (xi) between May and August 1992, Serb guards and the police forced Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees at Omarska camp to hand over valuables and money; (xii) on 14 June 1992, Serb soldiers under the command of Draze Mitrović forced a group of 43 Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat men who had been arrested to hand over money and valuables before being transferred to Keraterm camp; (xiii) Duško Sikirica, the camp commander at Keraterm camp, took jewellery and valuables from two Bosnian-Muslim women and a number of Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat men upon their arrival at Keraterm camp on 14 July 1992; (xiv) on 26 May 1992, camp guards from Kuruzović's unit took valuables, money, and personal effects from Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees at Trnopolje camp; (xv) on 20 July 1992, camp guards, members of the TO and VRS, forced newly arrived Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees at Trnopolje camp to hand over their valuables; (xvi) on several occasions between late May and September 1992, camp guards, members of the police, TO, and the VRS allowed Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees from Trnopolje and Omarska camps to leave the municipality in bus convoys on the condition that they handed over their money and valuables or signed a form stating that they voluntarily transferred all of their real and personal property to the Serb authorities or the Serbs; and (xvii) during the same time period, while being bussed from Trnopolje and Omarska camps, Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat detainees were forced to hand over money and valuables to the guards at both camps, to Serb soldiers including soldiers from the Special Task Force, to a man wearing a police uniform, and to the military police;

(f) in Rogatica Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.11.4: (i) from 19 July 1992 onwards, Radisav Ljubinac, called 'Pjano', who was a member of the VRS Rogatica Brigade, and a Serb from Zagreb nicknamed 'Macola', who was a member of a paramilitary unit belonging to Arkan's men, took jewellery from detainees, who were all Bosnian Muslims, with the exception of a Serb family and two Serb women married to Bosnian-Muslim men, at Veljko Vlahović School; (ii) on 15 August 1992, 'Macola', in the presence of Radisav Ljubinac, took money, valuables, and other items from Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Rasadnik camp who had been gathered into a room at the post office in Gračanica; and (iii) between August and September 1992, guards at Rasadnik camp, members of the SJB and the VRS, forced detainees to take objects, including furniture, from Bosnian-Muslim houses in Rogatica, load them onto lorries, and offload them in Serb houses and flats;

(g) in Sanski Most Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.12.4 Sanski Most: (i) on 31 May 1992, Bosnian-Serb forces looted houses belonging to the Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of Begići Village; (ii) on the same day, about 100 Serb soldiers in olive grey-green uniforms and camouflage uniforms with red scarves and black armbands made 120 Bosnian-Muslim villagers they had taken to Kljevci hand over their jewellery and other valuables; and (iii) in May and June 1992, local police and the Sanski Most SOS looted property belonging to the Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of the Mahala neighbourhood, some of which was carried out under the command of non-commissioned officer Dobrivoje Ribić of the first company of the 1st Battalion;

(h) in Vlasenica Municipality and as further set out in chapter 4.14.4: (i) on, or shortly after 17 May 1992, the Vlasenica municipal authorities forced a group of Bosnian-

Muslim women from Zaklopač to sign over their houses and properties to Serbs; (ii) in June 1992, members of Kraljević's unit (see chapter 4.15.2 Schedule A.9.1) took televisions and other property from Bosnian-Muslim residences in Vlasenica Town, and one member of the unit claimed and moved into a Bosnian-Muslim house; and (iii) in early June 1992, at Sušica camp, possessions were taken from Bosnian-Muslim detainees following an order from Dragan Nikolić, and Sušica camp guards, members of the VRS and MUP stripped more than 800 Bosnian-Muslim women of their valuables.

3389. The Trial Chamber will now proceed to consider the aforementioned alleged incidents of appropriation or plunder of property against the applicable law.

3390. Acts of appropriation of private or public property. With respect to events occurring in Bijeljina Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that those leaving the municipality through the Europa agency had no choice but to leave,<sup>13292</sup> as well as the fact that the agency required many people who left the municipality in this manner to sign statements leaving all of their property to it, as described in incident (a)(i). The Trial Chamber finds that this constituted appropriation of private property.

3391. With respect to incident (e)(x), the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that those leaving Prijedor Municipality had no choice but to leave<sup>13293</sup> and that the Crisis Staff required them to sign statements leaving all their property to the ARK or the Bosnian-Serb Republic when they left the municipality. The Trial Chamber finds that this constituted appropriation of private property. While the Trial Chamber received evidence in relation to this incident that real property certificates were issued at first to justify the confiscations, this practice then ceased. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that this evidence does not impact its finding that appropriation of private property occurred.

3392. With regard to incident (e)(xvi), the Trial Chamber recalls that some of the Trnopolje and Omarska camp detainees were allowed to leave on condition that they handed over their money and valuables or signed a form stating that they voluntarily transferred all of their real and personal property to the Serb authorities or the Serbs. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on unlawful detention and cruel and inhumane treatment at Trnopolje and Omarska camps,<sup>13294</sup> and considers that, given the factual circumstances in which these incidents occurred, the detainees had no choice other than to surrender their property. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts described in incident (e)(xvi) constituted appropriation of private property.

3393. With regard to incident (f)(iii), the Trial Chamber recalls that Rasadnik camp guards, who were members of the SJB and VRS between June and October 1992 (see chapter 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.3), forced detainees to take property, including furniture, from Bosnian-Muslim homes in Rogatica and move it to Bosnian-Serb residences. The Trial Chamber finds that the acts described in incident (f)(iii) constituted appropriation of private property by the Rasadnik camp guards.

3394. With respect to the remaining incidents, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that, having considered the factual circumstances of each incident, acts of appropriation of private property were committed.

3395. Unlawfulness. The Trial Chamber recalls that in certain circumstances appropriation of property may not be regarded as unlawful where it can be justified by military necessity.<sup>13295</sup> Whether an act of appropriation is carried out on discriminatory grounds, that is, political, racial, or religious grounds, is determinative of whether the act of appropriation was also unlawful. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will consider the unlawfulness of all the incidents listed in (a) to (h) further below when assessing whether the acts were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds.

3396. Discrimination. The Trial Chamber recalls that the acts of appropriation described in incidents (a)(i); (d)(i); (e)(ix), (x), (xi), (xii), (xiii), (xiv), (xv), (xvi), and (xvii) were committed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. It further recalls that the acts of appropriation described in incidents (a)(ii) and (iii); (b)(i) and (ii); (c)(i) and (ii); (d)(ii); (e)(i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (v), (vii), and (viii); (f)(i), (ii), and (iii); (g)(i), (ii), and (iii); and (h)(i), (ii), and (iii) were committed against Bosnian Muslims, while the acts of appropriation described in incident (e)(vi) were committed against Bosnian Croats and the acts of appropriation described in incident (c)(iii) were committed against Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.

3397. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the acts of appropriation described in incidents (a)(i), (ii), and (iii); (c)(ii) and (c)(iii); (d)(i); (e)(i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (vi), (vii), (ix), and (x); (g)(i), (ii), and (iii); and (h)(i) took place in connection with forcible transfer and deportation, and/or destruction in Bijeljina, Ključ, Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Vlasenica municipalities.<sup>13296</sup> The acts of appropriation described in incidents (b)(i) and (ii); (e)(xi), (xii), (xiii), (xiv), (xv), (xvi), and (xvii); (f)(i) and (ii); and (h)(iii) took place in connection with unlawful detention in Kalinovik, Prijedor, Rogatica, and Vlasenica municipalities, and the appropriation of property described in incidents (c)(i) and (d)(ii) took place in connection with murder in Ključ and Kotor Varoš municipalities, respectively.<sup>13297</sup> The Trial Chamber found that the acts of forcible transfer and deportation, destruction, unlawful detention, and murder in these municipalities were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13298</sup> With respect to incident (e)(viii), the Trial Chamber recalls that the acts of appropriation took place during the same time frame as a number of murders in nearby villages in Prijedor Municipality, as found in chapter 4.10.1.<sup>13299</sup> With respect to incident (f)(i), the Trial Chamber also recalls that the Rasadnik camp detainees who had their jewellery taken away were also forced to sign papers stating that they had voluntarily converted to the Serbian Orthodox religion.<sup>13300</sup> With respect to incident (f)(iii), the Trial Chamber recalls that the objects removed from Bosnian-Muslim houses in Rogatica were offloaded in Serb houses and flats.<sup>13301</sup> With respect to incident (h)(ii), the Trial Chamber recalls that the perpetrators were specifically directed to take property from non-Serbs.<sup>13302</sup>

3398. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (h) were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds and were therefore carried out with discriminatory intent. In relation to whether these acts were unlawful, the Trial Chamber finds that because these acts of appropriation were committed with discriminatory intent, they were unlawful.

3399. Intent. Considering the factual circumstances in which the acts of appropriation listed in (a) to (h) above were carried out, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that the perpetrators acted knowingly with the intent to appropriate private property.

3400. Plunder of property as an underlying act of persecution. In relation to the issue of the gravity of an underlying act of persecution and whether it meets the standard of other crimes under Article 5 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber considers that the incident described in (e)(i) in so far as it relates to the appropriation of tractors, cars, cattle, and farming equipment, and incidents (e)(ii) and (v), with respect to the looting of tractors, cars, and trucks, may have had a serious impact on the owners of the property, due to the economic value of these items and their necessity for the victims' livelihoods. With respect to the incidents described in (a)(i) and (ii); (e)(x); and (h)(i), the Trial Chamber also considers that given the circumstances in which the acts occurred, where the victims had no choice but to leave their respective municipalities,<sup>13303</sup> the appropriation of the victims' private property, especially in times of an armed conflict,<sup>13304</sup> may have had a serious impact on them. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the acts of appropriation listed in (a) to (h) did not occur in isolation, but were carried out in conjunction with a series of other acts amounting to persecution, including forcible transfer and deportation, unlawful detention, imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures, and the wanton destruction of private and public property, against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats (see chapter 8.9.2 (c), (d), (g) and (h)). Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that all these incidents constituted acts of equal gravity to other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

3401. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (h) constitute plunder as an underlying act of persecution.

3402. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirements of crimes against humanity.

3403. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber notes that the acts of appropriation described in incidents (a)(i), (ii), and (iii); (e)(i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (vi), (ix), and (x); (g)(i), (ii) and (iii); and (h)(i) took place in connection with forcible transfer and deportation and destruction in Bijeljina, Ključ, Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Vlasenica municipalities.<sup>13305</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber notes that the acts of appropriation described in incidents (b)(i) and (ii); (e)(xi), (xii), (xiii), (xiv), (xv), (xvi), and (xvii); (f)(i) and (ii); and (h)(iii) took place in connection with unlawful detention in Kalinovik, <sup>13305</sup> See chapter 8.9.2(c) and (g).

Prijedor, Rogatica, and Vlasenica municipalities, and the acts of appropriation described in incidents (c)(i) and (d)(ii) took place in connection with murder in Ključ and Kotor Varoš municipalities, respectively.<sup>13306</sup> In chapter 9.8.2 (a), (c), (d), (g), the Trial Chamber found that the acts of forcible transfer and deportation, destruction, unlawful detention, and murder in these municipalities were carried out against civilians.<sup>13307</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the acts of appropriation described in the aforementioned incidents were carried out against the same categories of victims and were therefore committed against civilians.

3404. With respect to incidents (c)(ii) and (c)(iii); (d)(i); (e)(v), (vii), and (viii); (f)(iii); (h)(i) and (ii), the Trial Chamber finds that the acts of appropriation were committed against individuals in residential areas and that given this context, as well as, in some instances, the nature of the items which were appropriated, the only reasonable inference is that the victims of each of these acts were predominantly civilians.

3405. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts listed in (a) to (h) constitute plunder as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

Many

houses were destroyed in Ljubija. Serb infantry razed to the ground the village of Koncari during the same attack. The perpetrators of the attack also razed to the ground large parts of Jakupovići. During this attack care was taken to avoid damage to Serb property and the Serb Orthodox church was not attacked; (xiv)(b) the destruction of the Mutnik mosque in Kozarac by the perpetrators of the attack; (xiv)(c) the shelling of the Hrnići mosque by the perpetrators of the attack; (xiv)(d) the destruction of the Srednji and Gornji mosques in Jakupovići by the perpetrators of the attack; (xiv)(e) the setting on fire of the church and the mosque in July 1992 in the village of Ljubija where inhabitants were predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat by the perpetrators of the attack; (xv)(a) the destruction of the village of Mujkanovići by Serb infantry; (xv)(b) the heavy damage caused to the Mujkanovići mosque by Serb infantry on or around 10 June 1992; (xvi)(a) the shelling and setting on fire of 68 Bosnian-Croat houses by the VRS, including soldiers in JNA uniforms with red ribbons around their arms, helmets and subara hats, acting jointly with the police, paramilitary groups, as well as with the 5th Kozara Brigade and the 6th Krajina Brigade, led by Basara and Veljko Brajić in the Bosnian-Croat village of Briševo; (xvi)(b) the shelling and setting on fire of the Roman Catholic church in Briševo by the perpetrators of the attack; (xvii) the destruction of remaining houses in Briševo by small groups of men described as ‘Chetniks’; and (xviii) the destruction with mines of the Roman Catholic parish church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in Šurkovac by Serb forces on or around 26 December 1992, as further set out in chapter 4.10.3;

These incidents are further set out in chapter 4.11.3;

(g) in Sanski Most Municipality, (i) at the end of May 1992, the destruction by the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, commanded by Branko Basara, acting jointly with the SOS of (i)(a) houses and four Muslim sacred sites in the Muslim villages of Vrhpolje and

These incidents are further set out in chapter 4.12.3;

(h) in Sokolac Municipality, the destruction by fire of houses and five sacred sites during the attacks on several Muslim villages of the municipality by members of the VRS 2nd Motorised Romanija Brigade between the end of July and the end of September 1992. This incident is further set out in chapter 4.13.3;

(i) in Vlasenica Municipality, (i) the destruction by fire of many Muslim houses in Gradina and the surrounding villages such as Barice and Piskavice, a mixed Serb and Muslim village, by a VRS unit acting on the orders of Kraljević and by police officers from the SJB Vlasenica, during the Gradina operations at the end of May and early June 1992; (ii) the destruction by fire of most of the content of the apartment of a Muslim in Vlasenica between 18 and 30 June 1992. The content of the apartment was destroyed by Sušica camp detainees upon an order from the camp guards; and (iii) the destruction with explosives of the Vlasenica Town mosque by a VRS unit in August 1992. These incidents are further set out in chapter 4.14.3.

3407. Destruction on a large scale. With regard to the destruction of private property, the Trial Chamber finds that the destruction was on a large scale in the following incidents for the following reasons: multiple properties were destroyed over an extended time period in incidents (a)(ii), (b)(ii), (f)(i), and (g)(vi); the houses, as well as the medical clinic in the case of (e)(xiv)(a), were destroyed in multiple villages in incidents (c)(i), (e)(xiv)(a), (g)(i)(a), (h), and (i)(i); 3,500 houses were destroyed in incident (b)(i); all the houses in some villages were destroyed in incidents (b)(ii), (e)(v)(a), and (e)(xv)(a); almost all the houses in the villages were destroyed in incidents (e)(xvi)(a), and (d)(i); and multiple houses and one business were destroyed in incidents (e)(i)(a), (e)(ii), (e)(iii), (e)(vi)(a), (e)(vii)(a), (e)(viii)(a), (e)(ix)(a), (e)(x)(d), (e)(xi), (e)(xii)(b), (e)(xvii), (f)(iv), (g)(i)(d), (g)(ii), (g)(iii), and (g)(ix). With regard to the destruction of private property in incident (i)(ii), the Trial Chamber finds that the destruction of almost everything from one apartment, absent any evidence establishing what these items are, does not constitute destruction on a large scale. The Trial Chamber will therefore not further consider this incident.

3408. With regard to the remaining incidents of destruction, which concern Muslim and Roman Catholic sacred sites and a Muslim cultural monument, the Trial Chamber finds that, as each incident had a severe impact on the people who valued the property and amounted to an attack on the religious identity of Muslims and Roman Catholics, the destruction was on a large scale.

3409. Military necessity. With regard to the all but incident (i)(ii), the Trial Chamber finds that these acts of destruction concerned private properties, sacred sites, and cultural monuments, none of which qualified as military objects whose destruction would make an effective contribution to military action or whose destruction would offer a definite military advantage. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the destruction identified in all incidents was not justified by military necessity.

3410. Intent. With regard to incidents (a)(ii); (b)(ii),(iii),(vi); (c)(i),(ii); (d)(i); (e)(i)(a) to (e)(iii); (e)(iv) to (e)(x)(a), (e)(x)(c); (e)(x)(d); (e)(xii)(a) to (e)(xiv)(a); (e)(xiv)(c);

(e)(xiv)(e); (e)(xvi)(a), (e)(xvi)(b); (e)(xviii); (f)(i),(ii); (g)(i)(a) to (g)(i)(c); (g)(iv); (h), and (i)(i) the physical perpetrators damaged or destroyed with explosives or by fire, private property as well as sacred and cultural sites during attacks on villages and towns. In the case of incidents (b)(vi), (e)(x)(b) - Zagrad Mosque only - and (g)(iii), the physical perpetrators razed the ruins of these sites after destroying them, for some with explosives. In relation to incident (e)(xi), a member of the Prijedor Crisis Staff instructed the perpetrators to destroy Muslim homes in the old area of Prijedor Town with the use of an excavator. With regard to incident (f)(i), the physical perpetrators targeted and set on fire, using flame throwers, Bosnian-Muslim private property in Rogatica Town. Concerning incident (i)(i), the Trial Chamber received evidence that the physical perpetrators acted pursuant to their commander's order to destroy Muslim private property to prevent Muslims from returning to their home.

3411. The destruction covered in incidents (b)(i); (b)(iv) to (b)(v); (c)(iii) to (c)(vi); (d)(ii) to (d)(iii); (e)(x)(b) – old mosque in Stari Grad, (e)(xii)(b); (e)(xiv)(b); (e)(xiv)(d); (e)(xv)(a) to (e)(xv)(b); (f)(iii) to (f)(iv); (g)(i)(d); (g)(iii); (g)(v) to (g)(vii); (g)(x); and (i)(iii) concerns private and public property. With regard to these incidents, the Trial Chamber infers the intent to destroy from the fact that sacred religious and cultural sites as well as private property were targeted or destroyed by various means including explosives or fire, and from the general circumstances of their destruction. Concerning incident (b)(i) the Trial Chamber considered that large numbers of Bosnian-Muslim private properties were targeted and destroyed. With regard to incident (c)(iv), the Večići mosque was targeted five times. Concerning incident (g)(v), the physical perpetrators acted pursuant to an order from Colonel Aničić, a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and Chief of the TO. Concerning incident (i)(iii), the perpetrator ordered the destruction of one Muslim sacred site in Vlasenica Town, after giving notice to the Vlasenica SJB and asking the population to leave the area.

3412. Concerning the incidents discussed above, the Trial Chamber finds that the physical perpetrators had the intent to destroy these buildings.

3413. With regard to the destruction of two Muslim sacred sites and one Catholic Church mentioned in incidents (a)(i); (c)(vi), and (g)(viii) as well as the destruction of houses mentioned in incident (e)(xvii), the Trial Chamber has not received evidence on the mode of destruction of the sites, circumstances of their destruction, orders pertaining to their destruction, or any other evidence useful to establish that the physical perpetrators acted with the mens rea to destroy and will therefore not consider these incidents further.

3414. Discrimination. For all incidents still being considered, wanton destruction was committed against Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat property as well as against Muslim and Croat cultural monuments and sacred sites. In particular, in incidents (c)(i), (e)(iii), (e)(x)(d), (e)(xiv)(a), and (f)(i), Serb properties or properties located in Serb areas were spared. Of relevance to incidents (e)(iii), (e)(x)(d), and (e)(xiv)(a), following the take-over of Prijedor Town and before the take-over of Kozarac, Serbs made continuous references on the radio to the destruction of mosques and all property belonging to Bosnian Muslims, whom they referred to as 'Balijas'. Non-Serb settlements were surrounded, bombarded, and invaded while care was taken not to damage Serb property during these attacks. In incident (i)(i), the physical perpetrators acted pursuant to orders from their command to destroy as much Muslim property as possible in order to prevent Muslims from returning to their homes. The Trial Chamber further considered that the incidents of wanton destruction of private and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites, were committed in conjunction with other underlying acts of persecution which were perpetrated at the same time, as described in chapter 4. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed above were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds.

3415. Destruction as an underlying act of persecution. In relation to the issue of the gravity of an incident of destruction and whether it meets the standard of other crimes under Article 5 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber considers that the incidents of destruction still being considered were carried out in conjunction with a series of acts comprising murder and deportation. These incidents, therefore, constitute an act of the same gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that all of these incidents constitute destruction as an underlying act of persecution.

3417. Status of victims. Considering that the destruction concerned private and public properties intended to be used by civilians, including sacred sites and cultural monuments, the Trial Chamber finds that the victims were civilians.

3418. Conclusion. The Trial Chamber finds that the incidents of wanton destruction, listed in the first paragraph of this chapter, with the exception of incidents (a)(i), (c)(vi), (e)(xvii), (g)(viii), and (i)(ii), constitute destruction as an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(h) Imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures

3419. In chapters 4.1.6, 4.3.6, 4.5.6, 4.6.6, 4.7.6, 4.10.6, 4.12.6, 4.14.6 the Trial Chamber decided to further consider the following incidents of alleged imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures to the extent that they concern Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims:

Denial of the freedom of movement

(a) in relation to Foča Municipality, from 12 May to July 1992, Serb soldiers and police restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.3.6;

(b) in relation to Kalinovik Municipality, from 12 May or later in May 1992, the SDS Crisis Staff restricted the movement of the Bosnian-Muslim population in the municipality, and further restricted these movements from at least 11 June 1992, as further set out in chapter 4.5.6;

(c) in relation to Ključ Municipality, from 12 May or later in May 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff and Serb police severely restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.6.6;

(d) in relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, from 12 May 1992 onwards, the VRS and the local authorities in Kotor Varoš, including the MUP and the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.7.6;

(e) in relation to Prijedor Municipality, between the end of May and end of June 1992, Serbs restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the municipality, by requiring them to register their movements, as further set out in chapter 4.10.6;

(f) in relation to Sanski Most Municipality, from 12 May until the end of May 1992 and during the second half of 1992, JNA 6th Krajina Brigade soldiers; Serb policemen; local Serbs from Lukavica and people described as Martić's men, both of whom wore olive-grey or olive-green camouflage uniforms; the White Eagles; and persons described as Šešelj's Chetniks, restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.12.6;

(g) in relation to Vlasenica Municipality, from 19 May 1992, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, headed by Milenko Stanić, restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.14.6;

Removal from positions of authority in local government institutions and the police and the general dismissal from employment

(h) in relation to Banja Luka Municipality, from 12 May 1992 and throughout the remainder of that year, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were dismissed from publicly-owned enterprises in Krajina pursuant to ARK Crisis Staff decisions on 26 May and 22 June 1992, as further set out in chapter 4.1.6;

(i) in relation to Ključ Municipality: (i) in late May 1992, Serb authorities dismissed Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, and a Serb married to a Bosnian Muslim from posts in companies, including the Sanica factory, and public bodies, including the police; (ii) on 21 July 1992, the war presidency of Ključ Municipality issued a decision stating that all central positions in public institutions and companies were to be filled only by Serbs loyal to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and ordered the dismissal of several Bosnian Muslims from municipal positions, as further set out in chapter 4.6.6;

(j) in relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, from June 1992, civilian authorities including the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, dismissed Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from employment, as further set out in chapter 4.7.6;

(k) in relation to Prijedor Municipality, from 12 May 1992 onwards, the Prijedor Crisis Staff dismissed Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, as further set out in chapter 4.10.6;

(l) in relation to Sanski Most Municipality, on 15 May 1992, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, pursuant to ARK Crisis Staff decisions, dismissed Muslim employees from the municipal court in Sanski Most Municipality, as further set out in chapter 4.12.6;

(m) in relation to Vlasenica Municipality, around 17 or 18 May 1992, the Vlasenica SJB dismissed Bosnian-Muslim police staff members, as further set out in chapter 4.14.6;

Denial of equal access to public services

(n) in relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, from 12 May 1992 onwards, the local authorities in Kotor Varoš Town, including the Kotor Varoš MUP and Crisis Staff, restricted access to medical care for Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, as further set out in chapter 4.7.6;

Invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes

3420. To the extent that the Trial Chamber has received evidence on the invasion of privacy through the arbitrary searches of homes, it has considered this evidence as part of other alleged crimes, including murder, plunder, forcible transfer, and deportation.

Unlawful arrest

3421. The Trial Chamber has received evidence on unlawful arrest and will consider this as part of its findings on incidents of alleged unlawful detention in chapter 8.9.2(d).

Denial of the right to judicial process

3422. The Trial Chamber has not made any positive factual findings on the denial of the right to judicial process.

3423. The Trial Chamber will now proceed to consider the aforementioned alleged incidents against the applicable law.

3424. Discrimination. The above incidents set out in (a) to (n) were committed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The Trial Chamber recalls that in incident (a), specific restrictions of movement were placed on Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality, including that they could not visit each other, gather in large groups in the street, or bury their dead in the graveyard, while Serbs could move freely. In incidents (b) and (g), Bosnian Muslims were issued passes which they were required to use in order to move around the municipalities of Kalinovik and Vlasenica, or to travel to other municipalities, while this requirement was not imposed on the Serb population. In incident (l), in Sanski Most Municipality Muslim judges and other employees from the municipal court were dismissed and replaced with Serbs. In incident (m), Bosnian-Muslim active and reserve police forces were dismissed whereas Serb police officers and MUP personnel were called back to work.

3425. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the measures described in incidents (a); (e); (h); and (k) took place in connection with unlawful detention as well as forcible transfer and deportation in Banja Luka, Foča, and Prijedor municipalities.<sup>13308</sup> The measures described in incidents (d); (f); (g); (j); (l); (m); (n) took place in connection with destruction as well as forcible transfer and deportation in Kotor Varoš, Sanski Most, and Vlasenica municipalities.<sup>13309</sup> Finally, the incident described in (b) took place in connection with unlawful detention in Kalinovik Municipality and the incidents described in (c) and (i) took place in connection with forcible transfer and deportation in Ključ Municipality.<sup>13310</sup> The Trial Chamber found that the acts of forcible transfer and deportation, destruction, and unlawful detention in these municipalities were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13311</sup>

3426. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (n) were carried out on political, racial, or religious grounds.

3427. Imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures as an underlying act of persecution. In relation to the issue of the gravity of an underlying act of persecution and whether it meets the standard of other crimes under Article 5 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber considers that the above incidents against the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat population did not occur in isolation. These incidents were perpetrated contemporaneously throughout the municipalities of Banja Luka, Foča, Kalinovik, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, Sanski Most and Vlasenica. These incidents were also carried out in conjunction with other underlying acts of persecution, at the same time, and against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in these municipalities. These acts include forcible displacement, unlawful detention, plunder, and the wanton destruction of private and public property. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these incidents listed in (a) to (n) were of equal gravity as other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

3428. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that all of the incidents listed in (a) to (n) constitute imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures as an underlying act of persecution.

3429. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in 8.2 with regard to the general elements and jurisdictional requirement of crimes against humanity.

3430. Status of victims. The Trial Chamber has considered that the incidents set out in (a) to (n) concerned restrictions on movement within the municipalities of Foča, Kalinovik, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, Sanski Most and Vlasenica, and restricted access to medical care in Kotor Varoš Municipality. It also involved dismissals from employment, including from public bodies, in the municipalities of Banja Luka, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, Sanski Most and Vlasenica. In this regard, the nature of these measures indicate that the perpetrators targeted Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats that remained in the towns and villages of these municipalities, rather than those at the front lines. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the only reasonable inference is that the victims of these acts were Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in these municipalities and were, therefore, mostly civilians.

3431. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures listed in (a) to (n), insofar as they concern Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians, constitute an underlying act of persecution as a crime against humanity.

8.10 Genocide

8.10.1 Applicable law

3432. Counts 1 and 2 of the Indictment charge the Accused with genocide, punishable under Article 4(3)(a) of the Statute. The Accused has been charged under Counts 1 and 2 with: (a) killing members of the group; (b) causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; and under Count 1, additionally, with (c) deliberately inflicting on the group, whilst detained, conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction.<sup>13312</sup> The Accused, under Count 1, is charged with committing those prohibited acts against a part of the Bosnian-Muslim and/or Bosnian-Croat national, ethnical and/or religious groups as such.<sup>13313</sup> The Accused, under Count 2, is charged with committing those prohibited acts against a part of the Bosnian-Muslim national, ethnical and/or religious group as such.<sup>13314</sup>

3433. Genocide is defined under Article 4(2) of the Statute to encompass any of certain prohibited acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.

<sup>13317</sup> Seromba Appeal Judgment, para. 46. The Appeal Chamber in Krstić held that 'forcible transfer does not constitute in and of itself a genocidal act'. In some circumstances, however, forcible transfer can be an underlying act that causes serious bodily or mental harm, in particular if the forcible transfer operation was attended by such circumstances as to lead to the death of the whole or part of the displaced population. See Krstić Appeal Judgment, para. 33; Blagojević and Jokić Appeal Judgment, para. 123.

inflicted intentionally.<sup>13318</sup> In relation to (c), the acts may include: systematic expulsion from homes; denial of medical services; and the creation of circumstances that would lead to a slow death, such as lack of proper housing, clothing, and hygiene or excessive work or physical exertion.<sup>13319</sup> The acts under sub-paragraph (c) must be carried out ‘deliberately’.

3435. The mens rea required for genocide is a specific intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such. The term ‘destroy’ is limited to the physical or biological destruction of the group.<sup>13320</sup> Acts which do not fall under the definition of prohibited acts may be considered as evidence of the specific intent of a perpetrator to physically destroy the group.<sup>13321</sup> In assessing specific intent, consideration ought to be given to all of the evidence, taken together instead of considering separately whether an accused intended to destroy a protected group through each of the prohibited acts of genocide.<sup>13322</sup> In relation to JCE I, if the physical perpetrators (who are not JCE members) of the underlying prohibited acts do not possess the required specific intent then the specific intent of an accused and other JCE members, if proved, is sufficient.<sup>13323</sup>

3436. A national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as the protected group under Article 4(2) of the Statute, must be a collection of people with a particular group identity.<sup>13324</sup> The protected group must be defined positively and have unique distinguishing characteristics.<sup>13325</sup>

3437. Where only part of a protected group is targeted that part must constitute a substantial part of that group such that it is significant enough to have an impact on the group as a whole.<sup>13326</sup> In determining substantiality, considerations may include: the

As noted above, the Appeal Chamber in Krstić held that ‘forcible transfer does not constitute in and of itself a genocidal act’. In some cases, however, systematic expulsion from homes, which may amount to forcible transfer, may be a potential means of inflicting conditions of life calculated to bring about destruction. ### 8.10.2 Legal findings

Count 1

3438. According to the Indictment, between 31 March and 31 December 1992, in Foča, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Vlasenica, as the Count 1 municipalities, a campaign of persecutions included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.<sup>13328</sup> The Indictment further alleges that in these municipalities, a significant section of the Bosnian-Muslim and/or Bosnian-Croat groups, namely their leaderships, as well as a substantial number of members of these groups were targeted for destruction.<sup>13329</sup> In chapter 4, the Trial Chamber decided to further consider a number of alleged prohibited acts against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 municipalities in light of the applicable law.

3439. In this section of the judgment, the Trial Chamber will first define the 'protected group' within the meaning of Article 4(2) of the Statute. The Trial Chamber will then turn to the actus reus of genocide, specified in Article 4(2) of the Statute as three underlying prohibited acts, namely: (a) killing members of the group; (b) causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; and (c) deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part.

3440. The Trial Chamber will then assess the mens rea requirement for genocide by considering the specific intent of the physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts. In relation to assessing the specific intent of the physical perpetrators, the Trial Chamber recalls that, where direct evidence of specific intent is absent, the specific intent may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances which may include the commission by physical perpetrators of other culpable acts. Those facts and circumstances may also include connections between physical perpetrators in terms of time, location and composition of their group. This will be analysed further below for the physical perpetrators of prohibited acts in relation to each protected group, Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims, in each of the Count 1 municipalities. Lastly, the Trial Chamber will assess whether the targeted part of the protected group, as alleged, constituted a substantial part of the protected group, in so far as the specific intent of the physical perpetrators is concerned.

3441. In chapter 9.2.14, the Trial Chamber will further consider the specific intent, if any, of the Accused and/or other alleged members of the JCE in light of the totality of the evidence and its findings made on the specific intent of the physical perpetrators in this chapter.

Protected group

3442. The Prosecution alleged, for the purposes of Count 1, that the protected groups are the national, ethnical, and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13330</sup> The Defence does not dispute that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats are protected groups.<sup>13331</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its review of Adjudicated Facts 1, 2, 6, and 12 in chapter 9.2.2 that from 1945 until 1990, Yugoslavia was composed of six Republics: Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, Montenegro, Serbia, and Slovenia.<sup>13332</sup> Certain Republics were populated predominantly by one ethnic group: for example, Serbs in Serbia and Croats in Croatia.<sup>13333</sup> Maršal Tito's post-war government discouraged ethnic division and nationalism with a focus on the unity of the communist state.<sup>13334</sup> Thus, the period from 1945 until 1990 was marked by relative calm and peaceful inter-ethnic relations, although the various groups remained conscious of their separate identities.<sup>13335</sup> Bosnia-Herzegovina, more than any other republic of the former Yugoslavia, was multi-ethnic for centuries, with Serbs, Muslims, and Croats as the predominant nationalities.<sup>13336</sup> A census in April 1991 recorded that 43.7 per cent of the residents of Bosnia-Herzegovina were ethnic Muslims, 32.4 per cent were Serbs, and 17.3 per cent were Croats.<sup>13337</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats are protected groups within the meaning of Article 4 of the Statute.

Actus reus

3443. The Trial Chamber recalls, as noted in chapter 8.10.1, that the crime of genocide is constituted of certain prohibited acts which, in respect of the charges in Count 1, relate to killing members of the protected group, causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the protected group and deliberately inflicting on the protected group, whilst detained, conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction. The Trial Chamber will examine each of these charges below.

3444. In relation to the actus reus of Count 1, the Prosecution argued that the destruction of a group may be pursued in ways that do not result in the death of a large number of people or even a single member of the protected group, in the Count 1 municipalities.<sup>13338</sup> In its final brief, the Prosecution focused on Prijedor Municipality in particular as an example for all of the Count 1 municipalities, highlighting that there were thousands of murders, incidents of serious bodily and mental harm, and subjecting members of the protected group to conditions calculated to destroy.<sup>13339</sup>

3445. Killing members of the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat groups. The Defence contended, specifically in relation to the killings, that the Prosecution failed to prove that the prohibited acts of killing in the Count 1 municipalities were committed as alleged.<sup>13340</sup>

3446. In relation to Foča Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.3.1 Schedules A.2.1, B.5.1 that 46 Bosnian Muslims as well as hundreds of predominantly Bosnian-Muslim detainees at KP Dom Foča were killed and that those killings constituted murder.<sup>13341</sup> In relation to Ključ Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.6.1 Schedules A.3.3, B.8.1 that at least 266 Bosnian Muslims were killed and that those killings constituted murder. In relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.7.1 Schedule A.4.4, unscheduled incidents of 13 June 1992 and 2 July 1992 that at least 185 Bosnian Muslims were killed and that those killings constituted murder. In relation to Prijedor Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.10.1 Schedules A.6.1, A.6.2, A.6.3, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, A.6.9, B.13.1, B.13.2, B.13.3, B.13.4, B.13.5, C.15.3, C.15.5 that: at least 993 Bosnian Muslims as well as at least 536 Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats were killed and that those killings constituted murder. In relation to Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.12.1 Schedules A.7.1, A.7.2, A.7.3, A.7.4, A.7.5 that at least 94 Bosnian Muslims and 9 Bosnian Croats were killed and that those killings constituted murder. In Vlasenica Municipality, the Trial Chamber found in chapters 8.3.2 and 4.14.1 Schedules A.9.1, B.16.1, B.16.2 that at least 169 Bosnian Muslims were killed and that those killings constituted murder.<sup>13342</sup> The Trial Chamber, accordingly, finds that a large number of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats were murdered in the Count 1 municipalities. The Trial Chamber, therefore, rejects the Defence's submissions that the Prosecution failed to prove that prohibited acts of killing in the Count 1 municipalities were committed as alleged.

3447. Causing serious bodily or mental harm to Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat members of the group. In relation to the second underlying prohibited act of genocide, the Trial Chamber recalls that the bodily or mental harm caused must be of such a serious nature as to contribute or tend to contribute to the destruction of the group.<sup>13343</sup> The Defence contended that the Prosecution failed to prove that acts carried out in Foča, Ključ, Prijedor, and Vlasenica Municipalities threatened the destruction of any group in whole or in part, and more specifically, that conditions in the detention facilities set out

<sup>13341</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the killing of one Muslim in June 1993 in Scheduled Incident B.5.1 and the killing of three Bosnian Muslims in the unscheduled incident in early spring 1993 fall outside the temporal scope of Count 1.

<sup>13342</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that these figures are based on an aggregation of a minimum number of those killed as found in chapter 8.3.2. The Trial Chamber observes that murder findings relating to a specific incident may: refer to killings of both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats together without further specificity; relate to hundreds of victims without further specificity; or provide a minimum number of victims or a numerical range for the number of victims. Considering the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is unable to provide a single precise figure on exactly how many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were murdered in the Count 1 municipalities.

in Scheduled Incidents C.6.1, C.6.2, C.6.3, C.6.4, C.6.5, C.10.3, C.15.2, C.15.3, C.15.4, C.15.5, and C.19.3 did not amount to cruel and/or inhumane treatment.<sup>13344</sup>

3448. In relation to Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that no incidents in detention facilities were charged as having caused serious bodily or mental harm. In relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, in chapter 8.9.2 (b) no incidents were found to have constituted cruel and inhumane treatment.<sup>13345</sup> In chapter 8.9.2 (b) the conditions of detention or the treatment of the detained Bosnian Muslims at Bukovica Motel in Foča Municipality were not found to have constituted cruel and inhumane treatment. The Trial Chamber will not consider these incidents further.

3449. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in the chapter on cruel and inhumane treatment as underlying acts of persecution 8.9.2 (b) and its factual findings in chapter 4.6.2, Schedule C.10.3, unscheduled incidents at Sanica School and Sitnica School.

3450. Regarding the treatment of detainees in Ključ Municipality, the Trial Chamber found that at Sanica School Bosnian-Muslim detainees were being escorted at gunpoint and were not fed. At Velagići Elementary School in Ključ Municipality on 1 June 1992, detainees were kept in one room and were beaten, threatened, and harassed before being killed. At Sitnica School in Ključ Municipality, detainees were beaten and interrogated from 3 until 7 June 1992, and only received a small sandwich after being detained for four days. While the Trial Chamber found that these acts caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury to the detainees, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that these acts, even in conjunction with the limited food provided to the detainees, were of such a serious nature as to contribute, or tend to contribute, to the destruction of the protected groups. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber will not further consider the incidents at Sanica School, Sitnica School, and Velagići Elementary School for the purposes of Count 1 of the Indictment.

3451. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (b) and its factual findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedules C.6.1, C.6.2, C.6.3, C.6.4, C.6.5 and 4.14.2 Schedule C.19.3, and unscheduled incident at Vlasenica Secondary School that Bosnian Muslims detained in Foča and Vlasenica Municipalities, namely at KP Dom Foča,<sup>13346</sup> Janjić's apartment,<sup>13347</sup> 'Karaman's house', the Worker's Huts in Buk Bijela, Partizan Hall, Foča High School and elsewhere in Foča, Sušica camp, and Vlasenica Secondary School were subjected to acts which caused serious mental and physical suffering and injury. The Trial Chamber made the same legal finding in chapter 8.9.2 (b) in relation to its factual findings in chapters 4.6.2 unscheduled incident at Sitnica School and 4.10.2 Schedules C.15.2, C.15.3, C.15.4, C.15.5 for Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats detained in Miška Glava Dom and in Omarska, Keraterm and Trnopolje camps in Prijedor Municipality. The Trial Chamber considers that the brutality of the harm suffered by these Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats had a long-lasting, devastating, physical and mental impact on the victims who survived, which gravely affected their ability to lead normal and constructive lives. Other victims, who were later killed, suffered before facing their deaths. Having regard to the treatment of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats described in the findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedules C.6.1, C.6.2, C.6.3, C.6.4, C.6.5, 4.6.2 Schedule C.10.3, unscheduled incident at Sitnica School, 4.10.2 Schedules C.15.2, C.15.3, C.15.4, C.15.5 and 4.15.2 Schedule C.19.3, unscheduled incident at Vlasenica Secondary School and the legal finding in chapter 8.9.2 (b), the Trial Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims in Foča, Prijedor, and Vlasenica Municipalities and Bosnian Croats in Prijedor Municipality were subjected to serious bodily or mental harm and that this harm contributed to the destruction of the protected groups. The Trial Chamber, therefore, rejects the Defence's submissions that the Prosecution failed to prove that prohibited acts causing serious bodily or mental harm in the Count 1 municipalities were committed as alleged.

3452. Deliberately inflicting on Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction of those groups in whole or in part. The Defence argued that the alleged acts of deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction in whole or in part cannot be established.<sup>13348</sup> In particular, the Defence submitted that conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction in whole or in part of the Bosnian

<sup>13347</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.2 that a Bosnian-Muslim woman was raped at a Serb soldier's apartment from August 1992 to July 1993. For the purposes of Count 1 of the Indictment, the Trial Chamber has not considered acts beyond 31 December 1992.

Muslims and Bosnian Croats were not inflicted on these groups in the detention facilities set out in Scheduled Incidents C.6.1, C.6.2, C.6.3, C.6.4, C.6.5, C.10.3, C.15.2, C.15.3, C.15.4, C.15.5, and C.19.3.<sup>13349</sup>

3453. The Trial Chamber recalls that when the same prohibited acts are charged under both Article 4(2)(b) and Article 4(2)(c), a chamber will consider whether these alleged acts amount to conditions calculated to bring about physical destruction only when it does not find them to amount to 'causing serious bodily or mental harm'.<sup>13350</sup> The Trial Chamber, therefore has only considered prohibited acts under Article 4(2)(c) which are not found to have met the test under Article 4(2)(b) above. The Trial Chamber recalls that Article 4(2)(c) relates to those prohibited acts which do not immediately kill the members of a protected group, but which ultimately seek their physical destruction.<sup>13351</sup> Such acts include the imposition of inhumane living conditions, forced labour, and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.<sup>13352</sup>

3454. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (b) and, its factual findings in chapter 4.6.2 Schedule C.10.3, unscheduled incidents at Sanica School and Sitnica School. Based on the evidence before it, regarding the conditions of detention at Sanica School, Sitnica School, and Velagići Elementary School, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the conditions imposed at these facilities demonstrate that the perpetrators involved intended to deliberately inflict conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction of the protected groups.

3455. In the foregoing paragraphs, the Trial Chamber has addressed the Defence's submissions that conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction in whole or in part of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were not inflicted on these groups in certain detention facilities as alleged.

Mens rea - factors considered for the intent of physical perpetrators to destroy Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, in part, as such

3456. The Prosecution argued that the specific intent of the perpetrators is revealed both by the concerted attack on the very foundation and fabric of the protected group to prevent it from continued existence in the Count 1 municipalities through the prohibited acts and other culpable acts, as well as by direct evidence of intent found in the statements of Mladić, Karadžić, and other members of the alleged JCE.<sup>13353</sup> It submitted that in the Count 1 municipalities, the number and nature of the crimes, considered together, reflected an intention to destroy the groups in part rather than an intention just to ‘ethnically cleanse’ Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13354</sup> The Defence argued that Count 1 is defective as it does ‘not disclose the crime of genocide’. It submitted that while Count 1 alleges a discriminatory approach to killings, there is nothing to suggest the physical destruction of the ‘national group’ as opposed to its cultural or functional destruction.<sup>13355</sup>

3457. The Trial Chamber recalls Appeals Chamber jurisprudence that where direct evidence of specific intent is absent, the specific intent may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances which may include: the general context; the perpetration of other culpable acts systematically directed against the same group; the scale of the atrocities committed; the systematic targeting of victims on account of their membership in a particular group; proof of the mental state with respect to the commission of the underlying acts; the repetition of destructive and discriminatory acts; or the existence of a plan or policy.<sup>13356</sup> The collective scale of the atrocities in the Count 1 municipalities, comprising of prohibited acts and other culpable acts, is vast. The prohibited acts were committed by a myriad of physical perpetrators in each individual Count 1 municipality. Therefore, the Trial Chamber considers that to be able to draw inferences, on whether the physical perpetrators committed the prohibited acts with the requisite specific intent, its inquiry should proceed as follows. The Trial Chamber will assess the surrounding facts and circumstances in respect of physical perpetrators of prohibited acts in a municipality. In this context, the Trial Chamber will consider whether there were any connections between physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts in terms of time, place or their membership of a group in a particular incident or in other incidents in that municipality, such that an intent to destroy a protected group can be inferred from their collective prohibited acts. The Trial Chamber will also consider whether the physical perpetrators of prohibited acts participated in other culpable acts which could indicate an intent to destroy a part of the protected group. Before setting out its findings on the specific intent of the physical perpetrators, the Trial Chamber, for each protected group in each Count 1 municipality, will discuss the foregoing. The Trial Chamber will consider the specific intent, if any, of the Accused and other alleged JCE members in chapter 9.2.14 in light of the totality of the evidence and the findings made on the specific intent of the physical perpetrators.

3458. Bosnian Croats in Foča, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, and Vlasenica Municipalities. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has not established that Bosnian Croats were the victims of prohibited acts in Foča, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, and Vlasenica municipalities. The Trial Chamber will, therefore, consider the surrounding facts and circumstances in which Bosnian Muslims in Foča, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, and Vlasenica Municipalities were the victims of prohibited acts before discussing the surrounding circumstances in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were the victims of prohibited acts in Prijedor and Sanski Most Municipalities.

3459. Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 8.9.2 (b) regarding Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality. The Trial Chamber found for Schedule A.2.1 that in early July 1992, local Serb soldiers, led by Gojko Janković and including Radomir Kovač a.k.a. Klamfa, Janko Janjić a.k.a. Tuta, Slavo Ivanović a.k.a. Jazavac, Dragan Zelenović a.k.a. Zelja, and Visco Miletić killed ten Bosnian-Muslim civilians in the village of Mješaja/Trošanj. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a) the Trial Chamber could not find that these perpetrators intended to kill on a mass scale, but that they carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber found that between June and August 1992, some of these perpetrators, namely Gojko Janković,<sup>13357</sup> Radomir Kovač,<sup>13358</sup> Janko Janjić,<sup>13359</sup> Slavo Ivanović,<sup>13360</sup> and Dragan Zelenović,<sup>13361</sup> subjected Bosnian Muslims in multiple detention facilities to acts causing serious bodily and mental harm, with acts at KP Dom Foča continuing beyond 1992. Between June and August 1992, Dragoljub Kunarac a.k.a. Žaga,<sup>13362</sup> Dragan Gagović,<sup>13363</sup> Radovan Stanković,<sup>13364</sup> who were not found to have been involved in killings, subjected Bosnian Muslims in multiple detention facilities to conditions constituting serious bodily and mental harm. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (b) that these perpetrators subjected Bosnian Muslims to cruel and/or inhumane treatment on political, racial or religious grounds, whilst unlawfully detaining these victims also on political, racial or religious grounds.

3460. The Trial Chamber refers to its finding in chapter 3.1.2 that Marko Kovač, Commander of the VRS Foča Tactical Group, was the superior officer with the following directly subordinated to him: Gojko Janković and Janko Janjić a.k.a. Tuta who had their own sub-units; Brane Ćosović who had his own unit; and Dragoljub Kunarac's who was the head of a Detachment. Radomir Kovač a.k.a. Klamfa and Dragan Zelenović a.k.a. Zelja were subordinates to Janko Janjić and Brane Ćosović respectively. Dragoljub Kunarac's Detachment engaged in operations together with the Elez Battalion, also known as the Miljevina Battalion, commanded by Pero Elez. Radovan Stanković was one of Elez's men.

3461. In addition, the Trial Chamber found, in Scheduled Incident B.5.1, that in the second half of 1992, Gojko Janković, Janko Janjić a.k.a. Tuta, Predrag Trivun a.k.a. Pedo, Nikola Brčić, Neđo Samardžić, Dragan Zelenović a.k.a. Zelja, Pero Elez, and Zoran Samardžić, alongside other perpetrators, murdered hundreds of Bosnian Muslims, who were civilians or combatants placed hors de combat, at KP Dom Foča. The Trial Chamber also found that Zoran Samardžić, as Commander of the Miljevina Military Police, was subordinated to Pero Elez. Predrag Trivun a.k.a. Pedo or Pedolino who commanded part of the Miljevina Battallion was also subordinated to Pero Elez. The Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of this incident intended to kill on a mass scale in the same murder operation with the killing of 36 Bosnian-Muslim detainees in June and July 1992 in Scheduled Incident B.5.1 and carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds. Predrag Trivun and Zoran Samardžić, who had both committed prohibited acts in the second half of 1992, also killed a Bosnian-Muslim doctor in June 1993, by suspending him by his legs, lighting a fire under his head, and beating him for four hours until he died.<sup>13365</sup> The Trial Chamber further found that Pero Elez Neđo Samardžić, Zoran Samardžić, and Radovan Stanković subjected Bosnian Muslims to cruel and inhumane treatment at two detention facilities, which was discriminatory.<sup>13366</sup>

3462. The Trial Chamber found in an unscheduled incident in early spring of 1993 that Neđo Samardžić and Nikola Brčić, upon the order of Marko Kovač, Commander of the Tactical Group in Foča, shot and killed three elderly Bosnian-Muslim women in Foča Municipality in Kovač's presence. The Trial Chamber recalls 8.9.2 (a) that the killing was on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.9.2 (b) and 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1 that Marko Kovač was responsible for the detentions at KP Dom Foča and that Milorad Krnojelac, among others, was responsible for the conditions which caused serious bodily and mental harm there. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.9.2 (b) and 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.2 that from early August 1992, Neđo Samardžić, Zoran Samardžić, Radovan Stanković, and Nikola Brčić, a.k.a. Rodzo, raped women and girls at Karaman's house and subjected them to conditions constituting serious bodily and mental harm that were discriminatory.

3463. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.3.3 that villages were attacked until early June 1992 and, once secured, Serb forces – the military, the police, the paramilitaries, and sometimes Serb villagers – burned down Muslim houses and apartments. In one instance, around 5 August 1992, Dragoljub Kunarac's a.k.a. Žaga's men destroyed a Muslim sacred site in Foča Town. The Trial Chamber also notes its finding above that Dragoljub Kunarac, a.k.a. Žaga, inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on detainees at three detention facilities.<sup>13367</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.9.2 (g) that the destruction of houses and apartments was committed on a discriminatory basis. The Trial Chamber also found in chapter 4.3.7 that, beginning in mid-June 1992, the Serb forces – the military, the police, the paramilitaries and, sometimes, also Serb villagers – participated in a pattern of acts, including burning homes belonging to Bosnian Muslims, rounding up Bosnian Muslims and killing them, which caused surviving Bosnian Muslims to leave the municipality from July until 13 August 1992. Civilian and military authorities, including the Foča War Commission, arranged transportation of individuals leaving the municipality. From 26 June 1992 to December 1992, other Bosnian Muslims were taken from their places of detention, including KP Dom Foča, to other parts of the country or abroad by a number of perpetrators, including ‘chetniks’ utilizing police cars upon directions from Gojko Janković and Pedro Gašević, and ‘chetniks’ wearing SMB uniforms. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.9.2(c) that the Bosnian Muslims were forcibly transferred or deported on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber further notes its finding above that Gojko Janković killed Bosnian Muslims and inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Muslims at two detention facilities. The Trial Chamber also found in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that Serb soldiers and police restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality from 12 May to July 1992.

3464. The Trial Chamber observes that Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts, including killings, detention, cruel and inhumane treatment, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation. These acts against Bosnian Muslims were committed mainly between June and August 1992, and at times beyond August 1992 to December 1992. The majority of these killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, destructions, unlawful detentions, inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

3465. Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.3.2 regarding Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality. In early June 1992, members of the VRS killed at least 77 Bosnian-Muslim men at Velagići School, and on 10 July 1992, VRS soldiers, military police, and reserve police members killed at least 189 Bosnian-Muslim detainees, including women, elderly men, and one baby in Biljani. The killings in Biljani took place in the context of a mopping up operation per orders from Drago Samardžija, Commander of the VRS 17th Light Infantry Brigade. Mile Pešević, a Serb soldier, was present before the killings. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of both incidents intended to kill on a mass scale and carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds.

3466. In chapter 8.9.2 (b), the Trial Chamber found that on 1 June 1992, members of the VRS, subjected Bosnian Muslims to cruel and/or inhumane treatment at the Velagići Elementary School. Members of the military police, including Mile Petrović and Ratko Samac, searched and assaulted detainees upon arrival at the school. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (b) that the perpetrators carried out these acts on political, racial or religious grounds, while unlawfully detaining these victims also on political, racial or religious grounds. Furthermore, from 1 June to about 7 June 1992, policemen from Ključ, including Duško Pavlović, reserve police officers and the commander of the Sanica police, Milan Tomić, unlawfully detained Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats at Sitnica School, and subjected them to cruel and/or inhumane treatment in a discriminatory manner. The Trial Chamber was unable to determine the precise affiliation of the physical perpetrators who caused serious bodily or mental harm.

3467. The Trial Chamber refers to its findings in chapter 4.6.3 that (i) Serb forces completely destroyed or heavily damaged around 3,500 Muslim-owned houses in the municipality between June and mid-July 1992; (ii) during attacks against Pudín-Han and the Muslim village of Hadžići by a VRS battalion and other units between 28 and 31 May 1992, all houses in Gornji Hadžići were destroyed; (iii) during the same attacks, local Serbs and the VRS blew up one Muslim sacred site, the Pudín Han-Velagići mosque; (iv) on or about 28 May 1992, local Serbs and the VRS destroyed four Muslim sacred sites; (v) Serb forces destroyed with explosives two sacred sites, the Ključ Catholic Church and the Atik Mosque, in Ključ Town in 1992; and (vi) on or around 10 July 1992, following the shelling of Biljani, Bosnian-Serb forces set houses on fire and burned one Muslim sacred site, Biljani-Džaferagići mosque, and then razed its ruins with explosives. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.9.2 (g) that these acts of destruction were carried out on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims.

3468. The Trial Chamber also established in chapter 4.6.7 that most Bosnian Muslims had left the municipality by the summer of 1992 out of fear because of unbearable circumstances. These circumstances included provocations, looting, thefts, shooting, torching of property, and killings. Departing convoys were organized by both the Civilian Protection Department of the Ključ Municipal Assembly and the police, and were generally escorted by the police to territory under the control of Muslims and Croats. At the departure point for convoys, Bosnian-Serb local police and the VRS checked lists of who paid what was demanded of them and who signed over their property. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.5.2 that the Bosnian Muslims were forcibly transferred on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber also found in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that Serbs, Serb police, and the Ključ Municipal Assembly restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in Ključ from 12 May 1992, and that Serb authorities also dismissed Bosnian Muslims from their jobs including at public bodies.

3469. The Trial Chamber observes that Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts, including killings, unlawful detention, cruel and inhumane treatment, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation. The prohibited and other culpable acts against Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality were committed within a relatively short period of time, between 12 May 1992 and mid-July 1992. By the summer of 1992 there were few Bosnian Muslims left in the municipality. The majority of these killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, destructions, unlawful detentions and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

3470. Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.3.2 regarding Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.4.4, the Trial Chamber found that members of the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade killed approximately 150 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men at Grabovica School on 4 November 1992 while these members were under the command of Dušan Novaković, Commander of the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade. The Trial Chamber also found in chapter 9.2.10 that pursuant to a verbal order from Duško Kerezović, members of the Sanitation Unit, with the help of 20 soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units, and Nedeljko Đekanović, the President of the Kotor Varoš War Presidency made efforts to conceal the murder at Grabovica School from the international community.

3471. The Trial Chamber also found that Bosnian Muslims were killed in the following instances: on 13 June 1992 in Hrvačani by Serb military forces; on 2 July 1992 by military forces under the command of Slobodan Župljanin and Saša Petrović, or members of the Banja Luka CSB Special Police Detachment. The Trial Chamber found in chapters 4.7.1 and 3 that Slobodan Župljanin was the 2nd Infantry Battalion Commander of the VRS 22nd Brigade which was part of the 1KK. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 9.2.10 that Duško Kerezović, acting pursuant to orders from Sretko Majstorović, the Minister of War for Kotor Varoš, and members of the Sanitation Unit made efforts to conceal the murder from the public. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of the incidents on 13 June 1992 and 2 July 1992 intended to kill on a mass scale and carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds. In chapter 8.9.2 (f), the Trial Chamber found that the appropriation of money and valuables by VRS members from Bosnian-Muslim detainees in a field near Grabovica was a crime and was carried out on political, racial or religious grounds.

3472. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.7.3 that in mid-1992, including in May and June 1992, Bosnian-Serb forces, including the police, the VRS, and the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade, destroyed many houses of Bosnian Muslims as well as the Hanifići and Hrvačani mosques. In 1992, the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade and the special police unit of CSB Banja Luka, as well as various police forces from Kotor Varoš and Banja Luka, also destroyed the old and new mosques in Večići, Vrbanjci mosque, and blew up the Shrine of the Three Brothers in Večići. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.9.2 (g) that these acts of destruction were carried out on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.7.7 that between June and November 1992, Bosnian Muslims left the municipality in convoys and that some were made to leave and others registered to leave because of their living conditions. The forces attacking the municipality consisted of VRS units, police, and the special police unit of CSB Banja Luka. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.5.2 that the Bosnian Muslims were forcibly transferred on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber also refers to its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that the VRS and the local authorities in Kotor Varoš Municipality, including the MUP and the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, imposed restrictive and discriminatory measures upon Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš from 12 May 1992 onwards.

3473. The Trial Chamber observes that Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts, including killings, destruction of property, plunder and appropriation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation. Bosnian Muslims were attacked in Kotor Varoš Municipality from at least May to November 1992. The majority of these killings, destructions, inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

3474. Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 8.9.2 (b) regarding Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality. In relation to Scheduled Incident B.16.1, the Trial Chamber found that in June and July 1992, Dragan Nikolić and Goran Tešić, both members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP and Mićo Kraljević's special police platoon of Vlasenica SJB, killed eight Bosnian Muslims at Sušica camp, either through shooting or severe mistreatment. The Trial Chamber also found that one victim was killed by these men or local policemen. In chapter 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that the physical perpetrators carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds. Both Dragan Nikolić, camp commander in charge of security matters and daily operations, and Goran Tešić, alongside other perpetrators, subjected Bosnian Muslims to acts at Sušica camp (Scheduled Incident C.19.3), between 31 May 1992 and 30 September 1992, which were found in this chapter (above) to constitute serious bodily and mental harm.<sup>13368</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (b) and (d) that the physical perpetrators carried out these acts on political, racial or religious grounds, whilst unlawfully detaining these victims also on political, racial or religious grounds. The other perpetrators at Sušica camp were: Veljko Bašić, a former policeman mobilized into Vlasenica SJB; the Vlasenica Crisis Staff and guards, consisting of members of the VRS and the MUP; other police officers; Goran a.k.a. Vjetar; and Đuro. The Vlasenica Crisis Staff were also involved in other culpable acts, as recalled below.

3476. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.9.1, the Trial Chamber found that members of Kraljević's unit supported by VRS members killed Bosnian Muslims on 2 June 1992 in Drum in the context of a wider operation in Vlasenica Municipality. Kraljević's unit was formally under TO command but operationally under the command of Vlasenica SJB at the time (until some time in June when it was also formally attached to the SJB). For Scheduled Incident B.16.2, the Trial Chamber found that MUP officers, upon the order of Mane Đurić, Head of the Vlasenica SJB as of 20 May 1992, removed 140-150 Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Susica camp and killed them on 30 September 1992. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of Scheduled Incident A.9.1 intended to kill on a mass scale and that the perpetrators of both Scheduled Incidents A.9.1 and B.16.2 carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds.

3477. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.14.3 that: (i) on 30 or 31 May 1992 and 2 June 1992 a VRS unit acting on the orders of Kraljević and police officers from the Vlasenica SJB, destroyed houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims during the two Gradina operations. This was particularly the case in Gradina itself and its surrounding villages such as Barice and Piskavice, a mixed Serb and Muslim village; and (ii) in August 1992, a VRS unit destroyed the Vlasenica Town Mosque. The Trial Chamber found in 8.9.2 (g) that these acts of destruction were carried out on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims. The Trial Chamber established in chapter 4.14.7 that Bosnian Muslims did not feel their lives were secure in Vlasenica Municipality and that, by August 1992, almost all Bosnian Muslims had left the municipality. The Trial Chamber also recalls that in May and June 1992, Kraljević, under the command of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, led the Vlasenica SJB special police platoon, supported by a VRS unit, to take over Gradina, Sušica and other Bosnian-Muslim hamlets and sent women and children to Vlasenica town. Kraljević ordered the SJB special police platoon to torch all Bosnian-Muslim houses in order to prevent owners from returning. Following the Serb forces' 1992 take-over of 16 Muslim villages in Vlasenica Municipality, including Drum, Piskavice, Gradina, Zaklopača, and Turalići, no non-Serb inhabitants remained in those villages; those that survived either escaped or were taken to Sušica camp. Between June and August 1992, a large number of women, children, and elderly men were transferred from Sušica camp to Kladanj or Cerska by Serb police or military. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.9.2 (c) that the Bosnian Muslims were forcibly transferred on political, racial or religious grounds.

3478. The Trial Chamber also found in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that there were restrictive and discriminatory measures imposed upon Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality as acts of persecution. The perpetrators of these acts included: members of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, headed by Milenko Stanić, who restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality from 19 May 1992; and members of the Vlasenica SJB who dismissed Bosnian-Muslim police staff around 17 or 18 May 1992. In chapter 8.9.2 (f), the Trial Chamber found that: (i) in June 1992, members of Kraljević's unit took televisions and other property from Bosnian-Muslim residences in Vlasenica Town; and (ii) in early June 1992, at Sušica camp, possessions were taken from Bosnian-Muslim detainees following an order from Dragan Nikolić, and guards stripped more than 800 Bosnian-Muslim women of their valuables. The Trial Chamber found that these acts were crimes and were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds.

3479. The Trial Chamber observes that Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts, including killings, detention, cruel and inhumane treatment, destruction of property, plunder and appropriation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation. Bosnian Muslims were attacked in Vlasenica Municipality between May and September 1992. The majority of these killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, destructions, unlawful detentions, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

3480. Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.3.2 and 8.9.2 (b) regarding Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality. In Scheduled Incident A.6.1, the Trial

Chamber found that from 24 until around 26 May 1992, a range of perpetrators, attacked the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim town of Kozarac and its surrounding Bosnian-Muslim villages through shelling and infantry advances, killing Bosnian Muslims. The perpetrators included VRS units of the Banja Luka Corps, commanded by Talić, including the 343rd Mechanised Brigade, later known as the 43rd Motorised Brigade commanded by Vladimir Arsić and, his deputy, Radmilo Zeljaja. In addition, Duško Tadić, Andžić's paramilitaries, members of the 5th Kozara Brigade, the 6th Krajina Brigade commanded by Branko Basara including a platoon under the command of Macola, as well as the Crni Đorđe intervention platoon, a scouts platoon, a police platoon and the Serb police from Prijedor, headed by Simo Drljača, participated in the attack. The Trial Chamber found that all the paramilitary units which took part in the attack on Kozarac were part of the VRS in May 1992 for the purpose of this attack.

3481. In relation to Scheduled Incident A.6.2, Mićo Jursić and Jevo Maseldžija, both Serb police officers, along with four other men killed two Bosnian Muslims on 1 July 1992.

3482. In Scheduled Incident A.6.3, the Trial Chamber found that the same forces that attacked Kozarac in late May 1992 attacked the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim village of Kamičani and entered the basement of Mehmed Šahorić's house, where they killed nine Bosnian Muslims who were hiding. Eight of the victims were found in civilian clothing and six of the victims were over the age of 60.

3483. In Scheduled Incident A.6.4, the Trial Chamber found that Duško Tadić and the uniformed soldiers who were with him killed Bosnian Muslims on 14 June 1992 in Jaskići. The Trial Chamber recalls from chapter 4.10.1 Schedule A.6.4 that the attack on Jaskići on 14 June 1992 was part of an attack in the areas of Kozarac village, Prijedor, and Sanski Most. It further recalls that the killings in Jaskići were perpetrated by members of the same forces that attacked Kozarac in late May 1992. The Trial Chamber recalls from chapter 4.10.1 Schedule A.6.1 that in February or March 1992, Radmilo Zeljaja, Deputy Commander of the 43rd Motorized Brigade, said that 'he was going to level Kozarac because they were preparing a defence'. Similarly, during a meeting with SDA leaders in May 1992, Zeljaja had threatened to 'raze Kozarac to the ground' if they would not surrender several thousand pieces of weaponry within 48 hours. When the SDA leaders pleaded that there was not much weaponry to surrender, Zeljaja responded that this was their problem.

3484. In Scheduled Incident A.6.5, between 1 and 23 July 1992, including during and immediately after they had attacked the Brdo area, members of the Bosnian-Serb military and police, including Velimir Đurić, Zoran Babić, Dragomir Soldat, Goran Gruban, Mićo Jurusić, Vinko Panić, killed Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat civilians in Čarakovo. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 3.1.2 that Goran Gruban was a member of the 43rd Motorized Brigade. In Scheduled Incident A.6.6, on 20 July 1992 Bosnian-Muslim men were killed in Biščani, Čemernica, Mrkalji and Hegići by Bosnian-Serb soldiers including Gligić who belonged to a group which was commanded by Rade Bilbija. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence in chapter 3.1.2 that Rade Bilbija was a battalion commander of the 43rd Motorised Brigade. It further recalls that members of the 43rd Motorised Brigade's Logistics Battalion were ordered to collect bodies in Brdo and Biščani and clean the areas.

3485. In Scheduled Incident A.6.9, on 24 and 25 July 1992, the VRS, comprising members of the 6th Krajina Brigade under the command of Colonel Basara and the 5th Kozara Brigade, killed at least 68 people who were mainly Bosnian Croats.

3486. In Scheduled Incidents A.6.7 and A.6.8, on 25 July 1992, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were killed by Bosnian-Serb soldiers including a VRS military police officer, and police, including a MUP policeman called Stiven. The Trial Chamber could not establish precise affiliations to units or brigades for these physical perpetrators.

3487. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of Scheduled Incidents A.6.1, A.6.3, A.6.4, A.6.5, and A.6.9 intended to kill on a mass scale and carried out these killings on political, racial or religious grounds. In Scheduled Incident A.6.2, the Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators did not intend to kill on a mass scale or on political, racial or religious grounds.

3488. In Scheduled Incidents C.15.2, C.15.3, and C.15.4, the Trial Chamber found that the Prijedor Crisis Staff established the Trnopolje, Omarska, and Keraterm camps. The Trial Chamber also found that, among others, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, the SJB and the VRS detained people and were responsible for the conditions at the camps.

3489. In Scheduled Incident C.15.2, at Omarska, perpetrators who caused serious bodily or mental harm included Milutin Popović a.k.a. Pop, Žarko Marmat, Miroslav Zorić, Ranko Mijić, Dušan Knežević a.k.a. Duca, Zoran Žigić, Mirvan, Mlađo Radić a.k.a. Krkan, Momir Gruban a.k.a. Čkalja, Milojica Kos a.k.a. Krle, and Miroslav Kvočka. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence in chapter 3.1.2 that Dušan Knežević and Zoran Žigić were members of the reconnaissance and sabotage unit of the 43rd Motorized Brigade. Mlađo Radić a.k.a. Krkan, raped and sexually assaulted female detainees.

3490. In Scheduled Incident C.15.3, at Keraterm, perpetrators who caused serious bodily or mental harm included Duško Sikirica who served as the camp commander. Other perpetrators included members of the Banja Luka CSB, Banja Luka Corps / 1KK, 'Čupo' Banović, Dragan Kondić, Zoran Žigić, and guards working on the shift led by 'Kole', Dušan Knežević a.k.a. 'Duča', and Nedeljko Timarac. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence in chapter 3.1.2 that Dušan Knežević and Zoran Žigić were members of the reconnaissance and sabotage unit of the 43rd Motorized Brigade.

3491. In Scheduled Incident C.15.4, at Trnopolje, perpetrators who caused serious bodily or mental harm included Slobodan Kuruzović, who was the camp commander and Slavko Puhalić, his deputy. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence described in chapter 3.1.2 that Slobodan Kuruzović and Slavko Puhalić were members of the 43rd Motorized Brigade. Other perpetrators at Trnopolje included Darko Mrđa, Mladen Mitrović, Mirijan Mitrović, a man named Stojanović a.k.a. Zemunac, Dragoja Čavić, Dragan Škrbić, Stojan Madžar a.k.a. Stole, Branko Topola, soldiers named Mile and Deba, and Zoran Žigić. VRS soldiers came from outside with the assistance of Kuruzović to rape and sexually assault detainees. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence in chapter 3.1.2 that Zoran Žigić, Dragan Škrbić, and Stojan Madžar were members of the reconnaissance and sabotage unit of the 43rd Motorized Brigade.

3492. In Scheduled Incident C.15.5, the perpetrators who caused serious bodily or mental harm included members of the Miška Glava TO. In Scheduled Incident C.15.3, the Prijedor SJB, among other perpetrators, inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims at Keraterm camp from 25 May until at least 5 August 1992. In Scheduled Incident C.15.2, members of the SJB inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims at Omarska camp between 27 May and 16 August 1992, but the Trial Chamber was unable to determine whether these members belonged to the Prijedor SJB or another SJB. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 8.9.2 (b) that the perpetrators, including members of the Prijedor Crisis Staff, who inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in the detention facilities carried out these acts on political, racial or religious grounds, whilst unlawfully detaining these victims also on political, racial or religious grounds.<sup>13369</sup>

3493. With regard to killings in detention settings in Prijedor Municipality, the Trial Chamber made the following findings. In Scheduled Incident B.13.1, on or around 25 July 1992 camp guards and VRS soldiers killed between 190 and 220 detainees in Keraterm camp after corralling them in Room 3. In Scheduled Incident C.15.3, during the night of 2 to 3 July 1992, camp guards at Keraterm killed a detainee. In Scheduled Incident B.13.2, camp guards killed detainees at Omarska camp. In Scheduled Incident B.13.3, on 5 August 1992, unidentified Bosnian Serbs killed at least 126 detainees from Omarska and Keraterm camps and in Scheduled Incident B.13.4, in the second half of July 1992, camp guards from Omarska killed approximately between 100 and 180 detainees from Omarska camp. In Scheduled Incident B.13.5, camp guards and soldiers killed detainees at Trnopolje camp. The Trial Chamber observes that the camp guards who committed these murders were the same group of camp guards who caused serious bodily and mental harm to detainees. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that all of the killings in the detention centres, other than B.13.3, were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds. The perpetrators of Scheduled Incidents B.13.1, B.13.3, and B.13.4 also intended to kill on a mass scale.

3494. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.10.3 that (i) on 23 and 26 May 1992 and continuing until 23 July 1992, during the attack on the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim villages of Hambarine, Biščani, Čarakovo, Kevljani and Kamičani the VRS, including the 5th Kozara Brigade, acting jointly with police and paramilitary groups shelled and burned houses in those areas. They destroyed the old mosque in Hambarine, the Kamičani mosque, the Biščani mosque, the Čarakovo mosque, and the new mosque in Kevljani. The perpetrators included Velimir Đurik a.k.a. Velja, Zoran Babić a.k.a. Babin, Goran Gruban, and Dragomir Soldat a.k.a. Čiča (ii) in mid-1992, Bosnian-Serb forces set fire to houses in the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim village of Kozaruša, and on the same day, Radovan Zdjelar, pursuant to instructions received from Radiša Ljesnjak, a member of the Crisis Staff destroyed houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims in Kozaruša; (iii) on 24 May 1992, Bosnian-Serb fighters in JNA uniforms with 'Tito caps', led by Savan Končar, a Bosnian-Serb from Kozaruša set fire to the Kozaruša mosque and the Kozaruša mekteb; (iv) on 20 July 1992, Bosnian-Serb forces, consisting of military and police, set fire to houses during the onslaught on the Brdo area in the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim villages of Rakovčani and Rizvanovići and destroyed the Rakovčani, Rizvanovići and Ravine mosques; (v) on 30 May 1992, a number of perpetrators set fire to houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims as well as the Čaršijka mosque in Prijedor Town during the attack on Prijedor Town by the 5th Kozara Brigade, commanded by Pero Colić, the 43rd Motorized Brigade, commanded by Arsić and Zeljaja, and some members of the 6th Krajina Brigade, the Prijedor police led by Simo Drljača, Dule Janković, Milutin Cadzo, and a group called the 'Spare Ribs', and people from Bosanski Novi. The perpetrators included a group of men, including Milenko Milić, a member of Milan Andžić's paramilitary unit, his Commander Momčilo Radanović a.k.a. Cigo, and Milorad Vokić, Simo Drljača's personal bodyguard. The perpetrators also destroyed the old mosque in Stari Grad, the archive and library of the Medžlis of the Islamic Community in Prijedor Town, as well as the Zagrad mosque in the Bereg part of Prijedor Town. Following the destruction, the Zagrad mosque's remains as well as old Muslim gravestones in an adjacent cemetery were levelled with a bulldozer and removed by the same perpetrators; (vi) Radovan Zdjelar, pursuant to instructions received from Radiša Ljesnjak, a member of the Crisis Staff, destroyed Muslim homes in the old area of Prijedor Town and in the border area of Prijedor shortly after the conflict in Prijedor had started; (vii) at the end of August 1992, Serbs destroyed the Donja Puharska mosque in Prijedor Town, three houses in the immediate vicinity of the mosque and damaged a dozen other houses; (viii) only a few minutes after the Donja Puharska mosque's destruction, Bosnian-Serb soldiers destroyed the Roman Catholic church in Prijedor Town; (ix) between 24 May and July 1992, the VRS, acting jointly with the police and paramilitary forces burned houses in Muslim villages and neighbourhoods in the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat villages of Kozarac and Ljubija and their surrounding areas, including Hrnići, Jakupovići, and Koncari. The perpetrators also destroyed the medical clinic in Kozarac, the Mutnik mosque in Kozarac, the Hrnići mosque, the Srednji and Gornji mosques in Jakupovići, and the church and the mosque in Ljubija; (x) Serb infantry destroyed the village of Mujkanovići and caused heavy damage to the Mujkanovići mosque; (xi) Bosnian-Serb military, including soldiers in JNA uniforms with red ribbons around their arms, helmets and subara hats, acting jointly with the police, paramilitary groups, the 5th Kozara Brigade and the 6th Krajina Brigade (led by Basara and Veljko Brajić) shelled and set fire to 68 houses belonging to Bosnian Croats in the predominantly Bosnian-Croat village of Briševo and destroyed the Roman Catholic church in Briševo; and (xii) on or around 26 December 1992, Serb forces destroyed the Roman Catholic parish church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in Šurkovac. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.9.2 (g) that the destruction of houses, apartments and religious buildings were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.

3495. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 4.10.7 that during the SDS takeover of the municipality between May and July 1992, and in particular following the attacks by the VRS, police, and paramilitaries on the predominantly Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat inhabited areas and villages of Hambarine, Kozarac, Kamičani, Biščani, Čarakovo, Briševo, and Ljubija, many survivors fled the villages, seeking shelter in the surrounding forests. Approximately 20,000 non-Serbs in Hambarine and nearby Ljubija were removed on 20 July 1992. Until November 1992, Trnopolje camp was used as a transfer facility for the expulsion of the non-Serb population from the Bosnian Krajina to Travnik, Turbe, Doboje, Banja Luka, Tuzla, and Gračanica. People were transferred from Trnopolje using freight trains, trucks, and bus convoys organized and secured by Simo Drljača, the Commander of the SJB, as well as by the Bosnian Serb police and military. From the beginning of the conflict in April through August 1992, over 30,000 Muslims and Croats from Prijedor were either physically removed from the municipality or left their homes due to the unbearable living conditions or fearing for their lives. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.5.2 that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forcibly transferred and deported by Simo Drljača, the Commander of the SJB, as well as by the Bosnian Serb police and military. The acts of inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and deportation were found in chapter 8.9.2 (c) to have been discriminatory. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that restrictive and discriminatory measures were imposed upon Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor including: restrictions on the movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the municipality by requiring them to register their movements between the end of May and end of June 1992, and that the Prijedor Crisis Staff dismissed Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their employment from 12 May 1992 onwards.

3496. The Trial Chamber observes that Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts, including killings, detention, cruel and inhumane treatment, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation. In Prijedor Municipality, acts against Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims were committed from 25 May until at least mid-August 1992, with most killings committed in June and July 1992. Detention at Trnopolje camp lasted until the end of September 1992. The majority of these killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, destructions, unlawful detentions, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

3497. Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality. In relation to Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.3.2 that in Scheduled Incidents A.7.1 and A.7.2, on 31 May 1992, Bosnian Muslims were killed by perpetrators who were members of the 6th Krajina Brigade including Jadranko Palija. The perpetrators also included Nenad Kaurin, a member of the reserve police, and paramilitary formations located in Lušci Palanka, Dabar, Kljevci, Tomina, Kozica, Podlug, and Tramošinja. All of those perpetrators were under the command of Colonel Basara, commander of the 6th Krajina Brigade. In chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (a), the Trial Chamber found that these perpetrators intended to kill on a mass scale and on political, racial or religious grounds.

3498. In Scheduled Incident A.7.3, around 27 June 1992, Bosnian Muslims were killed by local Serb reservists from Kljevci under the command of Milorad Mijatović, as well as by Milutin a.k.a. Mićo, Đukić, and Rade Đukić. Milorad Mijatović and his men from Kljevci were subordinated to the 6th Krajina Brigade commanded by Branko Basara. In Scheduled Incident A.7.4, on 1 August 1992, Bosnian Muslims were killed by Serb soldiers led by Mićo 'Kudra' Praštalo who was the commander of a paramilitary unit from Lušci Palanka. The Trial Chamber recalls that the paramilitary unit from Lušci Palanka partook in the attack on Hrustovo and Vrhpolje under the command of Colonel Basara in Scheduled Incident A.7.2. In Scheduled Incident A.7.5, on 2 November, Bosnian Croats were killed by Daniluško Kajtez and Miloš Maksimović, members of the 6th Krajina Brigade, as well as by Todo Vokić and Goran Vukojević. The Trial Chamber found that the perpetrators of the killings in Scheduled Incident A.7.3 intended to kill on a mass scale. The Trial Chamber could not establish that the perpetrators of the killings in Scheduled Incidents A.7.4 and A.7.5 intended to kill on a mass scale. The perpetrators of the killings in Scheduled Incidents A.7.3, A.7.4 and A.7.5 intended to kill on political, racial or religious grounds.

3499. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 4.12.3 that: (i) in late May 1992, the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, commanded by Branko Basara, and acting jointly with the SOS, destroyed: houses in the Muslim villages of Vrhpolje and Hrustovo, as well as the Kukavice Old Mosque, Kerani Mosque, New Hrustovo-Kukavice Mosque, and Vrhpolje Mosque, in cooperation with paramilitary units subordinated to Basara; Mahala Mosque in cooperation with the TO; Lukavice Mosque, Okreč Mosque, Čirkići Mosque, and an imam's house; (ii) in late May 1992, the local police and the SOS, following the departure of the population, destroyed houses in Mahala; (iii) in 1992, Bosnian-Serb forces destroyed Čapalj Mosque and Tomina mosque; (iv) between mid-1992 and November 1992, Mladen Majkić and his team from the TO, pursuant to an order from Colonel Aničić, a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and Chief of the TO, destroyed the New Donji Kamengrad Mosque and the Šehovci Mosque; (v) from the spring of 1992 until late May 1992, members of the SOS, commanded by Dušan Saović, a.k.a Nunja destroyed properties and businesses owned by non-Serbs in Sanski Most Town; and (vi) in late May 1992, Mladen Majkić and his TO unit destroyed the Sanski Most Town Mosque. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 8.9.2 (g) that these acts of destruction were carried out on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims.

3500. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.12.7 that Vrkeš, President of the local SDS with responsibility for the removal and exchange of populations and detainees, stated that Muslims were historically not part of the Sanski Most region and needed to be resettled away from Sanski Most so that the town could become a purely Serb town. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding from chapter 4.12.7 that from late May 1992, the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, along with the TO and paramilitary groups including the SOS, carried out attacks and shelling campaigns in order to 'mop up' predominantly Muslim villages and hamlets pursuant to policies of the Crisis Staff and the SDS. The VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, the TO and paramilitaries carried out transfers and evacuations. Furthermore, heavy shelling from outside the targeted neighbourhoods and villages caused severe damage and killed people, forcing the inhabitants to flee. Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats left Sanski Most Municipality following the implementation of decisions of the Crisis Staff and SDS and actions of VRS units, TO, MUP, and paramilitary groups operating in the municipality. These actions included threats, shelling, burning of private property, killings, and arrests, as well as transfers in convoys. The perpetrators of these acts who assisted in the transport, by convoy, of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats included members of the 6th Krajina Brigade, Boško Banjac who was a member of the Sanski Most Municipality Crisis Staff, and Davidović, the Commander of the Serb Crisis Committee of Banja Luka. The majority of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most Municipality had left the municipality by the end of 1992. The Trial Chamber found in 8.9.2 (c) that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forcibly transferred or deported on political, racial or religious grounds.

3501. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.9.2 (h) that there were restrictive and discriminatory measures imposed upon Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality as follows. From 12 May until the end of May 1992 and during the second half of 1992, the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade soldiers; Serb policemen; local Serbs from Lukavica and people described as Martić's men, both of whom wore olive-grey or olive-green camouflage uniforms; the White Eagles; and persons described as Šešelj's Chetniks, restricted the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality. On 15 May 1992, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, pursuant to ARK Crisis Staff decisions, dismissed Bosnian-Muslim Judges and other employees from the municipal court.

3502. The Trial Chamber observes that within a relatively short period of time, primarily in late May 1992 and including the period up to early August 1992, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts including killings, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), deportation, and restrictive and discriminatory measures. The acts were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. By the summer of 1992 there were few Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats left in the municipality. The Trial Chamber will consider the above factors in its findings on intent to destroy the protected groups below.

Mens rea - assessment of factors relating to intent of physical perpetrators to destroy Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, in part, as such 3503. As discussed above, the Trial Chamber could not establish that Bosnian Croats in Foča, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, and Vlasenica Municipalities were subjected to any prohibited acts.

3504. For Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality, Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most and Prijedor Municipalities, the Trial Chamber finds that while the pattern and widespread nature of the acts or omissions indicate the gravity and seriousness of crimes, the evidence does not allow an inference that physical perpetrators of prohibited acts - as individuals or as affiliates of military, police or other units - shared the intent to destroy in part the protected groups. The prohibited acts or omissions of the physical perpetrators of a specific incident were not in and of themselves sufficient to allow an inference that they had the requisite specific intent even taking into consideration surrounding facts and circumstances. With the limited exceptions outlined in the following paragraphs, the evidence does not indicate sufficient connections or affiliations between the disparate physical perpetrators of different crimes that would allow for such an inference beyond reasonable doubt.

3505. For those instances where the Trial Chamber identified that a physical perpetrator of a prohibited act carried out more than one prohibited or other culpable act,<sup>13370</sup> the Trial Chamber finds that the surrounding facts and circumstances do not allow the Trial Chamber to infer beyond a reasonable doubt that these physical perpetrators had the requisite specific intent. These facts and circumstances include: the relatively small number of victims in each prohibited act; the length of time which had passed when the prohibited acts were committed; the scale of the prohibited acts inflicted against Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims either varied significantly or the Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence to determine their scale; and the lack of evidence of coordination between these physical perpetrators. In some instances, the Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence to identify the physical perpetrator more specifically than as MUP officers, local policemen, or VRS members which precluded further analysis of the involvement of those individuals in more than one prohibited act or other culpable act. The Trial Chamber will discuss some of these specific connections below.

3506. In relation to Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber notes that there were also prohibited acts and other culpable acts committed against Bosnian Croats up to and including November 1992. These acts were committed by members of 6th Krajina Brigade or paramilitaries subordinated to the 6th Krajina Brigade, and by the summer of 1992 there were few Bosnian Croats left in the municipality. The Trial Chamber, however, received evidence of only a few prohibited acts of killing perpetrated against Bosnian Croats and the Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence to determine the scale of the other culpable acts committed by the same perpetrators against Bosnian Croats. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber could not establish that the physical perpetrators had the requisite specific intent in respect of the Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most Municipality.

3507. In relation to Bosnian Croats in Prijedor Municipality, the Trial Chamber notes that there were also prohibited acts and other culpable acts committed against Bosnian Croats up to and including mid-August 1992. These acts were committed by members of the Banja Luka Corps including the 43rd Motorised Brigade and units of the 6th Krajina Brigade. By 1993, approximately half of the Bosnian Croat population remained in the municipality. The Trial Chamber, however, received evidence of only a few prohibited acts of killing and causing serious bodily or mental harm perpetrated against Bosnian Croats and the Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence to determine the scale of the other culpable acts committed by the same perpetrators against Bosnian Croats. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber could not establish that the physical perpetrators had the requisite specific intent in respect of the Bosnian Croats in Prijedor Municipality.

3508. In relation to the Bosnian Muslims in Ključ Municipality, Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most and Prijedor Municipalities, the Trial Chamber will, however, further consider in chapter 9.2.14 whether the circumstances and the context in which the prohibited and other culpable acts were committed are relevant for assessing the specific intent of the Accused and any other alleged JCE members who are not physical perpetrators. In such circumstances, the Trial Chamber will further assess whether the physical perpetrators, who did not have specific intent, nevertheless were tools of the Accused and/or other alleged JCE members for the purposes of the Overarching JCE.

3509. The Trial Chamber will now assess the specific intent of physical perpetrators of prohibited acts in relation to Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality, Sanski Most Municipality, Foča Municipality, Vlasenica Municipality, and Prijedor Municipality. The assessment will be based on the factors identified and the findings recalled in this chapter (above).

3510. Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality. In relation to Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that it identified specific individuals affiliated with the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade who carried out prohibited or other culpable acts within a relatively short time frame and under the same direct command structure. On 2 July 1992, forces under the command of Slobodan Župljanin, the 2nd Infantry Battalion Commander of the VRS 22nd Brigade, killed at least 30 Bosnian Muslims, including 15 Bosnian Muslims who were detained in Alagić café. Forces under command of Dušan Novaković, Commander of the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade, detained, separated, and killed 150 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men at Grabovica School on 4 November 1992. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 3.1.2 that both Novaković and Župljanin directly reported to Colonel Janko Trivić who commanded the Vlašić Operational Group and who, from October 1992, became the Commander of the 22nd Light Infantry Brigade. The prohibited acts, as was found in chapters 8.4.2 and 8.9.2 (b), were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims, on a mass scale and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber also recalls that soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units, which formed part of the Vlašić Operational Group were involved in the cover-up of the killings at Grabovica School. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade, which fell under Trivić's command, carried out the destruction of many Bosnian-Muslim houses, mosques and shrines from May 1992 onwards also on a discriminatory basis.

3511. The Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting,<sup>13371</sup> that, given the scale of the killings, the role of Novaković and Župljanin, who were directly commanded by Trivić, the discriminatory nature of the acts, and the overwhelming involvement of units affiliated to Trivić in the cover up of both acts, the only reasonable inference is that

Novaković and Župljanin had the intent to destroy part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims when carrying out the prohibited acts of killing.

3512. The Trial Chamber, however, is unable to establish the requisite specific intent of other physical perpetrators of prohibited acts in Kotor Varoš Municipality, as the Trial Chamber was unable to identify the physical perpetrators more precisely than members of Serb military forces, or VRS members which precluded further analysis of the involvement of those same individuals in more prohibited or other culpable acts. The Trial Chamber will, however, further consider in chapter 9.2.14 whether the circumstances and the context in which the prohibited and other culpable acts were committed are relevant for assessing the specific intent of the Accused and any other alleged JCE members who are not physical perpetrators.

3513. Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality. In relation to Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that within a relatively short period, primarily in late May 1992 and including the period up to early August 1992, Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts including killings, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), deportation, and restrictive and discriminatory measures. The acts were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. By the summer of 1992, there were few Bosnian Muslims left in the municipality. The Trial Chamber notes that the prohibited acts of killings were perpetrated by the members of the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, under the command of Colonel Basara, or paramilitaries subordinated to the 6th Krajina Brigade.<sup>13372</sup> The killings in Scheduled Incidents A.7.1 and A.7.2 were committed contemporaneously with the large number of destructions of religious buildings carried out by the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade who were often working in conjunction with the SOS or paramilitary units. The killings in all of the relevant Scheduled Incidents were committed contemporaneously with acts of inhumane acts (forcible transfer), deportation and restrictive measures throughout Sanski Most Municipality which extensively involved the 6th Krajina Brigade and targeted Bosnian Muslims in a discriminatory manner. The Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting, that, given the intensity of the attack on Sanski Most Municipality by the 6th Krajina Brigade, the widespread and discriminatory nature of the acts, and the overwhelming involvement of the 6th Krajina Brigade in all crimes, the only reasonable inference is that the physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts had the intent to destroy part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims when carrying out the prohibited acts of killings.

3514. Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality. In relation to the Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that within a relatively short period, between June and early August 1992, Bosnian Muslims in Foča Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts including killings, detention, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), deportation, and restrictive and discriminatory measures. The acts were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. By the summer of 1992, there were few Bosnian Muslims left in the municipality. The Trial Chamber notes that the prohibited acts of killing and the causing of serious bodily and mental harm were committed by perpetrators from the Foča Tactical Group. Dragan Zelenović a.k.a. Zelja and Radomir Kovač a.k.a. Klanfa inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Muslims at multiple detention facilities between June and August 1992.<sup>13373</sup> They also killed Bosnian Muslims in Scheduled Incident A.2.1 in early July 1992. Radovan Stanković also inflicted serious bodily and mental harm on Bosnian Muslims at a detention facility.<sup>13374</sup> Radomir Kovač was a member of a unit commanded by Brane Čosović and Radovan Stanković was a member of a unit commanded by Pero Elez; both commanders received orders from Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group. Pero Elez, Nikola Brčić, Neđo Samardžić, and Zoran Samardžić killed hundreds of detained Bosnian Muslims in Scheduled Incident B.5.1 in the second half of 1992 and all those perpetrators, as well as Radovan Stanković, subjected Bosnian Muslims to cruel and inhumane treatment at two detention facilities.<sup>13375</sup> That treatment included raping Bosnian-Muslim women and girls. Dragoljub Kunarac a.k.a. Žaga inflicted serious bodily and mental harm at three detention facilities which included the raping of Bosnian-Muslim women and girls.<sup>13376</sup> From early June 1992 to around 5 August 1992, Dragoljub Kunarac and his detachment burned down Bosnian-Muslim houses and apartments as well as destroyed a Bosnian-Muslim sacred site in Foča Town. Dragoljub Kunarac's Detachment was a unit under the control of the Foča Brigade and received orders from Marko Kovač.

3515. Each of the above perpetrators who were subordinated to Marko Kovač were also working with others who carried out more than one prohibited act in close geographical and temporal proximity. Marko Kovač ordered Neđo Samardžić and Nikola Brčić to kill three elderly Bosnian-Muslim women in Foča Municipality in his presence.<sup>13377</sup> Furthermore, Marko Kovač, through his Military Command, was responsible for the detentions at KP Dom Foča. The Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting, that, given the intensity of the attack on Foča from early June 1992, the overwhelming involvement of the Foča Tactical Group in many prohibited acts and other culpable acts that were committed in close geographical and temporal proximity, and the systematic and discriminatory nature of all of the prohibited acts, the only reasonable inference is that certain physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts had the intent to destroy a part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims when carrying out the prohibited acts. Those physical perpetrators comprised primarily Marko Kovač, Dragoljub Kunarac,<sup>13378</sup> Nikola Brčić, Radomir Kovač, Pero Elez, Neđo Samardžić, Zoran Samardžić, and those physical perpetrators subordinated to them and/or affiliated with the Foča SJB who had carried out multiple prohibited and/or other culpable acts.

3516. Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality. In relation to the Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that within a relatively short period, between June and 30 September 1992, Bosnian Muslims were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts including killings, detention, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), deportation, plunder and appropriation, and restrictive and discriminatory measures. The acts were committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. By August 1992, almost all Bosnian Muslims had left the municipality. The Trial Chamber notes that the prohibited acts of killing and the causing of serious bodily and mental harm were committed by perpetrators from the Vlasenica SJB and that Mićo Kraljević and his special police platoon which was attached to the Vlasenica SJB played a major role.

<sup>13377</sup> The Trial Chamber observes that this act occurred in 1993 and therefore is outside the scope of the prohibited acts in Count 1. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber has not considered this act in determining the actus reus and relies only on this evidence for the purposes of inferring the specific intent of physical perpetrators from the surrounding facts and circumstances.

3517. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.14.1 Schedule A.9.1 that Kraljević was directly subordinate to Radenko Stanić, the police station commander, who was in turn subordinate to Mane Đurić, the Chief of Vlasenica SJB since May 1992 and a member of the Crisis Staff. On 2 June 1992, members of Kraljević's unit supported by VRS members were among the perpetrators of Scheduled Incident A.9.1. Kraljević ordered his unit to clean the territory - in an operation covering a large area, including the Bosnian-Muslim village of Drum - of Bosnian Muslims and to kill fleeing persons. Kraljević's unit was operationally under the command of Vlasenica SJB at the time until some time in June when it was also formally attached to the Vlasenica SJB. On 30 or 31 May 1992 and 2 June 1992, Kraljević's unit destroyed houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims during the two Gradina operations. This destruction was committed, in particular, in Gradina itself and its surrounding villages, such as Barice and Piskavice, a mixed Serb and Muslim village. In May and June 1992, Kraljević's unit took over Gradina, Sušica, and other Bosnian-Muslim hamlets and sent women and children to Vlasenica town. It torched all Bosnian-Muslim houses in order to prevent owners from returning. No non-Serb inhabitants remained in 16 villages that were taken over; those that survived either escaped or were taken to Sušica camp. In June 1992, Kraljević's unit appropriated property from Bosnian-Muslim residences in Vlasenica Town on a discriminatory basis.

3518. In relation to Sušica camp, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.14.1 Schedule B.16.1 that Dragan Nikolić and Goran Tesić were permanently stationed at the camp under orders from Kraljević from 15-18 June to September 1992 when Sušica camp was closed. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 4.15.2 Schedule C.19.3 that Nikolić was directly accountable to Kraljević and was subordinate to him. He was given instructions by Kraljević to take whatever security measures he felt were necessary. In June and July 1992, Nikolić and Tešić killed eight Bosnian Muslims at Sušica camp and until September 1992, both subjected Bosnian Muslims to acts constituting serious bodily and mental harm. In early June 1992, at Sušica camp, Nikolić ordered possessions to be taken from Bosnian-Muslim detainees; guards also stripped more than 800 Bosnian-Muslim women of their valuables. Veljko Bašić, a former policeman mobilized into Vlasenica SJB, who also had a commander's role at Sušica, was also the commander at the Vlasenica secondary school where, between 31 May 1992 and 8 June 1992, 160 Bosnian-Muslim men were subjected to acts causing serious bodily and mental harm. In relation to Sušica, in Scheduled Incident B.16.2, the Trial Chamber found that Kraljević's superior, Mane Đurić, ordered MUP officers to remove 140-150 Bosnian-Muslim detainees from Sušica camp following which the MUP officers killed them on 30 September 1992.

3519. The Trial Chamber finds that the attack on Vlasenica from late May 1992 was intensive, and overwhelmingly involved the Vlasenica SJB and, in particular, Mane Đurić's direct subordinate, Mićo Kraljević, in almost all of the prohibited acts and other culpable acts. Those acts were committed in close proximity in terms of time and location. The prohibited acts were also systematic and discriminatory in nature. The Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting, that the only reasonable inference, therefore, is that certain physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts had the intent to destroy a part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims when carrying out the prohibited acts. Those physical perpetrators comprised primarily Mane Đurić, Mićo Kraljević, Dragan Nikolić, Goran Tešić, Veljko Bašić, and those physical perpetrators subordinated to them and/or affiliated with the Vlasenica SJB who had carried out multiple prohibited and/or other culpable acts.

3520. Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality. In relation to Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality, the Trial Chamber observes that within a relatively short period, primarily in late May 1992 and including the period up to mid-August 1992, Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor Municipality were the victims of a number of crimes constituting prohibited acts and other culpable acts including killings, causing serious bodily and mental harm, destruction of property, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and deportation, plunder and appropriation, as well as imposing restrictive and discriminatory measures. Almost all of the killings were committed in June and July 1992. The prohibited acts were largely committed on a discriminatory basis against Bosnian Muslims and in the context of a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population. By the summer of 1992, there were few Bosnian Muslims left in the municipality.

3521. The Trial Chamber observes that the prohibited acts of killing predominantly Bosnian Muslims in Scheduled Incidents A.6.1, A.6.2, A.6.3, and A.6.4 were all perpetrated, among others, by members of the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade and 43rd Motorized Brigade, including Vladimir Arsić, and Radmilo Zeljaja. Radmilo Zeljaja of the 43rd Motorized Brigade and Duško Tadić specifically took part in the killings in Scheduled Incidents A.6.1, and A.6.4. The killings were committed in the context of a wider attack in late May 1992 in the areas of Kozarac village, Prijedor, and Sanski Most by VRS units. The 6th Krajina Brigade commanded by Branko Basara took part in that attack. The Trial Chamber found, Judge Orić dissenting, in this chapter that members of the 6th Krajina Brigade had an intention to destroy Bosnian Muslims by targeting them in Sanski Most from June 1992 onwards. The other VRS units participating in the attack included units of the Banja Luka Corps, commanded by Talić, including the 343rd Mechanised Brigade, later known as the 43rd Motorised Brigade, commanded by Vladimir Arsić and his deputy Radmilo Zeljaja. They acted together with the members of the 5th Kozara Brigade. The killings of predominantly Bosnian Muslims in July 1992 in Scheduled Incidents A.6.5 and A.6.6 which were committed in close proximity, and the subsequent attempt to clean up the crime sites were perpetrated by, among others, members of the 43rd Motorized Brigade. Those members included Goran Gruban and Rade Bilbija. The killings of mainly Bosnian Croats in Scheduled Incident A.6.9, on 24 and 25 July 1992, were committed by members of the 6th Krajina Brigade under the command of Colonel Basara and the 5th Kozara Brigade both of which took part in other prohibited acts. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the physical perpetrators of the killings in Scheduled Incidents A.6.1, A.6.4, A.6.5, A.6.6, A.6.7, A.6.8, and A.6.9 intended to kill on a mass scale.

3522. In relation to the serious bodily and mental harm inflicted by perpetrators in Scheduled Incidents C.15.2 (Omarska), C.15.3 (Keraterm), and C.15.4 (Trnopolje), the Trial Chamber found that a number of physical perpetrators of these prohibited acts shared affiliation and participated in multiple prohibited acts. All of these acts were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds. Dušan Knežević, a.k.a. Duca, and Zoran Žigić raped and sexually assaulted female detainees at Omarska and abused prisoners at Keraterm. At Keraterm other VRS physical perpetrators, who caused serious bodily or mental harm, included members of the Banja Luka Corps or 1KK. At Trnopolje, Slobodan Kuruzović, camp commander and Slavko Puhalić, deputy commander, as well as Dragan Škrbić, Stojan Madžar, and Zoran Žigić were physical perpetrators. Slobodan Kuruzović, Dušan Knežević, a.k.a. Duca and Slavko Puhalić were members of the 43rd Motorized Brigade and Zoran Žigić, Dragan Škrbić, and Stojan Madžar were members of the reconnaissance and sabotage unit of the 43rd Motorized Brigade. The Trial Chamber also found that VRS soldiers, on or around 25 July 1992, were responsible for the killing of between 190 and 220 Bosnian Muslims at Room 3 in Keraterm. Similarly, in July or early August 1992, camp guards, who included members of the 43rd Motorised Brigade, as well as the Banja Luka Corps or 1KK killed detainees in Scheduled Incidents C.15.3, B.13.2, B.13.4, and B.13.5.

3524. The Trial Chamber finds that the attack on Prijedor Municipality was intensive, over a short time frame and included physical perpetrators who committed crimes together and were part of the same units or brigades such as the 43rd Motorised Brigade under the direction of Vladimir Arsić and Radmilo Zeljaja, the 6th Krajina Brigade under the command of Branko Basara, units of the Banja Luka Corps commanded by Talić, and individuals working with Duško Tadić. Given the widespread and discriminatory nature of the acts, and the overwhelming involvement of the 43rd Motorized Brigade in almost all prohibited acts, the Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting, that the only reasonable inference is that certain physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts had the intent to destroy part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims when carrying out the prohibited acts of killings and causing serious bodily or mental harm. The physical perpetrators who shared the intent to destroy Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor included: VRS units of the Banja Luka Corps, commanded by Talić, including the 43rd Motorized Brigade commanded by Vladimir Arsić together with Radmilo Zeljaja; units of the 6th Krajina Brigade commanded by Branko Basara; and Duško Tadić. Specific members of the 43rd Motorized Brigade who were known to have participated in multiple prohibited acts included: Goran Gruban, Rade Bilbija, Dušan Knežević a.k.a. Duca, Dragan Škrbić, Stojan Madzar, Zoran Žigić, Slobodan Kuruzović and Slavko Puhalić.

3525. The Trial Chamber is unable to establish the requisite specific intent of other physical perpetrators of prohibited acts in Prijedor Municipality as the perpetrators are either unnamed and/or their affiliations are not determined. This precludes any finding as to the extent and nature of their involvement in prohibited and/or other culpable acts. In relation to the camps, the Trial Chamber observes that the Prijedor Crisis Staff established Omarska, Keraterm, and Trnopolje, where Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims suffered serious bodily and mental harm and killings. The Prijedor Crisis Staff also imposed restrictive and discriminatory measures on Bosnian Muslims from 12 May 1992 onwards and carried out forcible transfers and deportations. All of the prohibited acts were carried out on political, racial or religious grounds. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prijedor Crisis Staff was primarily involved in the establishment and administration of these camps. Without further evidence of the involvement of a named perpetrator of a prohibited act who was affiliated with the Prijedor Crisis Staff, specific intent cannot be inferred. This is especially the case when assessing the surrounding facts and circumstances in which multiple physical perpetrators were carrying out prohibited acts. The exceptions to this are known members of the Crisis Staff who carried out prohibited acts such as Radmilo Zeljaja and Slobodan Kuruzović. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber cannot infer beyond reasonable doubt that other unknown members of the Prijedor Crisis Staff possessed the required specific intent. The Trial Chamber will, however, further consider in chapter 9.2.14 whether the circumstances and the context in which the prohibited and other culpable acts were committed are relevant for assessing the specific intent of the Accused and/or any other alleged JCE members who are not physical perpetrators.

3526. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds, Judge Orić dissenting, that the physical perpetrators of the prohibited acts in Sanski Most, Vlasenica, and Foča Municipalities, and certain named perpetrators in Kotor Varoš and Prijedor Municipalities, intended to destroy the Bosnian Muslims in those Count 1 Municipalities as a part of the protected group. Whether the targeted part constituted a substantial part of the protected group, in so far as the specific intent of physical perpetrators is concerned, will be considered further below.

Mens rea - substantiality of part of the protected groups of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats 3527. The Prosecution argued that destruction of a group ‘in part’ encompasses limited geographic areas such as a municipality.<sup>13379</sup> It submits that the ‘targeted communities’ within the Count 1 municipalities were not random aggregations of individuals but that they were ‘distinct entities’ with specific histories, attachments, and identities, which were developed over centuries.<sup>13380</sup> The Prosecution argued that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Prijedor, for instance – given the scale of the prohibited acts there – were targeted for destruction so that it would serve, among other things, as a potent example to the rest of the protected group of the physical demise of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats given their ‘vulnerability and defencelessness’.<sup>13381</sup> The Defence submitted that the intent as described in paragraph 37 of the Indictment is an intent to kill selectively within ‘some municipalities’ and, therefore, the intent does not target a group which is a ‘sufficiently substantial part of the Bosnian-Muslim/Croat population of [Bosnia-Herzegovina]’.<sup>13382</sup> The Defence argued that the Indictment does not allege a campaign which targeted the destruction of a group, even in part. Rather, they suggested that, on the contrary, it implies a discriminatory approach to killings which is the antithesis of an intent to physically destroy the groups.<sup>13383</sup> The Defence explained that for substantiality it is necessary to consider whether the targeted group is substantial in relation to the Bosnian-Muslim or Bosnian-Croat population of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole.<sup>13384</sup> The Trial Chamber will address arguments related to the Accused and/or alleged JCE members who were not physical perpetrators further in chapter 9.2.14.

3528. The Trial Chamber recalls, as noted in chapter 8.10.1, that in determining the substantiality of the group, the numerical size of the targeted part of the protected group in absolute terms is one factor among many. Other factors include: numerical size of the part in relation to the overall size of the group; the prominence of the part of the group within the larger whole and whether it is emblematic of the overall group or essential to its survival; the area of the perpetrators' activity and control; and the perpetrators' potential reach. The Trial Chamber reiterates that this section concerns the specific intent of physical perpetrators and, accordingly, in determining whether the targeted part was substantial, consideration must be given, inter alia, to the physical perpetrators' activity, de facto control, and reach. The Trial Chamber in this regard recalls the Appeals Chamber jurisprudence that 'The intent to destroy formed by a perpetrator of genocide will always be limited by the opportunity presented to him. While this factor alone will not indicate whether the targeted group is substantial, it can - in combination with other factors - inform the analysis'.<sup>13385</sup> Furthermore the Appeals Chamber has emphasised that the above considerations are neither exhaustive nor dispositive and that they are only useful guidelines.<sup>13386</sup>

3529. The population of Bosnia-Herzegovina in 1991 was approximately 4.4 million people.<sup>13387</sup> According to an April 1991 census, 43.7 per cent of the residents of Bosnia-Herzegovina were Bosnian-Muslim, 32.4 per cent were Bosnian-Serb, and 17.3 per cent were Bosnian-Croat.<sup>13388</sup>

3530. In relation to Sanski Most Municipality, according to the April 1991 census, it comprised 28,136 (47 per cent) Bosnian Muslims, 25,363 (42 per cent) Bosnian Serbs, 4,322 (7 per cent) Bosnian Croats, 1,247 Yugoslavs, and 1,239 persons of other or unknown ethnicity.<sup>13389</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that while the number of Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most would have formed a larger proportion of the population of Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory than they did of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole (approximately 1.5 per cent), they were still a relatively small part of the population under Bosnian-Serb activity and control. The Trial Chamber notes that it found in chapter 4.12.7 that the vast majority of Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality had left by the end of 1992. In terms of other factors signifying the importance of Sanski Most, Karadžić and Krajišnik stressed the strategic significance of Sanski Most Municipality and the need to retain it.<sup>13390</sup> At the 50th session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Krajišnik remarked that '[t]he fact that we have organised this jubilee session in Sanski Most, a beautiful town in Krajina, is symbolical. Our presence here is a guarantee that Sanski Most was Serbian and will remain such, regardless of map-drawing and those engaged in such futile efforts'.<sup>13391</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls from chapter 3.1.2 that while the authority of the VRS Main Staff extended throughout the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory, the authority of the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, under the command of Branko Basara, charged with the take-over of Sanski Most Municipality did not extend beyond the municipality from early 1992 onwards. From the perspective of the 6th Krajina Brigade physical perpetrators, the Bosnian Muslims of Sanski Most were the only part of the Bosnian-Muslim group within their area of control.

3531. In relation to Foča Municipality, according to the April 1991 census, Foča Municipality was comprised of 20,790 (51 per cent) Bosnian Muslims, 18,315 (45 per cent) Bosnian Serbs, 94 Bosnian Croats, 463 Yugoslavs, and 851 persons of other or unknown ethnicity.<sup>13392</sup> The Trial Chamber finds, therefore, that while the number of Bosnian Muslims in Foča would have formed a larger proportion of the population of Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory than they did of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole (1.08 per cent) they were still a relatively small part of that population under Bosnian-Serb activity and control. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.3.7 that between July and 13 August 1992 Bosnian Muslim civilians left Foča Municipality for other countries. In terms of other factors signifying the importance of Foča, in September 1992, the Crisis Staff and War Commission President Miroslav Stanić informed Mladić that Foča 'was supposed to be the second Islamic Centre for Muslims in Europe' but was now 99 per cent Serb.<sup>13393</sup> During the war, Bosnian-Serb authorities renamed Foča 'Srbinje' or 'town of the Serbs'.<sup>13394</sup> In January 1994, Karadžić explained that Foča 'is extremely important to' the Muslims, 'but it will never be theirs again'.<sup>13395</sup> Vojislav Maksimović, the Bosnian-Serb Republic Commissioner for Foča, promoted a 'firm attitude that the Muslims and the Croats will not be allowed to return to the areas under our rule. ... [A]ny thought about having 500 or more Muslims within our future country is out of the question.’<sup>13396</sup> In August 1994, Krajišnik praised Bosnian Serbs in Foča for having created ‘a true Serbian town’ and preventing Foča becoming ‘another Mecca.’<sup>13397</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls from chapter 3.1.2 that while the authority of the VRS Main Staff extended throughout the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory, the authority of the VRS Foča Tactical Brigade, under the command of Marko Kovač, charged with the take-over of Foča Municipality did not extend beyond the Municipality from early June 1992 onwards. From the perspective of the physical perpetrators, most of whom were part of the Foča Tactical Brigade, the Bosnian Muslims of Foča were the only part of the Bosnian-Muslim protected group within their area of activity and control.

3532. In relation to Kotor Varoš Municipality, according to the 1991 census in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Kotor Varoš Municipality was comprised of 14,056 (38 per cent) Serbs, 11,090 (30 per cent) Muslims, 10,695 (29 per cent) Croats, 745 Yugoslavs, and 267 persons of other or unknown ethnicity.<sup>13398</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that while the number of Bosnian Muslims in Kotor Varoš would have formed a larger proportion of the population of Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory than they did of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole (0.57 per cent) they were still a relatively small part of that population under Bosnian-Serb activity and control. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.7.7 that between June and November 1992, large parts of the Bosnian-Muslim population were moved out of Kotor Varoš Municipality in convoys by the forces attacking the municipality. Kotor Varoš was, marginally, a majority Serb municipality and such municipalities with a majority Serbian population were targeted to become a part of the Republika Srpska.<sup>13399</sup> Additionally, Kotor Varoš being located almost on the border of the Federation and Republika Srpska made it strategically important.<sup>13400</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls from chapter 3.1.2 that the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Brigade and VRS 22nd Brigade – both under the command of Colonel Janko Trivić who commanded the Vlašić Operational Group – were charged with the take-over of Kotor Varoš Municipality. The authority of the two brigades did not extend beyond the Municipality from early June 1992 onwards. From the perspective of the physical perpetrators, who were commanders of the VRS 1st Kotor Varoš Brigade and VRS 22nd Brigade, the Bosnian Muslims of Kotor Varoš were the only part of the Bosnian-Muslim protected group within their area of activity and control.

3533. In relation to Vlasenica Municipality, according to the 1991 census in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Vlasenica Municipality was comprised of 18,727 (55 per cent) Muslims, 14,359 (42 per cent) Serbs, 39 Croats, 340 Yugoslavs, and 477 persons of other or unknown ethnicity.<sup>13401</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that while the number of Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica would have formed a larger proportion of the population of Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory than they did of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole (0.97 per cent) they were still a relatively small part of that population under Bosnian-Serb activity and control. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.14.7 that by August 1992 almost all Bosnian Muslims left the municipality. In terms of other factors signifying the importance of Vlasenica Municipality, it was understood that controlling Vlasenica would have allowed the advancement of the first and third strategic objectives.<sup>13402</sup> Forcing the Muslim population to leave Vlasenica would have created access to Eastern Herzegovina.<sup>13403</sup> As Mladić noted, ‘whoever controls Vlasenica, controls eastern Bosnia.’<sup>13404</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding from chapter 4.14.1 Schedule A.9.1 that the Vlasenica SJB - under the command of its Chief, Mane Đurić, since May 1992 and from which Mićo Kraljević’s special police platoon operated – was charged with the take-over of Vlasenica Municipality. The authority of the Vlasenica SJB did not extend beyond the municipality from early June 1992 onwards. From the perspective of the physical perpetrators, most of whom were part of the Vlasenica SJB, the Bosnian Muslims of Vlasenica were the only part of the Bosnian-Muslim protected group within their area of activity and control.

3534. In relation to Prijedor Municipality, according to the 1991 census in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Prijedor Municipality was comprised of 49,700 (44 per cent) Muslims, 40,000 (42.5 per cent) Serbs, with the remainder made up of Croats (5.6 per cent), Yugoslavs (5.7 per cent) and others (2.2 per cent) out of a total population of

112,000.<sup>13405</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that while the number of Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor would have formed a larger proportion of the population of Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory than they did of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole (2.2 per cent) they were still a relatively small part of that population under Bosnian-Serb activity and control. The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.10.7 that by 1993 the vast majority of Bosnian Muslims left the municipality.<sup>13406</sup> In terms of other factors signifying the importance of Prijedor Municipality, the municipality was significant to the Bosnian Serbs because of its location as part of the land corridor that linked the Serb-dominated area in the Croatian Krajina in the west with Serbia and Montenegro in the east and south, which was said to be essential for supplying units of the VRS as it was the only land connection between western Bosnia-Herzegovina and Serbia.<sup>13407</sup> Senior figures in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory emphasised that Prijedor and the Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat communities living there symbolised World War II throughout the region. Prime Minister Lukić said in a speech that Prijedor had to be Serb because it had been Serb-majority before ‘the slaughter’, referring to World War II.<sup>13408</sup> In 1994, Karadžić continued to emphasise the need for continuing Serb control over Prijedor.<sup>13409</sup> Furthermore, Prijedor, as a multi-ethnic area, was a symbol throughout the region of Yugoslavia of ‘brotherhood and unity’, to the extent that Bosnian Muslims thought it was “the last town where ethnic conflict was possible.”<sup>13410</sup> The Trial Chamber found in chapter 4.10.7 that after the SDS takeover of Prijedor Town with the aid of the military and police forces on 30 April 1992, VRS soldiers changed the name to ‘Serbian Prijedor’ and occupied all of the prominent institutions such as the radio station, medical centre, and bank. A Serbian flag was raised over the Municipal Assembly building. Sometime before the attack on Prijedor, the President of the ARK Crisis Staff, Radoslav Brđanin, said on television that ‘non-Serbs would not need wood for the winter’, which among the non-Serb population was understood as a concealed threat and caused fear and panic. The Trial Chamber also recalls from chapter 3.1.2 that the 43rd Motorized Brigade and the 6th Krajina Brigade, among others, were at the time of the relevant prohibited acts, charged with the take-over of Prijedor Municipality. The authority of those brigades did not extend beyond the municipality, with the exception of the 6th Krajina Brigade which also operated in neighbouring Sanski Most from early May 1992. From the perspective of the physical perpetrators, most of whom were members of the 43rd Motorized Brigade, the Bosnian Muslims of Prijedor were the only part of the Bosnian-Muslim protected group within their area of control.

3535. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most, Vlasenica, Foča, Kotor Varoš, and Prijedor Municipalities were targeted by the physical perpetrators of prohibited acts largely in their own respective municipalities. The Trial Chamber notes that the physical perpetrators had limited geographical control or authority to carry out activities. The Bosnian Muslims targeted in each individual municipality formed a relatively small part of the Bosnian-Muslim population in the Bosnian-Serb claimed territory or in Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole. The Trial Chamber received insufficient evidence indicating why the Bosnian Muslims in each of the above municipalities or the municipalities themselves had a special significance or were emblematic in relation to the protected group as a whole. The Trial Chamber is, therefore, not satisfied, beyond reasonable doubt, that the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the surrounding facts and circumstances is that the physical perpetrators possessed the intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most, Foča, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, and Vlasenica Municipalities as a substantial part of the protected group.

Conclusion

3536. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber does not find, beyond reasonable doubt, that the physical perpetrators of prohibited acts against the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 municipalities committed those prohibited acts, with the intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as a substantial part of the protected groups in Bosnia-Herzegovina. In chapter 9.2.14, the Trial Chamber will consider whether there was a JCE to permanently remove the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 municipalities through the commission of genocide. The Trial Chamber will consider the specific intent, if any, of the alleged members of the JCE in light of the totality of the evidence.

Count 2

3537. In chapters 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, 7.5, 7.6, 7.7, 7.8.1, 7.8.2, 7.9, 7.10, 7.11, 7.12, 7.13.1, 7.13.2, 7.14.1, 7.14.2, 7.15, 7.15.3, and 7.16 the Trial Chamber decided to further consider certain incidents which occurred in Srebrenica as alleged genocidal acts against the applicable law.

3538. Protected group. As established above in relation to Count 1 in chapter 8.10.2, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Bosnian Muslims were a protected group for the purpose of Article 4 of the Statute.

3540. Killing members of the group. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.3.2, that following the fall of Srebrenica on 11 July 1995 Bosnian-Muslim men and boys were killed and that those killings constituted murder. The Trial Chamber, accordingly, finds that many thousands of members of the protected group were killed. The Trial Chamber will not consider the killing of women in Srebrenica any further in this chapter as those killings were not charged under Count 2 of the Indictment.

3541. Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.16 and 8.9.2 that VRS units terrorised and abused the Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica who had gathered in Potočari following the fall of Srebrenica on 11 July 1995 and that these acts constituted cruel and/or inhumane treatment.

3542. The Trial Chamber found in chapters 7.16 and 8.9.2 that VRS units separated Bosnian-Muslim men, particularly those of fighting age, from Bosnian-Muslim women, children, and the elderly in Potočari and finds that this act aroused intense fear as those detained understood the inevitable fate awaiting the men as they were placed onto buses while being punched, abused, hit, and branded with derogatory terms. The VRS created a fearful and threatening atmosphere in Potočari by intimidating the Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica to an extent that some of them committed suicide.

3543. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapters 7.16 and 8.9.2 that members of the VRS, military police, civilian police, special police, Drina Wolves, and paramilitary formations beat Bosnian-Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution and that these acts constituted cruel and/or inhumane treatment. The Trial Chamber further found in chapter 7.16 and 8.9.2 that Bosnian-Muslim men from the column and at the execution sites were cursed, insulted, threatened and were forced to make the Serb salute and sing Serbian songs. The Trial Chamber recalls, as determined in chapters 8.3.2, 8.9.2 and 7.16, the circumstances, including discriminatory treatment, in which thousands of detained Bosnian-Muslim males of Srebrenica faced their imminent deaths in the following locations: Bratunac, Kravica, Tisova Kosa, Kravica Warehouse (Schedule E.3.1), Sandići Meadow (Schedule E.4.1), Luke School near Tišća (Schedule E.5.1), School in Orahovac (Schedule E.6.1), School in Petkovci (Schedule E.7.1), Kula School (Schedule E.9.1), Branjevo Military Farm (E.9.2), Pilica Cultural Centre (Schedule E.10.1), and Vuk Karadžić elementary school (Schedule E.15.1).<sup>13411</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the suffering endured by the Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in the period before they were killed, was intense, prolonged, and serious. Many spent their last moments in a state of desperation.

3544. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber observes that thousands of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica were subjected to serious bodily or mental harm which included: threats of death or treatment which brought them to the point of death or suicide; knowledge, in many cases, of impending death due to the terrible manner in which they were treated prior to being killed; and long-lasting physical and mental damage. The harm inflicted upon the victims by the perpetrators preceded the suffering which was inherently part of the acts of killing. The Trial Chamber, therefore, finds that the serious bodily or mental harm suffered by thousands of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica contributed to the destruction of the targeted group as a result of actions of the physical perpetrators.

3545. Mens rea - Intent to destroy the protected group, in part, as such. The Trial Chamber recalls Appeals Chamber jurisprudence that where direct evidence of specific intent is absent, the specific intent may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances which may include: the general context; the perpetration of other culpable acts systematically directed against the same group; the scale of the atrocities committed; the systematic targeting of victims on account of their membership in a particular group; proof of the mental state with respect to the commission of the underlying acts; the repetition of destructive and discriminatory acts; or the existence of a plan or policy.<sup>13412</sup>

3546. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 8.3.2, that all of the victims of the killings in Srebrenica were not actively participating in the hostilities at the time of the killings. The killings were perpetrated by members of the VRS including soldiers and military police as well as the following groups: the 2nd Šehovići Detachment of the Special Police Brigade, the 10th Sabotage Detachment, the 1st Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade and the Zvornik Brigade more generally, the 6th Infantry Battalion of the Zvornik Brigade, the Bratunac Brigade Military Police Platoon, the 1st company of the Jahorina police training centre, the Drina Wolves, the Skorpions Unit, paramilitary formations, the Special Police Detachment, the Special Police Unit of the MUP and 'Chetniks'. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 8.4.2 that the perpetrators of Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.5.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, E.10.1, and E.12.1 intended to kill on a mass scale. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding in chapter 8.9.2 that the perpetrators of Scheduled Incidents E.1.1, E.2.1, E.3.1, E.4.1, E.5.1, E.6.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.8.1, E.8.2, E.9.1, E.9.2, E.10.1, E.12.1, E.13.1, E.14.1, E.14.2, E.15.1, E.15.3 and the unscheduled incidents of 13 July 1995, 18 July 1995 and 23 July 1995 committed the killings against the Bosnian Muslims on political, racial or religious grounds. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.16 and 8.9.2 that members of the VRS, military police, civilian police, special police, Drina Wolves and paramilitary formations terrorised and abused Bosnian Muslims in Potočari, mis-treated and beat Bosnian-Muslim boys and men prior to their execution, and intended to cause serious mental or physical suffering to Bosnian Muslims who were separated or detained.

3547. The Trial Chamber notes the scale of the events in Srebrenica, which involved the murder of a very large number of Bosnian-Muslim men and boys. Many thousands of Bosnian-Muslim males were killed. These killings were carried out approximately between 12 and 23 July 1995 with the vast majority being killed over just a few days, from 12 until 17 July 1995. The killings followed a pattern. The victims were Bosnian-Muslim males who were captured and detained.<sup>13413</sup> Many of the detainees were transported to other locations prior to being taken to execution sites; they were then either lined up prior to the killings or summarily killed. They were often kept in dire conditions.<sup>13414</sup> The killings were often accompanied by ethnic slurs.<sup>13415</sup> In relation to Scheduled Incident E.10.1, the perpetrators were heard saying to one another: ‘don’t commit genocide, if you want to kill ... take a rifle and strike in a military way’ and ‘we committed the genocide like in Jasenovac in 1941.’ The Trial Chamber considers that the killings, taking into consideration their organized and systematic manner, demonstrate the perpetrators’ clear intent to kill all or substantially all able-bodied Bosnian-Muslim males from Srebrenica.

3548. In addition, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.1.3 that, between 6 and 11 July 1995, the VRS and soldiers identified as ‘Chetniks’ destroyed houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica, mosques in Srebrenica, and a building housing the archive and the library of the Medžlis of the Islamic Community of Srebrenica. These acts of destruction were also committed in the days immediately preceding the killings and by the same perpetrators as those who committed the murder and the cruel and inhumane treatment. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 8.5.2 and 8.9.2(b) that in addition to the murder, terrorising and abusing, ill-treatment, and destruction of property suffered by Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica, all or substantially all of the remaining Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica were forcibly transferred out of Potočari by the VRS and the MUP.

<sup>13413</sup> In relation to Scheduled Incident E.4.1, the Trial Chamber recalls chapter 7.5 that the victims surrendered from the column near the meadow and were killed at the meadow.

<sup>13414</sup> See, for instance, in Scheduled Incident E.9.1 in chapter 7.10.1, the Trial Chamber found that some the victims died as they were kept in hot and overcrowded conditions with no food or water.

<sup>13415</sup> In relation to Scheduled Incidents E.3.1, E.4.1, E.6.1, E.6.2, E.7.1, E.7.2, E.9.2, E.13.1, and the unscheduled incidents of 18 July and 23 July 1995, the Trial Chamber found in chapter 8.9.2(a) that the perpetrators referred to the victims as balijas or ustasas, or treated them in discriminatory ways based on the victims’ religious, racial or political views.

Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica, as a part of the protected group. Whether the targeted part constituted a substantial part of the protected group, in so far as the specific intent of physical perpetrators is concerned, will be considered further below.

3550. Mens rea - Substantiality of part of the protected group. The Trial Chamber recalls, as noted in chapter 8.10.1, that in determining the substantiality of the group, numerical size of the part in absolute terms is one factor among many. Other factors include: numerical size of the part in relation to the overall size of the group; the prominence of the part of the group within the larger whole and whether it is emblematic of the overall group or essential to its survival; the area of the perpetrators' activity and control; and the perpetrators' potential reach.

3551. The Trial Chamber notes that the population of Bosnia-Herzegovina in 1991 was approximately 4.4 million people.<sup>13416</sup> According to the April 1991 census 43.7 per cent of the residents of Bosnia-Herzegovina were Bosnian Muslim, 32.4 per cent were Bosnian Serb, and 17.3 per cent were Bosnian Croat.<sup>13417</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 7.1.1 that in 1991, the population of the Srebrenica Municipality was 37,000, of which 73 per cent were Muslim and 25 per cent were Serb. It also recalls that in April 1993 some 20,000 to 28,000 people were living in Srebrenica Town comprising displaced persons from the surrounding villages and 8,000 to 10,000 locals most of whom were Bosnian Muslims. The Bosnian-Muslim population of Srebrenica Town at times swelled to between 50,000 to 60,000 as a result of people being displaced from the surrounding villages and the enclave at one time comprised 70,000 people in April 1993. The Trial Chamber considers, therefore, that the population of Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica formed less than two per cent of the Bosnian Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina as a whole.

3552. The Trial Chamber further recalls the evidence reviewed in chapters 7.1.3 and 9.7.7 regarding Mladić's statements with respect to Srebrenica. Mladić stated in an interview published in 1994, that Srebrenica was a large 'Islamic and Turkish' stronghold until the war started, and that although they had been the majority population there, the heritage did not belong to the 'Turks'. He declared that the Drina was a synonym of domination over the Serbs, dating from the time of the powerful Turkish empire. Mladić demanded that a representative of a humanitarian organization film the area in Srebrenica and said 'Let our Serbs see what we have done to them, how we took care of the Turks'. Mladić also said that if the Dutch had not been there to protect the Bosnian Muslims, 'they would have disappeared from this area a long time ago'. Upon Mladić's arrival in Srebrenica on 11 July 1995, he said: 'Here we are, on 11 July 1995, in Serb Srebrenica. On the eve of yet great Serb holiday, we give this town to the Serb people as a gift. Finally, after the [R]ebellion against the Dahis, the time has come to take revenge on the Turks in this region'.

3553. The Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapters 7.1.3, 7.17 and 8.3.2(a) relating to the murder of many thousands of Bosnian-Muslim males, the destruction of political or religious monuments and homes, and the forcible transfer of Bosnian-Muslims women, children and the elderly. The physical perpetrators of these acts carried them out knowing that they would be demonstrative of the ultimate fate that awaited Bosnian Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina. This demonstrative effect would be due to the symbolic impact of the murder of Bosnian Muslims in a designated safe area, the destruction of a number of religious buildings and Bosnian-Muslim homes in the region, and the forcible transfer of all or substantially all of the remaining Bosnian-Muslim population. This symbolic impact was all the more significant given the scope of the VRS activity and control of this municipality in what was then one of the few remaining predominantly Bosnian-Muslim populated territories in the area claimed as the Bosnian-Serb Republic.

3555. Conclusion. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the underlying prohibited acts set out in chapters 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, 7.5, 7.6, 7.7, 7.8.1, 7.8.2, 7.9, 7.10, 7.11, 7.12, 7.13.1, 7.13.2, 7.14.1, 7.14.2, 7.15 and 7.16 were committed by the physical perpetrators with the intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica, as a substantial part of the protected group of Bosnian Muslims in Bosnian-Herzegovina and, accordingly, constitutes genocide punishable under Article 4(3)(a) of the Statute.

9. The liability of the Accused

9.1 Applicable law

9.1.1 Joint criminal enterprise

3556. The Indictment charges the Accused as a participant in a JCE, pursuant to Article 7 (1) of the Statute, for all the crimes charged. According to the Indictment, the Accused committed each of the charged crimes in concert with others through his participation in several related JCEs. First, the Accused was a key member of an overarching JCE, which lasted from at least October 1991 until 30 November 1995, the object of which was the permanent removal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory in Bosnia-Herzegovina through the crimes charged.<sup>13418</sup> Secondly, the Accused participated in a JCE to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo through a campaign of sniping and shelling between 12 May 1992 and November 1995.<sup>13419</sup> Thirdly, he participated in a JCE to eliminate the Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica between ‘the days immediately preceding’ 11 July 1995 and 1 November 1995.<sup>13420</sup> Fourthly, the Accused participated in a JCE to take UN personnel as hostages during May and June 1995.<sup>13421</sup> Further details about the charges will be set out in chapters 9.2, 9.4, 9.6, and 9.8 below.

3557. The Defence claimed that the third form of JCE liability is without legal basis, and should not be considered part of customary international law as it has been rejected in multiple domestic jurisdictions and by other international courts and tribunals.<sup>13422</sup> The Defence further asserted that the Overarching JCE, as presented by the Prosecution, is too expansive, and that Tadić and subsequent case-law is limited to smaller-scale cases.<sup>13423</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that it is not bound by the decisions of other courts, either domestic or international,<sup>13424</sup> and affirms (as set out below) that the third form of JCE liability is firmly established in the jurisprudence of the Appeals Chamber. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber acknowledged that the application of JCE liability is not limited to small-scale fact scenarios or geographical regions, and thus rejects the Defence's arguments concerning the scope of the Overarching JCE.<sup>13425</sup>

3558. In the context of the Tribunal's jurisprudence, the JCE doctrine received its first detailed treatment in the Tadić Appeal Judgment.<sup>13426</sup> The Tadić Appeals Chamber found in broad terms that a person who in execution of a common criminal purpose contributes to the commission of crimes by a group of persons may be held criminally liable subject to certain conditions.<sup>13427</sup> The Appeals Chamber's analysis of customary international law resulted in the identification and definition of three forms of JCE liability. In the first JCE form:

all co-defendants, acting pursuant to a common design, possess the same criminal intention; for instance, the formulation of a plan among the co-perpetrators to kill, where, in effecting this common design (and even if each co-perpetrator carries out a different role within it), they [...] all possess the intent to kill.

The objective and subjective prerequisites for imputing criminal responsibility to a participant who did not, or cannot be proven to have effected the killing are as follows:

- (i) the accused must voluntarily participate in one aspect of the common design (for instance, by inflicting non-fatal violence upon the victim, or by providing material assistance to or facilitating the activities of his co-perpetrators); and
- (ii) the accused, even if not personally effecting the killing, must nevertheless intend this result.<sup>13428</sup>

3559. The second form of JCE, which is described as a type of the first form, was found to have served cases where the offences charged were alleged to have been committed by members of military or administrative units, such as those running concentration camps and comparable 'systems'.<sup>13429</sup>

3560. The third form of JCE is characterized by a common criminal design to pursue a course of conduct where one or more of the co-perpetrators commit an act which, while outside the common design, is a natural and foreseeable consequence of the implementation of that design.<sup>13430</sup> There are two additional requirements for this form, one objective, the other subjective.<sup>13431</sup> The objective element does not depend upon the accused's state of mind. This is the requirement that the resulting crime was a natural and foreseeable consequence of the JCE's execution. It is to be distinguished from the subjective state of mind, namely that the accused was aware that the resulting crime was a possible consequence of the execution of the JCE, and participated with that awareness.<sup>13432</sup>

3561. To summarize the elements of the first and third forms of JCE:

(i) Plurality of persons. A JCE exists when a plurality of persons participates in the realization of a common criminal objective.<sup>13433</sup> The persons participating in the criminal enterprise need not be organized in a military, political, or administrative structure.<sup>13434</sup> They must be identified with specificity, for instance by name or by categories or groups of persons.<sup>13435</sup>

(ii) A common objective which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute. The first form of the JCE exists where the common objective amounts to, or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute. The mens rea required for the first form is that the JCE participants, including the accused, had a common state of mind, namely the state of mind of intent in relation to the statutory crime(s) through which the common objective was to be achieved.<sup>13436</sup>

The third form of the JCE depends on whether it is natural and foreseeable that the execution of the JCE in its first form will lead to the commission of one or more other statutory crimes. In addition to the intent of the first form, the third form requires proof that the accused person took the risk that another statutory crime, not forming part of the common criminal objective, but nevertheless being a natural and foreseeable consequence of the JCE, would be committed.<sup>13437</sup>

According to the Appeals Chamber, the common objective need not have been previously arranged or formulated.<sup>13438</sup> This means that the second JCE element does not presume preparatory planning or explicit agreement among JCE participants, or between JCE participants and third persons.<sup>13439</sup>

Moreover, a JCE may exist even if none or only some of the principal perpetrators of the crimes are members of the JCE. For example, a JCE may exist where none of the principal perpetrators are aware of the JCE or its objective, yet are procured by one or more members of the JCE to commit crimes which further that objective. Thus, ‘to hold a member of a JCE responsible for crimes committed by non-members of the enterprise, it has to be shown that the crime can be imputed to one member of the JCE, and that this member – when using a principal perpetrator – acted in accordance with the common plan’.<sup>13440</sup>

(iii) Participation of the accused in the objective’s implementation. This is achieved by the accused’s commission of a crime forming part of the common objective (and provided for in the Statute). Alternatively, instead of committing the intended crime as a principal perpetrator, the accused’s conduct may satisfy this element if it involved procuring or giving assistance to the execution of a crime forming part of the common objective.<sup>13441</sup> A contribution of an accused person to the JCE need not be, as a matter of law, necessary or substantial, but it should at least be a significant contribution to the crimes for which the accused is found responsible.<sup>13442</sup>

It follows from that and the above that the first form of the JCE requires intent in the sense of dolus directus and that recklessness or dolus eventualis does not suffice.

In relation to the first two elements of JCE liability, it is the common objective that begins to transform a plurality of persons into a group, or enterprise, because what this plurality then has in common is the particular objective. It is evident, however, that a common objective alone is not always sufficient to determine a group, because different and independent groups may happen to share identical objectives. It is thus the interaction or cooperation among persons – their joint action – in addition to their common objective that forges a group out of a mere plurality.<sup>13443</sup> In other words, the persons in a criminal enterprise must be shown to act together, or in concert with each other, in the implementation of a common objective, if they are to share responsibility for crimes committed through the JCE.<sup>13444</sup>

9.1.2 Planning, instigating, ordering, and aiding and abetting

3562. Each Count of the Indictment charges the Accused, in addition to his participation in the JCEs, with individual criminal responsibility under Article 7 (1) of the Statute pursuant to the modes of liability of planning, instigating, ordering, and/or aiding and abetting the crimes charged.

3563. Article 7 (1) also reflects the principle that criminal responsibility for a crime in Articles 2 to 5 of the Statute does not attach solely to individuals who commit crimes, but may also extend to individuals who plan, instigate, order, and/or aid and abet the crimes. For an accused to be found liable for a crime pursuant to one of these modes of responsibility, the crime in question must actually have been committed.<sup>13445</sup> Furthermore, his or her actions must have contributed substantially to the commission of the crime.<sup>13446</sup> Liability may also attach to omissions, where there is a duty to act.<sup>13447</sup>

3564. Planning. Liability may be incurred by planning a crime that is later committed by the principal perpetrator.<sup>13448</sup> The planner must intend that the crime be committed, or intend that the plan be executed in the awareness of the substantial likelihood that it would lead to the commission of the crime.<sup>13449</sup>

3565. Instigating. Liability may be incurred by instigating the principal perpetrator to commit a crime.<sup>13450</sup> The instigator must intend that the crime be committed or be aware of the substantial likelihood that the crime would be committed as a consequence of his or her conduct.<sup>13451</sup>

3566. Ordering. Liability may be incurred by ordering the principal perpetrator to commit a crime or to engage in conduct that results in the commission of a crime.<sup>13452</sup> The person giving the order must, at the time it is given, be in a position of formal or informal authority over the person who commits the crime.<sup>13453</sup> The person giving the order must intend that the crime be committed or be aware of the substantial likelihood that the crime would be committed in the execution of the order.<sup>13454</sup>

3567. Aiding and abetting. Liability may be incurred by assisting, encouraging, or lending moral support to the commission of a crime where this support has a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime.<sup>13455</sup> Aiding and abetting by omission requires that the accused had the means to fulfil his or her duty to act.<sup>13456</sup> Aiding and abetting may occur before, during, or after the commission of the principal crime.<sup>13457</sup> The assessment of whether an act or omission had a substantial effect on the commission of a crime is a fact-based inquiry.<sup>13458</sup> When making this assessment, the Trial Chamber does not have to find that the acts carried out by the aider and abettor are specifically directed to assist, encourage, or lend moral support to the perpetration of that crime.<sup>13459</sup> As regards the mens rea element, the aider and abettor must have knowledge that his or her acts or omissions assist in the commission of the crime of the principal perpetrator.<sup>13460</sup> The aider and abettor must also be aware of the principal perpetrator's criminal acts, although not their legal characterization, and his or her criminal state of mind.<sup>13461</sup> This includes the specific intent of the principal perpetrator, if the crime requires such intent.<sup>13462</sup> The aider and abettor does not, however, need to know either the precise crime that was intended or the one that was actually committed; it is sufficient that he or she be aware that one of a number of crimes will probably be committed, if one of those crimes is in fact committed.<sup>13463</sup>

7 (3) with regard to a crime that is within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal and that was perpetrated by his or her subordinate, the following elements must be established:

- (a) the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship;
- (b) the superior knew or had reason to know that his or her subordinate was about to commit a crime or had done so; and
- (c) the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent his or her subordinate's criminal conduct or punish his or her subordinate for that conduct.<sup>13464</sup>

3569. Superior-subordinate relationship. A superior may be held liable only if he or she has the material ability to prevent and punish crimes perpetrated by the subordinate ('effective control').<sup>13465</sup> The relationship of subordination can be direct or indirect,<sup>13466</sup> within a hierarchy that is formal or informal,<sup>13467</sup> de jure or de facto,<sup>13468</sup> and civilian or military.<sup>13469</sup>

of the Statute.<sup>13472</sup> The superior need not know the identities of the subordinates who perpetrate the crimes.<sup>13473</sup>

3571. Failure to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish. Necessary measures are those measures appropriate for the superior to fulfil his or her obligation to genuinely try to prevent or punish, and reasonable measures are those which reasonably fall within the material powers of the superior.<sup>13474</sup> The duty to prevent and the duty to punish are distinct legal obligations, and a superior may be held liable for violating either duty.<sup>13475</sup> The duty to prevent attaches to a superior from the moment he or she knows or has reason to know that a crime is about to be committed, while the duty to punish only arises after the commission of a crime.<sup>13476</sup> The duty to punish includes, at a minimum, the obligation to investigate possible crimes or have the matter investigated, and if the superior has no power to sanction, to report them to the competent authorities.<sup>13477</sup>

3572. The Trial Chamber has also considered the body of evidence on the crimes committed during the Indictment period. This evidence has been reviewed in chapters 4-7 above and the Trial Chamber here considered what, if anything, could be inferred from this evidence with regard to the alleged objective of the JCE.

9.2 First (overarching) joint criminal enterprise

9.2.1 Overview of the charges

3573. According to the Indictment, as of 12 May 1992, the Accused was a key member of an Overarching JCE, which lasted from at least October 1991 until 30 November 1995.<sup>13478</sup> The objective of this JCE was the permanent removal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian-Serb-claimed territory in Bosnia-Herzegovina through the following crimes charged in the Indictment: genocide (Count 1), persecution, extermination, murder, deportation, and inhumane acts (forcible transfer).<sup>13479</sup> The Accused shared the intent for the commission of each of these crimes with other members of the JCE.<sup>13480</sup>

3574. Alternatively, the shared objective included at least the crimes of deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer). It was foreseeable that the crimes of genocide, persecution, extermination, and murder might be perpetrated by one or more members of the JCE or by persons used by any member of the JCE in order to carry out the actus reus of the crimes forming part of the shared objective. With the awareness that such crimes were a possible consequence of the implementation of the objective, the Accused willingly took that risk.<sup>13481</sup>

3575. According to the Indictment, members of the JCE included, in addition to the Accused, Radovan Karadžić, Momčilo Krajišnik, Slobodan Milošević, Biljana Plavšić, Nikola Koljević, Mićo Stanišić, Momčilo Mandić, Jovica Stanišić, Franko Simatović, Željko Ražnatović (a.k.a. members but were used by members of the JCE to carry out crimes committed in furtherance of its objective.<sup>13484</sup>

3576. Members of the JCE implemented their objective by personally committing crimes and/or through and by using others to carry out crimes committed in furtherance of the objective.<sup>13485</sup> Those who were used to carry out the crimes were members of the Bosnian-Serb Political and Governmental Organs (as defined in the Indictment) and members of the Bosnian-Serb MUP ('MUP'), VRS, JNA, VJ, TO, the Serbian MUP, Serbian and Bosnian-Serb paramilitary forces and volunteer units, and local Bosnian Serbs.<sup>13486</sup>

3577. In chapters 9.2.2-9.2.5, the Trial Chamber will address the political developments and the creation of the Bosnian-Serb Republic in 1991 and 1992, with particular focus on the Variant A/B instructions and the Six Strategic Objectives, as well as statements and speeches made by Bosnian-Serb political leaders throughout the Indictment period. The Trial Chamber will then, in chapters 9.2.6-9.2.9, turn to the role of the Bosnian-Serb regional and municipal organs, the MUP, and the VJ, as well as paramilitary formations operating in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic during the Indictment period. In chapters 9.2.10-9.2.12, the Trial Chamber will consider the Prosecution's allegations regarding the systematic cover-up (including the cover-up of murder of people buried at Tomašica) and the failure to investigate and prosecute crimes. In chapter 9.2.13, the Trial Chamber will address the Defence's submissions concerning revenge and related arguments. In its conclusion in chapter 9.2.14, the Trial Chamber will determine whether a JCE as alleged by the Prosecution existed and, if so, what crimes it included and who its members were. In this respect, the Trial Chamber will further consider the body of evidence on the crimes committed during the Indictment period. This evidence has been reviewed in chapters 4-7, above.

9.2.2 Political developments and the role of the SDS in the lead-up to the conflict in 1991 and 1992 and the political platform espoused by its leadership. The Prosecution argued that in the months leading up to 12 May 1992, members of the alleged JCE had already established a policy of forcible ethnic separation and were determined to establish an ethnically separate and homogenous Bosnian-Serb entity within the territory of Bosnia-Herzegovina, including in areas inhabited by vast numbers of Bosnian Muslims.<sup>13487</sup> In 1991 and 1992, the Bosnian-Serb leadership, through the SDS, established ethnically separate parallel structures and took several steps in preparation for ethnic separation, including organising military training, mobilising Serb TO and paramilitary units, and distributing weapons together with the JNA.<sup>13488</sup> As a hierarchical organisation, the republic-level SDS bodies set policy and directed local SDS organs, who implemented said policy and reported back regarding events in their municipalities.<sup>13489</sup>

3579. The Defence argued that beginning in 1991, Bosnian Serbs felt increasingly threatened in politics and society.<sup>13490</sup> While the SDS pursued peaceful and collaborative efforts to remain part of the FRY, it was repeatedly outvoted and ignored by the SDA and the HDZ.<sup>13491</sup> Meanwhile, the SDA pursued a path of political dominance and, despite the known objections of the Bosnian Serbs, continued to work towards Bosnia-Herzegovina's independence.<sup>13492</sup> Given the historical context and the illegal nature of the memorandum of sovereignty proposed by the SDA and the HDZ, the establishment of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly on 21 October 1991 was the only possible route to protect the rights of the Serb minority and a direct response to the actions of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.<sup>13493</sup> According to the Defence, the Bosnian Serbs did not foresee war as a possible outcome and were not preparing for it, as shown by the fact that the SDS had to make reactive decisions following the aggressive political actions of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, who had begun to prepare themselves for war.<sup>13494</sup>

3580. With regard to the role of the SDS and the political developments that took place in the lead-up to the conflict, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of 3581. From 1945 until 1990, Yugoslavia was composed of six Republics: Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, Montenegro, Serbia, and Slovenia.<sup>13512</sup> Certain Republics were populated predominantly by one ethnic group: for example, Serbs in Serbia and Croats in Croatia.<sup>13513</sup> The Second World War was a time of particularly bitter strife in the former Yugoslavia, with accusations of atrocities emanating from all quarters. Maršal Tito's post-war government discouraged ethnic division and nationalism with a focus on the unity of the communist state. Thus, the period from 1945 until 1990 was marked by relative calm and peaceful inter-ethnic relations, although the various groups remained conscious of their separate identities.<sup>13514</sup> In the late 1980s, economic woes and the end of communist rule set the stage for rising nationalism and ethnic friction.<sup>13515</sup> On 25 June 1991, Croatia and Slovenia declared their independence from the SFRY.<sup>13516</sup> The JNA's attempts to seize control of strategic assets in Slovenia were thwarted by the local TO, and the conflict in Slovenia effectively ended on 18 July.<sup>13517</sup> Macedonia broke off successfully in September 1991.<sup>13518</sup> Bosnia-Herzegovina, more than any other republic of the former Yugoslavia, was multi-ethnic for centuries, with Serbs, Muslims, and Croats as the predominant nationalities.<sup>13519</sup>

3582. In November 1990, the first free, multi-party elections were held in Bosnia-Herzegovina, for both municipal assemblies and for the Republican Legislature.<sup>13520</sup>

The most prominent newly-formed political parties in Bosnia-Herzegovina were the SDA, the SDS, and the HDZ.<sup>13521</sup> For the Republican Assembly, the SDA party gained a narrow margin over the SDS.<sup>13522</sup> The outcome of the election was a reflection of an ethnic census of the population with each ethnic group voting for its own nationalist party.<sup>13523</sup> A census in April 1991 recorded that 43.7 per cent of the residents of Bosnia-Herzegovina were ethnic Muslims, 32.4 per cent were Serbs, and 17.3 per cent were Croats.<sup>13524</sup>

3583. Following the November 1990 elections, the SDA, SDS, and HDZ reached an agreement among themselves on a formula for the distribution of power.<sup>13525</sup> A coalition government was thus formed headed by a seven-member State Presidency, with the leader of the SDA, Alija Izetbegović, as the first President.<sup>13526</sup> The SDA, SDS, and HDZ agreed that, at the most senior level, the Prime Minister would be from the HDZ, the President of the Assembly from the SDS, and the President of the Presidency from the SDA (the persons appointed were Jure Pelivan, Momčilo Krajišnik, and Alija Izetbegović, respectively).<sup>13527</sup> Positions in all Government organs and public institutions with government appointees were distributed in accordance with party quotas.<sup>13528</sup> This arrangement stamped out opposition by smaller parties and sowed the seeds for the establishment of parallel ethnic structures.<sup>13529</sup> The SDS, for example, received a vice-presidential position, two Ministers without portfolio, and five out of thirteen departmental portfolios in the Government, as well as eight out of thirty chairmanships of Assembly committees and commissions.<sup>13530</sup> At the local level, a similar division of posts was made, reflecting the percentages gained by each party in the elections.<sup>13531</sup> These percentages corresponded to the ethnic composition of each municipality.<sup>13532</sup> After the quotas were distributed, the three parties shared control over appointments made at every level of administration.<sup>13533</sup>

3584. In the Bosnia-Herzegovina Republican Assembly, co-operation between the Muslim and Serbian political parties proved increasingly difficult as time went by.<sup>13534</sup> What was initially a coalition government of the Republic broke down in October 1991 and failed completely in January 1992.<sup>13535</sup> The disintegration of multi-ethnic federal Yugoslavia was thus swiftly followed by the disintegration of multi-ethnic Bosnia-Herzegovina, and the prospect of war in Bosnia-Herzegovina increased.<sup>13536</sup>

3585. In 1990 and 1991, the SDS was funded by voluntary contributions and enjoyed the support of the overwhelming majority of Bosnian Serbs.<sup>13537</sup> Its main organs included the party Assembly, formally the supreme body; the SDS Main Board, the highest party organ at times when the Assembly was not in session; the SDS Executive Board, the executive arm of the Main Board; the president of the party, who was also the president of the Main Board; and several advisory bodies, such as the SDS Political and Economic Councils and the Commission for Personnel and Organization.<sup>13538</sup> The party was a hierarchical structure, organized into municipal assemblies and boards resembling the republican organs.<sup>13539</sup>

3586. Patrick Treanor testified that from its inception, the SDS, particularly the top Bosnian-Serb leadership, regarded itself as the legitimate representative of the ‘Serbian people’ in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13540</sup> In November 1990, SDS candidates Biljana Plavšić and Nikola Koljević were elected members of the Bosnia-Herzegovina Presidency.<sup>13541</sup> In this capacity, Plavšić received regular reports from the security services of Bosnia-Herzegovina and was able to provide the SDS leadership with detailed information about the political and security situation in the country.<sup>13542</sup> According to Treanor, Plavšić was one of the most senior SDS leaders by virtue of her position and power, as well as her relationships with Radovan Karadžić, from whom she took advice, instructions, and orders, and with other senior leaders, frequently acting as a representative of the SDS.<sup>13543</sup>

3587. The SDS President – i.e. Karadžić – was the most important and powerful party institution.<sup>13544</sup> While the Main and the Executive Boards were important operational institutions, SDS-affiliated groups, including parliamentary representatives, office holders in the central government, and administration of Bosnia-Herzegovina, as well as municipal SDS leaders and other leadership bodies, including the Deputies Club, played an important part in decision-making and policy-setting.<sup>13545</sup> According to Treanor, numerous telephone conversations indicate that small, informal, changing groups of powerful individuals within the SDS constituted an operational decision-making centre within the SDS.<sup>13546</sup>

3588. Treanor testified that in addition to sessions of the Main Board, the Executive Board, and the Deputies Club, the Bosnian-Serb leadership also used expanded gatherings of middle and lower level party officials to communicate instructions and information to the grassroots level directly.<sup>13547</sup> According to Treanor, in mid-October 1991, in response to the Assembly of Bosnia-Herzegovina voting in favour of independence on 14 and 15 October 1991, the Bosnian-Serb leadership initiated the establishment of parallel organs of power.<sup>13548</sup> On 15 October 1991, during a meeting between the collective Presidency of Bosnia-Herzegovina and the JNA, Koljević and Plavšić used their formal powers to advance SDS policy.<sup>13549</sup>

3589. From the moment of its creation, the SDS political platform included an emphasis on the protection of the Serb nation, which was said to be disadvantaged by the purported lower birth rate of Serbs and by the way Bosnia-Herzegovina had been divided into municipalities, effectively making Serbs an ethnic minority in areas where they might otherwise have dominated.<sup>13550</sup> Milan Babić stated that the SDS was founded with the object of covering the whole area of the SFRY.<sup>13551</sup> The SDS splintered into independent autonomous parties in the Krajina, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Serbia, and Montenegro after the autumn of 1990.<sup>13552</sup> The SDS of Bosnia-Herzegovina was founded in July 1990 with Karadžić as president.<sup>13553</sup>

3590. According to Babić, Karadžić, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were the main leaders of the SDS and the governmental structures of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>13554</sup> Slobodan Milošević and Karadžić were very close collaborators.<sup>13555</sup> Babić stated that the discussion on the future of Yugoslavia was rather intense in 1990 and that there were two approaches. The first, a political approach by Serbia, was that Yugoslavia would be set up as a strong federation; the second, adopted by Croatia and Slovenia, was that they should be independent states set up as a confederation. According to Babić, the Serbs opted for the approach taken in Belgrade, that of ‘Yugoslavia as a firm federation’.<sup>13556</sup> He stated that in as early as January 1991, Milošević began to advocate, including in public speeches, that in case of a full disintegration of Yugoslavia, Serbs had a right to live and remain in one state.<sup>13557</sup> According to Milošević, Serbs could not live in a confederation of four independent states.<sup>13558</sup> The Bosnian-Serb leadership shared Milošević’s position regarding ‘all Serbs in one state’.<sup>13559</sup> The Bosnian-Serb leadership considered that ‘the Serbian people’ had a historical right to territory in which Serbs constituted a majority of the population, as well as territory in Bosnia-Herzegovina in which Serbs constituted a majority before World War II.<sup>13560</sup> Many Bosnian-Serb leaders referred to Muslims as ‘Turks’, an expression that went beyond a simple derogatory meaning, also expressing historic hostility.<sup>13561</sup>

3591. A confidential SDS document, dated 23 February 1991, considered specific actions to be taken should Bosnia-Herzegovina move towards independence.<sup>13562</sup> In such a case municipal authorities were to ensure that only Yugoslav (federal) law would apply, suspending the implementation of republican regulations and thus creating ‘a legal foundation for direct communication (assistance, cooperation, and the like) between these municipalities and the Federation and its organs (such as the SFRY Assembly, Presidency, federal Executive Council ...) and through them, this would provide particularly for the need to engage the Yugoslav People's Army, and the Federal Secretariat for National Defence'.<sup>13563</sup> This policy was adopted by the SDS Deputies' Club, the parliamentary caucus of the party, and was made public in a document dated 10 June 1991.<sup>13564</sup>

3592. In April 1991, SDS delegates in the Municipal Assembly of Pale, which was the Sarajevo municipality with the highest percentage of Bosnian-Serb inhabitants and SDS municipal assembly delegates, announced their intention to secede from 'the city of Sarajevo'.<sup>13565</sup> At the end of 1991 and the beginning of 1992, Bosnian-Serb nationalists in the area of Sarajevo created separate, parallel Bosnian-Serb institutions at the city and municipal levels.<sup>13566</sup> On 24 December 1991, the SDS formed a Crisis Staff for Sarajevo.<sup>13567</sup>

3593. Miroslav Deronjić stated that during a meeting with members of the SDS and party officials, the deputies and the presidents of the SDS municipal boards, held in Sarajevo in April 1991, Karadžić said that 'if a Federative Yugoslavia no longer exists, and there is every indication that it no longer exists, the only option for the Serbs in Bosnia and Serbs in general is a Greater Serbia'.<sup>13568</sup> Karadžić also mentioned that if Bosnia were to secede from Yugoslavia, it would be divided.<sup>13569</sup> After the meeting, Deronjić joined a small group of people, including Karadžić, Goran Zekić, Velibor Ostojić, and Slobodanka Hrvaćanin in a restaurant, where Karadžić announced that 'it had been agreed that Bosnia would be divided'.<sup>13570</sup>

3594. Babić stated that in May 1991, he attended a meeting in Karadžić's flat with Jovica Stanišić, Franko Simatović, Milan Martić, and Velibor Ostojić.<sup>13571</sup> At that time, Ostojić was the Minister of Information of the government of Bosnia-Herzegovina, a member of the Executive Board of the SDS for Bosnia-Herzegovina and a close associate of Karadžić.<sup>13572</sup> Ostojić, Stanisić, and Karadžić led the meeting in which they discussed maps of where the Serbs were in control and areas where the SDS should establish control.<sup>13573</sup> An agreement on cooperation between the SAO Krajina in Croatia and the Community of Municipalities of Bosnian Krajina where Serbs were the majority of the population, dated 24 June 1991, set out the concept and manner of integration between the two regions.<sup>13574</sup>

3595. During a July 1991 meeting with Babić and Milošević, Karadžić said that he would chase the Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina into the river valleys in order to link up all Serb territories there into one.<sup>13575</sup> During this meeting, Karadžić claimed that he had Izetbegović in his pocket, and could settle accounts with him at any time, but that it would be better to wait for Izetbegović to make the first wrong political move and that would be the time when the Muslims would be expelled.<sup>13576</sup> Karadžić talked about the leadership's plans for Serbs to take over control of territories in Bosnia-Herzegovina, including those in which Serbs were a majority at the time, as well as those in which they were not.<sup>13577</sup> During the meeting, Milošević asked Karadžić where the JNA should be deployed.<sup>13578</sup> Karadžić replied that the JNA should be deployed on the border with Croatia and the witness said, '[i]n Krajina to protect Krajina,' to which Milošević said 'fine'.<sup>13579</sup> After this meeting, Milošević agreed that Karadžić and Babić should go to Celinac, where Karadžić had called a meeting of activists from the SDS from the autonomous area of Bosanska Krajina, to tell them that actions to unite the two Krajinas should not be taken at that time.<sup>13580</sup> Karadžić also stated that he did not know whether he should take Zenica from the Muslims.<sup>13581</sup> Milošević then told the witness that he should not bother or get in Karadžić's way.<sup>13582</sup>

3596. Later that day, Karadžić and the witness attended the meeting in Celinac organized by Radoslav Brđanin, the President of the SDS ARK regional board, and attended by 10 to 15 leaders from the region of Banja Luka.<sup>13583</sup> At this meeting, Karadžić repeated what he had said at the earlier meeting with Milošević, that by expelling Muslims, he would create a unified Serb territory in Bosnia-Herzegovina, to which the Krajina would be joined.<sup>13584</sup>

3597. The conflict between Serbia and Croatia, following the declaration of independence by Croatia in June 1991, exacerbated the tension between Bosnia-Herzegovina's three ethnic groups.<sup>13585</sup> In connection with the conflict in Croatia, sporadic clashes occurred in Bosnia-Herzegovina when federal authorities attempted to mobilize part of the non-Serb population.<sup>13586</sup> The armed conflicts in Slovenia and Croatia increased animosity between the SDS, on the one hand, and the SDA and HDZ, on the other.<sup>13587</sup> In September 1991, as part of a wider JNA operation in Croatia, the JNA 5th Corps, based in Bosnia-Herzegovina during peacetime, was mobilized and deployed in Croatia.<sup>13588</sup> separate Serb political, police, and military structures in order to institute, at a later stage, separate governmental functions uniting the Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13592</sup>

3599. In September 1991, the SDS implemented the policy of ‘regionalization’, which consisted in the creation of ‘regions’ in which Serbs were the relative majority.<sup>13593</sup> The SDS established Bosnian-Serb controlled areas by linking Bosnian-Serb populated municipalities together and by establishing parallel government bodies, with a view to removing that territory from the effective control of the authorities of the Socialist Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13594</sup> SDS party leaders justified the associations of municipalities in terms of economic necessity.<sup>13595</sup> However, among the functions the SDS assigned to the Bosnian Krajina community of municipalities was the organization of its defence in times of war or imminent threat of war.<sup>13596</sup> The SDS party leadership, in agreement with the political establishment in Serbia, began considering options for a break-up of Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines and a realignment of component parts with neighbouring states.<sup>13597</sup> In September 1991, it was announced that several SAOs in Bosnia-Herzegovina had been proclaimed, including Krajina, Romanija and Stara Herzegovina.<sup>13598</sup> On 16 September, the SDS Executive Board approved the appointment of a regionalization staff.<sup>13599</sup>

3600. On 7 September 1991, a decision was taken during the Pale Symposium of municipal, regional, and republic SDS organs on appointing staff for regional organisations.<sup>13600</sup> They were tasked with observing the implementation of (i) the promulgation of autonomous regions as unquestionable parts of the federal state of Yugoslavia and as constituent parts of the federal unit of Bosnia and Herzegovina and (ii) the separation of settlements of one municipality and their integration into another municipality.<sup>13601</sup> According to Treanor, this consultation of SDS officials launched the next stage of regionalization.<sup>13602</sup>

3601. On 13 September 1991, Rajko Đukić, the President of the Executive Board of the SDS of Bosnia-Herzegovina, requested all municipalities and city boards of the SDS to undertake the activities related to the regionalization, such as the monitoring of the decision on the proclamation of SAOs, through the regionalization staff appointed pursuant to a decision of the SDS President, Karadžić, on 9 September 1991.<sup>13603</sup>

3602. Herbert Okun stated that from October 1991 onwards, the Bosnian-Serb leadership, including Krajišnik and Koljević, consistently and repeatedly argued that Bosnian Serbs had a historical claim to 65 per cent of the land, even though they represented only 35 per cent of the population in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13604</sup>

3603. According to an intercepted conversation with a certain Gojko Đogo in Belgrade, on 12 October 1991, Karadžić stated that there were 20,000 ‘armed Serbs’ around Sarajevo, and that should the Bosnian Muslims ‘rise up against the Serbs’ and attempt to secede: they would ‘disappear’; Sarajevo would be a ‘black cauldron where 300,000 Muslims will die’: and ‘the Muslim people would be exterminated’.<sup>13605</sup> He further said it was clear that the Bosnian Muslims did not have any way to secede without bloodshed.<sup>13606</sup>

3604. Treanor testified that starting in mid-October 1991, the goal of the Bosnian-Serb leadership was to assert de facto authority in territories regarded as Serb and the territorial division along ethnic lines, regardless of whether Bosnia-Herzegovina remained part of the FRY.<sup>13607</sup> Treanor testified that based on a conversation with Milošević in October 1991, Karadžić appeared more radical; he stressed that without any moderate Muslims to appeal to, there would be action and no more compromise.<sup>13608</sup> This action meant the ethnic take-over of the majority (60 to 65 per cent) of Bosnia-Herzegovina’s territory, a Serb Bosnia-Herzegovina, and the establishment of relations with the Muslims and Croats based on the confederate principle.<sup>13609</sup> With Serbs forming 35 per cent of the population in Bosnia-Herzegovina and controlling a large part of its territory, Karadžić stated that the Muslims would suffer enormous casualties, repeatedly emphasizing their physical ‘disappearance’ or ‘extinction’ in case of conflict and that they would stand no chance of surviving.<sup>13610</sup> According to Treanor, based on a telex Brđanin sent to presidents of municipal assemblies in October 1991, concerning Karadžić’s ‘Sarajevo SDS orders’, SDS channels of communication functioned seamlessly.<sup>13611</sup> The Bosnian-Serb leadership consistently transmitted its orders to subordinate levels, and its messages were heard loud and clear.<sup>13612</sup>

3605. Treanor testified that the overall Bosnian-Serb strategy included the arming of Serbs, military support from the JNA, and the intention of staying in Yugoslavia.<sup>13613</sup>

Tarik Kupusović stated that when the JNA withdrew from Croatia and Slovenia, a large quantity of weapons arrived in Bosnia-Herzegovina, particularly in Sarajevo.<sup>13614</sup>

Witness RM-015 testified that the arming of the Serb population began immediately after the multi-party elections in 1990.<sup>13615</sup> SDS representatives were responsible for arming Serbs in their respective areas, which included distributing JNA arms.<sup>13616</sup>

Zijo Hadžić stated that a distribution of weapon took place in 1991 and into 1992.<sup>13617</sup> All the weapons received by local Serbs in Kalinovik came from the JNA and that he personally observed trucks delivering weapons to Serb households at night.<sup>13618</sup>

According to Alija Isaković and Witness RM-081, weapons provided by the JNA were secretly distributed exclusively to Serbs in Rogatica and the surrounding villages by

3606. Deronjić stated that in 1991, he and Goran Zekić drove to Belgrade to meet Mihalj Kertes in the building of the Presidency of Serbia.<sup>13622</sup> Kertes told them that he was in charge of the overall arming operation from the political side, with the main goal that ‘everything would be Serbian, pure Serbian, in an area of 50 kilometres from the Drina River’.<sup>13623</sup> Witness RM-066 testified that in autumn 1991, both Serbs and Muslims were arming themselves.<sup>13624</sup> Weapons were distributed door-to-door among the Serb population in Vlasenica by SDS workers, including Goran Višković.<sup>13625</sup>

3607. By autumn 1991, two political options for the settlement of the ‘Bosnian question’ openly competed in the Assembly of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13626</sup> One option, espoused by the SDA and the HDZ as well as the majority of opposition parties, envisaged sovereign and internationally recognized statehood for Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13627</sup> The other option, preferred by the SDS and some of the smaller parties, was that Bosnia-Herzegovina should remain within Yugoslavia.<sup>13628</sup> Each side opposed the other’s option.<sup>13629</sup> By October 1991, the three-party coalition was crumbling.<sup>13630</sup> The SDA and HDZ pressed the Bosnia-Herzegovina Assembly to discuss a declaration of sovereignty of Bosnia-Herzegovina, which would pave the way for the republic to assert its independence from Yugoslavia.<sup>13631</sup> The SDS protested that such a declaration would be unconstitutional as it would infringe on the rights of one nationality recognized by the Bosnia-Herzegovina constitution, namely the Serbs, and it had not been vetted by the Council for Ethnic Equality.<sup>13632</sup>

3608. In the course of the debate on whether to vote on such a declaration of sovereignty, during the night of 14 and 15 October 1991 when the SDA and the HDZ decided to proceed with the vote, Momčilo Krajišnik, as President of the Assembly, adjourned the session to the next morning.<sup>13633</sup> The SDS deputies, as well as most Serb deputies not in the SDS, left the hall.<sup>13634</sup> However, the vice-president of the Assembly then reconvened the session and the declaration was adopted.<sup>13635</sup> In Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Parliament declared the sovereignty of the Republic on 15 October 1991.<sup>13636</sup>

3609. During the 8th Joint Session of the Assembly of the Socialist Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina, held on 14 and 15 October 1991, Karadžić spoke about whether Bosnia-Herzegovina should remain part of Yugoslavia, emphasizing that this was the wish of the Serbs.<sup>13637</sup> Directing himself to the SDA, he stated 'We will prevent you before national and international public to perform violence over the Serbian people, the constitutional violence, because after constitutional violence, all other kinds of violence would follow'.<sup>13638</sup> He added:

We do not decide about the situation if we get into the situation in which Slovenia and Croatia are. Especially Croatia, but taking into consideration that this hell in Bosnia and Herzegovina would be thousand times more difficult and there would be no way to stop it. And, I have to send a message to all Members of Parliament. Gentlemen, I assure you first, even if you adopted certain decisions tonight, and there is no way that you will, because we have a constitutional way to prevent you from voting, but even if you adopted a certain decision tonight, that would be a scandal for Mr. IZETBEGOVIĆ in The Hague because we have ways to prevent this /from happening/ in The Hague. That would be scandal for this Parliament in Europe and for all those people in Yugoslavia and Europe. It would especially be your scandal, Croats and Muslims, who are loyal to this idea, and the proof that you don't respect sovereignty and equality of Serbian people in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

This is the road you choose for Bosnia and Herzegovina. This road is the same highway of hell and suffering which Slovenia and Croatia took. Do not think that you will not take Bosnia and Herzegovina to hell, and maybe the disappearance of the Muslim people, because Muslim people cannot defend themselves if the war breaks out here.<sup>13639</sup>

3610. On 15 October 1991, Karadžić told his brother, Luka Karadžić, that a Muslim attempt to create an independent Bosnia-Herzegovina ‘would mean war until their extinction’, as Serbs ‘would never forgive them such a thing’ and ‘it would destroy them completely’.<sup>13640</sup> He further stated that all of the Bosnian-Muslim leaders would be killed in three to four hours and had no chance of surviving whatsoever.<sup>13641</sup>

3611. On 15 October 1991, the SDS Political Council met to assess the situation.<sup>13642</sup> During this and other meetings, the idea emerged that the SDS should form its own institutions, which would function in parallel to those of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13643</sup> On 16 October 1991, the SDS’s ‘Announcement to the Serbian people’ stated that the SDA and HDZ had breached the constitutional order.<sup>13644</sup> It reiterated the SDS’s support for federal institutions, including the JNA.<sup>13645</sup> Dorothea Hanson testified that on 18 October 1991, Karadžić ordered a state of emergency in the SDS.<sup>13646</sup>

3612. During the session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly on 24 October 1991, Bosnian-Serb deputies passed a resolution that ‘the Serbian people of Bosnia-Herzegovina shall stay in the joint state of Yugoslavia together with Serbia, Montenegro, SAO Krajina, SAO Slavonija, Baranja, Western Sirmium [Zapadni Srem], and others who may declare that they wished to stay,’ subject to confirmation by a plebiscite.<sup>13647</sup> The Bosnian-Serb deputies of the Bosnia-Herzegovina parliament proclaimed a separate Assembly of the Serb Nation on that day.<sup>13648</sup> Twenty-three sessions of the Bosnian-

Serb Assembly were held between October 1991 and December 1992.<sup>13649</sup> In this respect, the Trial Chamber refers to its review of the establishment and structure of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly in chapter 2.1.2.

3613. At the constituting session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly on 24 October 1991, Karadžić stated: ‘The Serbian people is [...] assembling its spiritual, cultural, political and state fragments and reassembling them in order to survive. [...] This is a historic step by the Serbian people to shatter the last illusions, to discern between its friends and enemies, and to round out our entity in such a way that [...] it will never again find itself endangered from within.’<sup>13650</sup>

3614. On 26 October 1991, all SDS presidents of the municipalities in the ARK as well as ARK government met with Radovan Karadžić.<sup>13651</sup> During this meeting an order was presented and ‘fully accepted’ by those present.<sup>13652</sup> The order consisted of fourteen points and called for, among other things, a ‘town command’ amounting to a military administration; intensified mobilization of the TO; formation of military units; subordination of the TO to the JNA; disbanding of paramilitary units and their reassignment to the TO; take-over of public enterprises, the post office, banks, judiciary, media, and the SDK (Social Accounting Service); coordination with local directors and with the SDS in Sarajevo to ensure supplies for the population; and imposition of war taxes.<sup>13653</sup> On 29 October 1991, the order was sent by telex to presidents of all municipalities in the ARK by Radoslav Brđanin.<sup>13654</sup> The ARK, in particular, distinguished itself for independent action since its inception, when its authorities started taking over television and radio installations, and broadcasting ‘Serb’ programs that intimidated persons of other nationalities.<sup>13655</sup>

3616. Hanson testified that the process of regionalization, specifically the formation of new Serbian regional entities in the latter half of 1991, was reproduced at the municipal level.<sup>13658</sup>

3617. At the 5th meeting of the SDS Executive Board on 7 November 1991, a report on regionalisation was considered. It was concluded that the former Commission should prepare a blueprint for the organisation of the regions and submit it to the Executive Board, Council and other SDS organs to provide a more thorough overview of the organisation of the regions and the manner of functioning of their respective local authorities. It was said that conditions should be created in the region, which would allow the observance of the principle that every region should include and incorporate the national and territorial treasures.<sup>13659</sup> The aim was to create a ‘Serbian Bosnia-Herzegovina’ within Yugoslavia and to establish relations with the Muslims and the Croats based on the confederate principle.<sup>13660</sup>

3618. On 9 and 10 November 1991, the SDS held a plebiscite, asking voters whether they wished to remain in the SFRY.<sup>13661</sup> The outcome of the plebiscite was cited by the SDS as justification for establishing a separate Serb state within Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13662</sup> During the plebiscite organised by the SDS, which had an almost exclusively Serb turnout, Serbs and non-Serbs were given different ballots.<sup>13663</sup> According to Treanor, the ‘plebiscite of the Serbian People’ would enable Bosnian Serbs to ‘ratify’ the SDS’s policy of remaining in Yugoslavia along with ‘other Serbian communities’, which at the time was being realised through an SDS-orchestrated process of establishing separate institutions.<sup>13664</sup> He testified that the outcome of the Bosnian-Serb plebiscite, unsurprisingly, favoured the Republic remaining within Yugoslavia.<sup>13665</sup>

3619. According to Treanor, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly was ‘not only the creation but also the creature of the SDS’; this was illustrated by the manner in which the idea of a plebiscite among the Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina was introduced and implemented.<sup>13666</sup> Treanor testified that the SDS intended to create legitimacy for its claims that the Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina did not wish to secede from Yugoslavia, and simultaneously create credibility for its claims that the SDS and the Bosnian-Serb Assembly were the only legitimate representative of the Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina and would act on behalf of all Serbs in any negotiations.<sup>13667</sup> Following the plebiscite, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly began negotiating terms with Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13668</sup>

3620. In a November 1991 speech addressing the presidents of the municipalities at the Plebiscite of the Serb People, held in Sarajevo, Karadžić described Muslims as ‘merciless’, noted that in Stari Grad Municipality the Muslims had deprived the Serbs of ‘all rights’, and stated: ‘[E]verything will be done according to the principle of reciprocity. We will behave towards them the way they behave towards us. We alone are not going to move out [...] and have them stay in our areas to settle and build their colonies. In no way are we going to behave like gentlemen wearing white gloves. If you are thrown into the sheepfold, you can play the lamb and nothing will happen to you. But if you are thrown among the wolves, no more talking [...] You can’t be the lamb. You have to be equal to your task and to your adversary.’<sup>13669</sup> He further stated that the Bosnian Serbs must ‘mark our territory as dogs do’.<sup>13670</sup> He further stated:

There is a chance that we will fight. In that case, let the chips fall where they may. They know we are not trying to run away from it. Although one should run /from fighting/, Serbs should still solve /problems/, reach their goals without victims, without a single victim! So long as it is possible. And I think that most Muslims are for it too; they know we are better armed. Serbs are many. In B-H alone, almost half a million soldiers could be mobilised and armed with light and heavy weapons. No one could oppose that. I am telling those foreigners that that war would be bloody and rough. Whether it would be long, I don’t know. But it would be bloody and rough for sure and many things would be decided and solved by it.

[...] I am telling you, whatever Bosnia we have one day, no Muslim foundation shall ever be laid in Serb areas and Serb villages whether or not you import Turks because we will instruct Serbs not to sell land to Muslims (applause and ovation). The first foundations that are laid will be blown up, and all foundations that are laid will be blown up.

The legal side /of the matter/ is in our hands, and so is the factual situation. And the factual situation will be the impossibility of Izetbegović to establish his authority in 70% of the territory. That in no Serb village can he establish his authority, that in no single Serb municipality can he have power, that milicija will have to obey you at the crucial moment, to obey you and to establish law and order in accordance with the Constitution of the SFRY, and not the Constitution of Bosnia-Herzegovina on which they have been working relentlessly.<sup>13671</sup>

3621. On 21 November 1991, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly proclaimed as part of the territory of federal Yugoslavia all those municipalities, communes, and settlements where a majority of registered citizens of Serb nationality had voted in favour of remaining in Yugoslavia.<sup>13672</sup> If the majority in one municipality had voted to remain within Yugoslavia, the whole of that municipality would remain.<sup>13673</sup> Municipalities where the majority of people had not participated in the plebiscite, the SDS proposed to look at single communes or settlements: if local communities had voted to remain, then only that community would be considered part of Yugoslavia, while the rest of the territory of the municipality would be allowed to join an independent Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13674</sup> Also on 21 November 1991, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly adopted a resolution declaring full support for the JNA in defence of the common state of Yugoslavia and in conducting mobilization of the Serb people in Bosnia-Herzegovina, in order to reinforce military units.<sup>13675</sup> The resolution added: 'Serbian people and other people who wish to preserve Yugoslavia are called upon to respond to military call-ups'.<sup>13676</sup> The third act of the Assembly on 21 November 1991 was to certify the proclamation of the SAOs in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13677</sup>

3622. Okun stated that on 2 December 1991, during a meeting between Cyrus Vance, Karadžić, and himself in Belgrade, organized pursuant to Milošević's request, Karadžić argued that it was necessary to preserve Yugoslavia as a federal state.<sup>13678</sup> During this meeting and on subsequent occasions, Karadžić said that the Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina wanted to control all of Bosnia-Herzegovina and that they expected to achieve this through their 'high birth rate'.<sup>13679</sup> In April 1992, Karadžić also stated to Okun that unless the Bosnian-Serb municipalities were to be legally linked to Yugoslavia and the demands of the Bosnian Serbs were not met peacefully, war would result.<sup>13680</sup>

3624. The Variant A/B instructions issued by Karadžić on 19 December 1991, which are alleged to have formed an important part of the policy of the Bosnian-Serb leadership, will be addressed separately in chapter 9.2.3.

3625. Around 20 December 1991, SDS members Nikola Koljević and Biljana Plavšić voiced their opposition to the Bosnia-Herzegovina Presidency's decision to apply to the Badinter Commission – established by the EC to issue advisory opinions on legal matters relating to the Yugoslav crisis – for recognition as an independent state.<sup>13685</sup> On 21 December 1991, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly adopted a statement pointing out that the decisions of the Bosnia-Herzegovina Presidency in favour of independence were taken unconstitutionally and contrary to the equality of the three ethnicities.<sup>13686</sup> It also decided ‘to commence preparations for the establishment of the Republic of Serbian Bosnia-Herzegovina as a federal unit within Yugoslavia’.<sup>13687</sup>

3626. On 31 December 1991, the Oslobodjenje newspaper published an interview with Alija Izetbegović, in which he called for the establishment of a sovereign and independent Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13688</sup> In a conversation the following day, Karadžić and Krajišnik reacted to this development. Karadžić said that ‘We will release our tigers and let them do their job ... we shouldn’t hold them back’. Krajišnik replied ‘We have to, but they’ll do it anyway, whether you want them to or not’. They both agreed that following Izetbegović’s proclamation they would no longer be able to calm the Serb people, as they had managed to do until that moment. Karadžić said that ‘he [Izetbegović] wants war. He’s playing with fire thinking Serbs wouldn’t ...’; Krajišnik interjected, saying ‘We have to use the first opportunity to tell him that he’s playing with fire.’<sup>13689</sup> On the one hand, the SDS leadership participated in negotiations with the other parties to find acceptable arrangements for the three nationalities in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13690</sup> On the other hand, they actively prepared for unilateral separation of what they considered Serb territories from Bosnia-Herzegovina in case the negotiations failed to achieve results.<sup>13691</sup> Karadžić warned that international recognition of Bosnia-Herzegovina without the necessary transformation would lead to armed conflict.<sup>13692</sup>

3627. According to Treanor, from the end of 1991 to at least the end of 1992, Karadžić, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević formed the inner core or ‘apex’ of the Bosnian-Serb leadership by virtue of their election to the highest executive, legislative, and party positions within the SDS, as well as the de facto powers derived from these positions.<sup>13693</sup> They acted in close and constant collaboration with one another.<sup>13694</sup> Karadžić, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević constituted the de facto leadership body at the centre of the broader SDS leadership during the period when the Bosnian-Serb state institutions were being progressively formalised, but were not yet fully operational; a constant within the SDS leadership that was otherwise informal and collective, with flexible and fluctuating membership.<sup>13695</sup> They represented a de facto ‘SDS Presidency’ or ‘Supreme SDS Crisis Staff’.<sup>13696</sup> According to Treanor, Karadžić and his closest associates were the only ones who could direct, plan, and execute party politics, whereby the activities of SDS and SDS-affiliated bodies with their formal, statutory prerogatives, procedures, and processes, while important, came second.<sup>13697</sup> In this regard, and in close cooperation with Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević, as well as other chosen SDS leaders, Karadžić exercised almost un-circumscribed powers through more informal ‘small group’ meetings.<sup>13698</sup>

3628. In a 1 January 1992 telephone conversation with Krajišnik, Karadžić stated that Izetbegović was ‘talking openly of a sovereign and independent Bosnia’ and said: ‘[F]uck him. We will release our tigers and let them do their job.’<sup>13699</sup>

3629. In an 8 January 1992 meeting with Tuđman and Franjo Boras, Nikola Koljević proposed the formation of three sovereign Bosnian states – one Serb, one Muslim, and one Croat – and stated that he had information from the UN that geographic mixture of peoples in Bosnia ‘would be solved on the basis of some form of movement which would be civilised and organised and which is already spontaneously evolving now’.<sup>13700</sup> Koljević stated that the aim of this ‘reorganisation’ would be the ‘homogeneity of certain areas’ and that ‘we should see what can be done with the transfer, what can be accomplished by agreement, and we should institute fair exchanges and create an agency for the civilised transfer of property and population

3630. On 9 January 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly unanimously proclaimed the Serbian Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13703</sup> The Serbian Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina was renamed Republika Srpska on 12 August 1992.<sup>13704</sup> The implementation of the proclamation was conditional upon the recognition of independence of Bosnia-Herzegovina by the international community.<sup>13705</sup> Nevertheless, the SDS backed the arming of the Serb population during this period.<sup>13706</sup> Treanor testified that the Bosnian-Serb Assembly also called for territorial delimitation with the political communities of the other people in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13707</sup> The declaration of the proclamation of the Republic of the Serbian People of Bosnia and Herzegovina was the final step in the gradual build-up of a separate entity within Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13708</sup>

3632. On 11 January 1992, Karadžić and Krajišnik attended the first meeting of the Bosnian-Serb Ministerial Council, where they participated in a discussion on 'execution of tasks resulting from the Declaration ... of the Republic of the Serbian People of Bosnia-Herzegovina' which had been adopted two days earlier.<sup>13710</sup> Other participants included Branko Đerić, Mićo Stanišić, Miloš Savić, and Rajko Đukić.<sup>13711</sup> The Council was declared the executive organ of the Assembly.<sup>13712</sup> The list of priorities identified at the meeting included definition of Bosnian-Serb ethnic territory and the establishment

Following the 11 January 1992 meeting, Bosnian-Serb authorities moved ahead with the organization of a separate Serb MUP.<sup>13716</sup> On 17 January 1992, at a session of the Ministerial Council a draft programme of work for the Council was presented.<sup>13717</sup> It called for the adoption of the Constitution and for the organization of the territory in such a way so as to ‘enlarge the territory of the regions and encompass a larger number of inhabitants wherever possible in order to consolidate the regions both ethnically and economically’.<sup>13718</sup> It placed ‘particular stress ... on the need for political and territorial organization of the regions by the formation of new municipalities in border areas of these regions.’<sup>13719</sup> At this session, it was decided that the Commission on the Constitution and the Ministerial Council would be tasked with preparation, by 15 February 1992, of draft legislation to enable the Bosnian-Serb Republic to start functioning.<sup>13720</sup>

3634. According to Treanor, the appointment of a Ministerial Council marked another step towards the founding of a separate state.<sup>13721</sup> In early 1992, the SDS began to defer to organs of the nascent ‘state’, most notably the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, in further preparing an ‘ethnic take-over’.<sup>13722</sup> Tensions at the lower levels mounted in February and March 1992, and the first clashes began to occur in various parts of the country; the Bosnian-Serb leadership’s first priority remained the take-over of actual control in the localities.<sup>13723</sup>

3635. During a 22 January 1992 telephone conversation, Karadžić informed Jovica Stanišić that he had told a man close to Tudman that if the Serbs and Croats did not resolve their ‘contentious issues’ within a month or two, the Croats would be ‘in for thirty years of torture’ with ‘all sorts of things’.<sup>13724</sup> Stanišić asked if by ‘all sorts of things’ Karadžić meant killings and Karadžić confirmed that he did.<sup>13725</sup> Stanišić responded: ‘We’ll have to push them to Belgrade, you know! There’s nothing else left for us to do. Or we’ll exterminate them completely so let’s see where we’ll end up.’<sup>13726</sup> Karadžić responded affirmatively.<sup>13727</sup>

3636. According to the minutes of an SDS meeting on 5 February 1992, Serbia’s objective was to maintain the continuity of Yugoslavia as well as to ensure that the Serbs would live in a single state regardless of whether it would be called Yugoslavia, the United Serbian States or otherwise.<sup>13728</sup>

3637. Following the formation of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly and of the Ministerial Council, the need for a regionalization staff ceased to exist.<sup>13729</sup> On 6 February 1992, the Executive Committee of the SDS of Bosnia-Herzegovina recommended to the SDS Main Committee that a few people be charged with the accomplishment of regionalization on the ground: Rajko Đukić for the SAO Birač and Semberija; Jovo Šarac and Milovan Žugić for the SAO Romanija; Slobodan Babić and Simo Mihić for the region of Doboj; Vojo Krunić and Radomir Nešković for the SAO Bosanska Krajina; and Jovo Jovanović and Milivoje Prijjić for Sarajevo.<sup>13730</sup> Milenko Stanić testified that Rajko Đukić was consequently appointed coordinator for the SAO Birač and Semberija on 24 February 1992.<sup>13731</sup>

3639. On 14 February 1992, during a meeting of the SDS Executive and Main Board which was also attended by the presidents of SDS Municipal Boards, presidents and members of regional boards, presidents of assemblies, executive committees of municipalities and other government officials and party organs, Karadžić, stated that '[w]e must be wise, unified, dedicated in order to take the last drop of the power in our hands.'<sup>13734</sup> Karadžić mentioned that this should be done in a humane and 'just' way towards both Croats and Muslims and underlined that it was important that there should be no fleeing from 'our' areas.<sup>13735</sup> Karadžić also referred to the reconstruction of Bosnia-Herzegovina, envisioned not as a confederation but as a state with three sovereign and independent peoples, namely Serbs, Croats, and Muslims and their cantons.<sup>13736</sup> He stated that the Serbs had the right to reorganise Bosnia-Herzegovina on democratic principles.<sup>13737</sup> Lastly, Karadžić discussed how Muslims and Serbs could not live in the same political and judicial system and advocated for reconciliation with the Croats emphasizing that 'in order to create as little "friction" as possible' Croats and Serbs should live one next to the other but not together.<sup>13738</sup>

3640. On 15 February 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly discussed a draft Constitution, according to which the Bosnian-Serb Republic would become part of federal Yugoslavia.<sup>13739</sup> The Assembly also discussed the adoption of a Law on the Implementation of the Constitution.<sup>13740</sup> A few days after a 14 February 1992 meeting at which Slobodan Milošević briefed Radovan Karadžić, Biljana Plavšić, and Momčilo Krajišnik on the stance of each of the Presidents of the Yugoslav republics with respect to maintaining a federal Yugoslavia, Karadžić gave an interview in which he stated that, should Croatia and Slovenia secede, the ‘core Yugoslavia’ that remained would have to adjust its borders by applying ‘the ethnic principle’: to the extent possible, Serb villages would remain in Yugoslavia, and Croatian villages would become part of the new Croatian state.<sup>13741</sup>

3641. According to a 19 February 1992 letter from the SDS Executive Committee’s Chairman, Rajko Đukić, to the SDS municipal and regional boards, SDS regional and municipal boards were obliged to draw up a ‘plan of action so that any kind of campaign to organize a referendum should be made impossible’.<sup>13742</sup>

3642. By 23 February 1992, representatives of the SDS (among them Karadžić and Krajišnik) and of the other two national groups had agreed on a statement of principles for a new constitutional arrangement for Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13743</sup> According to this statement, the territory of Bosnia-Herzegovina would keep its external borders.<sup>13744</sup> It would become an independent state made up of three constituent units which would group municipalities according to the nationality principle based on the last three censuses (1971, 1981, and 1991).<sup>13745</sup> Freedom of movement would be allowed only within each unit, while resettlement from one unit to another would be subject to a ‘special permit’.<sup>13746</sup>

3643. On 28 February 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly unanimously adopted the Constitution of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, along with a Government Act, a Law on Defence, and a Law on Internal Affairs.<sup>13747</sup> The Constitution defined the Bosnian-Serb Republic as part of federal Yugoslavia, and not of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13748</sup> It stated: ‘Citizens of the Republic have equal rights in their freedom, rights and obligations. They are equal before the law and enjoy the same legal protection regardless of race, sex, language, ethnic origin, social background, birth, education, financial situation, political and other beliefs, social position or other personal attributes’.<sup>13749</sup>

3644. At a 28 February 1992 SDS Deputies' Club session held in Sarajevo, Karadžić stated: 'Muslims cannot live with others. We must be clear on that. [...] There can be no discussion here. Yet they set up the Bosnian Krajina and in two years' time you have problems again, to separate each and every village there, because they will overwhelm you with their birth rate and their tricks. We cannot allow that to happen.'<sup>13750</sup> At the same meeting, Karadžić stated: '[I]t is clear to every Serb that Croats and Serbs cannot live in a single state.'<sup>13751</sup>

3645. Treanor testified that the Bosnian-Serb leadership advanced a policy of reorganization and ordered a Serb boycott of the Bosnia-Herzegovina-wide referendum on independence to be held on 29 February and 1 March 1992.<sup>13752</sup> The resultant vote in favour of independence shifted the SDS's efforts towards a Serbian Bosnia-Herzegovina, with its own sovereign rights and army.<sup>13753</sup> Karadžić subsequently emphasized that the SDS was advocating a three-way partition of Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines in its international negotiations.<sup>13754</sup>

3646. In early 1992, the SDA exercised pressure to secure the independence of the Socialist Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13755</sup> On 29 February and 1 March 1992, a referendum on the question of independence was held, which was largely boycotted by the Bosnian Serbs and yielded an overwhelming majority of votes in favour of independence.<sup>13756</sup> In March and early April 1992, the Council for the Protection of Constitutional Order, a body constituted of representatives of the three constituent peoples from the Bosnia-Herzegovina Government and the Assembly, issued recommendations to the parties and the organs of public administration, but they were not followed up.<sup>13757</sup> In the same period, armed clashes among ethnic groups occurred throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina: checkpoints and barricades were erected in and around

Sarajevo by people associated with the three national parties.<sup>13758</sup> After the republican referendum, and due to the fact that the Yugoslav leadership had by then clearly expressed its position to SDS leaders that a Bosnian-Serb entity would not be allowed to be part of the new Yugoslavia in the near future, negotiations persisted, but mainly turned on the nature of what an independent Bosnia-Herzegovina would be like (unitary or federal) and what the division of power among the entities would be.<sup>13759</sup>

3647. At the 2 March 1992 enlarged session of the SFRY Presidency, Karadžić stated: '[W]e demand the right to exercise our right, our sovereign right to organise our lives as we please, pointing at the difficulties, such as impossibility to live together, to live within the same political and legal framework together with two other religions and nations, citing similar cases throughout the world, which all ended in complete separation and departure, so typical of oil and water.'<sup>13760</sup>

3648. On 11 March 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly decided to continue international negotiations on a confederative arrangement for the three national groups.<sup>13761</sup> In response to an invitation from Jose Cutileiro, international mediator, to continue the multi-party negotiations, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly unanimously rejected a draft of constitutional arrangements in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13762</sup> On 18 March 1992, the negotiators reported to the Bosnian-Serb Assembly.<sup>13763</sup> The new draft proposal, they explained to the deputies, aimed at a division of Bosnia-Herzegovina into three constituent units based not only on nationality, but also on economic and geographic considerations.<sup>13764</sup> Each component nation would moreover be allowed special ties with other states.<sup>13765</sup> The proposal was marked as 'basis for further negotiations.'<sup>13766</sup>

3649. In an interview with the newspaper Naša Borba published on 16 March 1992, Karadžić described the 'enemies' of the Bosnian Serbs as 'the segment of the militant fundamentalist core that wants Bosnia for itself and would like to subjugate the Serbs and Croats'.<sup>13767</sup>

3650. On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly instructed the new Government to prepare, by 27 March, ‘an operational plan for assuming power, that is, for establishing power in the Serbian Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina, and in particular in the field of internal affairs, national defence and money transactions... in all municipalities where we already have Serbian authorities, and in those municipalities where we have only recently established Serbian municipalities.’<sup>13768</sup> On that day, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly also issued a decision verifying the proclamation of various Serb municipalities.<sup>13769</sup>

3651. Hanson testified that on 24 March 1992, Karadžić told the Assembly deputies that they, as members of the supreme organ of authority, i.e. the Assembly, were to act as the link between central policy and the municipal government in the takeover of power.<sup>13770</sup> He stated that they would soon be able to form whatever they wanted and ordered them to stay close to the municipality presidents.<sup>13771</sup> On 27 March 1992, Karadžić instructed the Assembly deputies to establish crisis staffs as soon as they arrived in their municipalities; the crisis staffs were to exclusively serve for defence purposes and to cooperate with the JNA when possible.<sup>13772</sup> The Assembly deputies were to report to Karadžić on the compliance of the municipal presidents, who had the authority on the ground.<sup>13773</sup> If the deputies’ proposals were rejected, however, the municipal presidents were to be coerced into executing the Bosnian Serb leadership’s plans.<sup>13774</sup> According to Hanson, these instructions signalled the shift in the role of the crisis staffs from a secret organ to a public party authority.<sup>13775</sup> proclaimed itself a distinct republic.<sup>13776</sup> Treanor testified that from April 1992 onwards, there were no longer Bosnian-Serb bodies of authority working in parallel to those of multi-ethnic Bosnia-Herzegovina, but separate and distinct authorities founded by the SDS and answering to the Bosnian-Serb leadership and institutions; they functioned as autonomous parts of the nascent Bosnian-Serb 'state'.<sup>13777</sup> Immediately preceding the outbreak of conflict in April 1992, the SDS leadership's command and control capacity was repeatedly demonstrated and SDS party bodies acted in concert with fledging Serbian institutions.<sup>13778</sup>

3653. On 27 March 1992, at the 14th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Karadžić stated that it was obvious that the Bosnian Serbs and their adversaries 'cannot live together without hindering one another's development'.<sup>13779</sup> He further stated: 'In the plant world there are plants which cannot grow side by side. They have to be separated to flourish.'<sup>13780</sup>

3654. Witness RM-513 testified that when the war in Bijeljina started in April 1992, the crisis staffs of the villages distributed weapons to Serb SDS supporters.<sup>13781</sup> The municipal crisis staff formed a Unit for Intervention made up of villagers they had armed.<sup>13782</sup> According to the witness, both the SDS and the SDA armed people illegally.<sup>13783</sup>

3655. On 4 April 1992, the SNB issued a public announcement, signed by Karadžić, in response to instructions given by the 'rump Presidency of Bosnia-Herzegovina' concerning the raising of TOs, people's self-organisation, the civilian protection and reserve police.<sup>13784</sup> The SNB urged the people to disregard these instructions and do everything to avoid civil war and the suffering of the people.<sup>13785</sup> It ordered that, should any TO, civilian protection or reserve police units in any area respond to the instructions, crisis staffs in those areas were to be activated and the Serb TO, civilian

3656. On 7 April 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, chaired by Milovan Milanović, declared the independence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, and Plavšić and Koljević resigned from their positions in the Presidency of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13788</sup> In April 1992 the EC and the USA recognised the independence of the Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13789</sup> However, international recognition of Bosnia-Herzegovina in April 1992 did not end the matter and a struggle for territorial control ensued among the three major groups in Bosnia: Muslim, Serb, and Croat.<sup>13790</sup>

3657. On 15 April 1992, after reviewing the security situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the SNB and the Bosnian-Serb Government decided to propose to the Bosnian-Serb Presidency to declare a 'state of imminent threat of war'.<sup>13791</sup> The Minister of Defence was tasked with organising and supervising the TO until the appointment of an acting commander.<sup>13792</sup>

3658. Also on 15 April 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Presidency declared an imminent threat of war and ordered the mobilisation of the TO on the entire territory of 'Serbian Bosnia and Herzegovina'. All men of military age in that area were to be at the municipal TO staffs' disposal. On 12 May 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly confirmed this decision.<sup>13793</sup>

According to a Decision of the SDS on 17 April 1992, all employees of Serb ethnicity who had been appointed and introduced in service in the organs and organisations of Bosnia-Herzegovina and those of Sarajevo upon proposal from the SDS were to be withdrawn from their positions and reappointed in the organs and organisations of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>13794</sup>

3660. On 22 April 1992, the SNB and the Bosnian-Serb Government agreed that the Bosnian-Serb Republic had to be defended, especially the positions taken in Sarajevo. They decided to undertake special efforts to present the situation to the EC by inviting its observers to the Serb positions, where they could establish that it was the Serbs who were being attacked. The SNB and the Government decided to insist on 'a peace-time option and an intensive political offensive' in order to resolve the crisis in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13795</sup> Karadžić also established a platform for the immediate resolution of the crisis in Bosnia-Herzegovina under the auspices of the EC.<sup>13796</sup> Furthermore, the SNB and the Bosnian-Serb Government decided that the SNB would coordinate the command of the TO forces and the TO Staff would appoint staff commanders in regions, municipalities, and towns.<sup>13797</sup> On 27 April 1992, the SNB and the Bosnian-Serb Government decided to conduct full-scale mobilization.<sup>13798</sup>

3661. Also on 27 April 1992, the SFRY was re-organised so that it consisted of only the republics of Serbia and Montenegro, along with Kosovo and Vojvodina, and a new constitution was adopted.<sup>13799</sup> On 22 May 1992, Bosnia-Herzegovina was admitted as a State member of the UN, following decisions adopted by the UNSC and the General Assembly.<sup>13800</sup> After the disintegration of the former Yugoslavia began, the theme of the Serb-dominated media was that 'if for any one reason Serbs would become a minority population ... their whole existence could be very perilous and endangered ... [and therefore] they had no choice but a full-scale war against everyone else, or to be subjected to the old type concentration camp, the symbol being Jasenovac.'<sup>13801</sup>

3662. On 6 May 1992, Mladić recorded that he had held talks with Karadžić, Krajišnik, Adžić, and a group of generals from Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13802</sup> Karadžić acknowledged that the Bosnian Serbs were controlling and expanding the 'Serbian' settlements in Pale, as they were on the threshold of achieving their centuries-old dream of creating a state

3663. Deronjić stated that on 10 or 11 May 1992, a meeting was held in Pale during which he had to report on the events in Bratunac Municipality. Mladić, Karadžić, Ostojić, and the presidents of the crisis staffs were present. A map depicting the ethnic structure of Bosnia-Herzegovina was hanging in the conference room; it was divided into two parts in different colours, the Serb areas being blue. When the witness reported about the events in Glogova, that it had been partially destroyed, most of it was ablaze, and that the Bosnian Muslims had been evacuated by force, all present in the room greeted his report with applause and Ostojić said ‘We can now also colour Bratunac blue’.<sup>13804</sup>

3664. Treanor testified that as more powerful organs were created and vested with certain powers, they gradually took over important functions and the Bosnian-Serb Assembly became less and less significant.<sup>13805</sup>

3665. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 2.1.1-2.1.3 and 3.4 on the establishment and structure of Bosnian-Serb republic level institutions, including the Bosnian-Serb Presidency and President, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, the Bosnian-Serb Government, and the MUP. The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings on the structure and establishment of regional and municipal political structures in chapters 2.2.1 and 2.2.2, including, inter alia, the formation of SAOs in the Bosnian-Serb Republic, as well as regional and municipal crisis staffs.

The Trial Chamber’s findings

3666. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that fundamental disagreement on how to resolve the question of whether Bosnia-Herzegovina should either declare its independence from Yugoslavia or remain part thereof was determinative of the political developments in the lead up to the conflict. While the SDA, HDZ, and the majority of other opposition parties envisaged sovereign and internationally recognised statehood for Bosnia-Herzegovina, the SDS and some of the smaller parties wanted to remain part of Yugoslavia. The Trial Chamber finds that from the moment of its creation in July

1990, the SDS's political platform emphasised the protection of the 'Serb nation', which had been disadvantaged by, inter alia, the way Bosnia-Herzegovina had been divided into municipalities, making Bosnian Serbs an ethnic minority in areas where they may otherwise have dominated.

3667. With regard to the Defence's arguments that the SDS pursued peaceful and collaborative efforts to remain part of the FRY and the Bosnian Serbs' willingness to negotiate a settlement, the Trial Chamber finds that this willingness was conditional on the Bosnian Serbs' obtaining control over territories within Bosnia-Herzegovina, including those where Bosnian Serbs were a minority, and to which they claimed to have a 'historical right'.

3668. From as early as January 1991, Slobodan Milošević began to publicly advocate for the right of all Serbs to live in one state. In early 1991, the SDS embarked on a programme of regionalization, through the creation of territories in which the Bosnian Serbs comprised a relative majority. The SDS sought to establish Bosnian-Serb controlled areas by linking together Serb-majority municipalities and forming parallel government bodies, with a view to removing this territory from the effective control of the authorities of Bosnia-Herzegovina. As such, the Trial Chamber finds that the SDS promoted territorial division along ethnic lines and the establishment of separate, parallel Bosnian-Serb political, police and military institutions. From as early as May 1991 until at least 10 or 11 May 1992, members of the SDS leadership openly discussed the ethnic composition of municipalities and by June 1991, SDS municipal organs were asked to prepare maps of their municipalities showing as precisely as possible, in colour, the ethnic composition of each territory.

3669. In April 1991, Karadžić expressed the Bosnian-Serb leadership's plans to divide Bosnia-Herzegovina and for Serbs to take over control of territory therein. The Trial Chamber finds that in subsequent conversations, meetings, and speeches that took place from at least July 1991 to May 1992, members of the Bosnian-Serb political leadership, in particular Radovan Karadžić, threatened violence and extinction should Bosnian Muslims attempt to create a sovereign state, described Muslims and Croats as enemies with whom the Bosnian Serbs could not coexist and threatening violence against those groups, and advocated the transfers of populations. In doing so, Karadžić repeatedly

3670. Specifically, and with respect to the attempts by Bosnian Muslims to create a sovereign state, on 12 October 1991, Karadžić stated in a telephone conversation that an attempt would result in bloodshed. He also said that if Bosnian Muslims ‘rise up against the Serbs’, they would ‘disappear’ and ‘be exterminated’. On 15 October 1991, he described the Bosnian Muslims’ pursuit of an independent state as a ‘highway of hell and suffering’ and elaborated that the Serbs would ‘destroy them completely’ in a ‘war until their extinction’. On 1 January 1992, in response to talk of a sovereign Bosnia-Herzegovina, he stated that the Bosnian Serbs would release their ‘tigers’ and ‘let them do their job’.

3671. With respect to the Bosnian Serbs’ inability to coexist with Muslims and Croats, Karadžić made a number of statements. On 24 October 1991 and 6 May 1992, he spoke of creating a Bosnian-Serb state free of internal enemies. In a speech delivered during the plebiscite in November 1991, addressing the presidents of the municipalities, Karadžić said that ‘whatever Bosnia we have one day, no Muslim foundation shall ever be laid in Serb areas and Serb villages’. He also described Muslims as ‘merciless’ and stated that the Bosnian Serbs would not ‘behave like gentlemen wearing white gloves’ because ‘if you are thrown among the wolves [...], [y]ou can’t be the lamb’ but must ‘be equal to your task and to your adversary’. On 22 January 1992, he said that should issues between the Serbs and Croats not be resolved, the Croats would be ‘in for thirty years of torture’. On 14 February 1992, he stated that Bosnian Serbs and Muslims ‘could not live in the same political and judicial system’. On 28 February 1992, he repeated that ‘Muslims cannot live with others’ and added that it was ‘clear to every Serb that Croats and Serbs cannot live in a single state’. On 2 March 1992, he noted the ‘impossibility to live together, to live within the same political and legal framework together with two other religions and nations’. On 16 March 1992, he characterized the enemies of the Bosnian Serbs as ‘militant fundamentalist[s]’ who wanted ‘to subjugate the Serbs and Croats’.

3672. With respect to population transfers, in July 1991, during a meeting with Babić and Milošević, Karadžić said that he would chase the Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina into the river valleys in order to link up all Serb territories there into one. On 8 January 1992, Koljević stated that Bosnia-Herzegovina would be divided into three sovereign states on the basis of ‘homogeneity’, which would be achieved in part via population transfers.

3673. The Trial Chamber further finds that in the period leading up to the conflict, the SDS was heavily involved in the arming of the Bosnian-Serb population.

3674. The Trial Chamber finds that following its creation, the SDS leadership used the Bosnian-Serb Assembly as a tool to further its political agenda and enforce party policies. On 9 January 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly proclaimed the Bosnian-Serb Republic. On 7 April 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly declared the independence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic. The Trial Chamber finds that from April 1992 onwards, previously established Bosnian-Serb institutions were no longer working in parallel to those of multi-ethnic Bosnia-Herzegovina, but constituted separate and distinct authorities founded by the SDS. As such, they constituted de facto state institutions, functioned autonomously, and answered to the Bosnian-Serb leadership and institutions.

3675. The Trial Chamber further finds that in the period leading up to the conflict, Karadžić and other key SDS members who formed part of the collective Bosnian-Serb leadership, including Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević, played an essential role in directing, planning and executing the party’s policies. Between at least July 1991 and February 1992, Karadžić met with and spoke to Slobodan Milošević on numerous occasions. During these meetings, the unification of Serb territories and the division of territory along ethnic lines were discussed. As SDS president, Karadžić also met regularly with SDS members at the republic, regional, and municipal level to discuss plans of regionalization from as early as April 1991 and through to May 1992. During several of these meetings, Milan Babić was also present.

3676. The Trial Chamber will further consider these findings in chapter 9.2.14.

9.2.3 The Variant A/B Instructions

3677. The Prosecution argued that in late December 1991, Karadžić issued concrete instructions, known as the Variant A/B instructions, to prepare to assert Serb control at the municipal level by military means, if necessary.<sup>13806</sup> These instructions, which were to be implemented in two stages, constituted a ‘planned, centralised means of establishing and preparing the Serb municipal organs that would be used to implement the common criminal purpose’ of the alleged overarching JCE.<sup>13807</sup> It further argued that Karadžić supervised the implementation of the Variant A/B instructions and later activated the second stage of the instructions by a ‘secret’ order.<sup>13808</sup> The Defence argued that the Variant A/B instructions could not have been the basis of planned actions of the crisis staffs or alleged JCE members, as they were not uniformly implemented and there is no evidence of anyone at the Bosnian-Serb Republic level enforcing the instructions.<sup>13809</sup> It further argued that ‘the document referring to “Variant A/B” municipalities’ was a contingency plan, discussed only during one assembly session, which took place prior to the establishment of the VRS and Mladić’s relocation to Bosnia-Herzegovina under the JNA.<sup>13810</sup> It also argued that the Variant A/B instructions were solely relevant to municipalities and not to the military, as they were considered separately from Mladić and were not relayed to the VRS.<sup>13811</sup> The Prosecution responded that immediately after the Variant A/B instructions were issued, Karadžić assigned Čizmović to ‘visit all our municipalities’ in order to implement the instructions that had been issued.<sup>13812</sup>

3678. With regard to the Variant A/B instructions, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts. The Trial Chamber also received evidence from Patrick Treanor, an intelligence analyst;<sup>13813</sup> and Dorothea Hanson, a research officer for the Prosecution Leadership Research Team,<sup>13814</sup> as well as documentary evidence,<sup>13815</sup> and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>13816</sup> The Trial Chamber also received evidence from Miroslav Deronjić, the President of the Bratunac Municipality Crisis Staff as of April 1992.<sup>13817</sup>

3679. On 19 or 20 December 1991, a document entitled ‘Instructions for the Organisation and Activity of the Organs of the Serbian People in Bosnia-Herzegovina in Extraordinary Circumstances’, dated ‘Sarajevo, 19 December 1991’, was introduced to the participants of a meeting of high-level SDS representatives.<sup>13818</sup> The SDS Main Board directed SDS municipal boards throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina to establish Bosnian-Serb institutions, including a ‘Crisis Staff of the Serb People’ and an ‘Assembly of the Serb People’ or a ‘Serb Municipality’.<sup>13819</sup> Karadžić, in addressing the meeting, said that SDS municipal boards would become responsible, pursuant to these instructions, for creating a network that would cover all Serbs living in the municipalities.<sup>13820</sup>

The Trial Chamber notes that while the Adjudicated Facts refer to a document entitled ‘Instructions for the Organisation and Activity of the Organs of the Serbian People in Bosnia-Herzegovina in Extraordinary Circumstances’, documents in evidence bear slightly different titles, such as, ‘Instructions for the Organization and Operation of Organs of the Serbian People in Bosnia and Herzegovina in Emergency Conditions’. A municipalities and partially in Variant B municipalities.<sup>13824</sup> In order to carry out the tasks, the municipal crisis staffs were asked to undertake a comprehensive assessment of the situation in the municipalities and to ‘ensure and respect declarations of loyalty (preferably in writing) to the constitution and the legal system of the federal state of Yugoslavia by citizens of other ethnic backgrounds’.<sup>13825</sup>

3681. For both variants, the ‘first level’ included daily meetings of the SDS municipal board to allow constant monitoring of the situation.<sup>13826</sup> The SDS municipal board was tasked with immediately establishing a ‘Crisis Staff of the Serbian People’ in each municipality, which was to be composed of all members of the SDS municipal board secretariat, SDS candidates in municipal state organs, such as the SJB Chief or Police Station Commander, deputies of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, and members of the Bosnia-Herzegovina SDS Main Board from the municipality.<sup>13827</sup> The plan included the proclamation of an ‘assembly of the Serbian people’ in each municipality, preparations for the establishment of municipal state or government organs, including, inter alia, the executive committee, administration organs, and SJB.<sup>13828</sup> It further included the preparation of the takeover of the staff and some equipment of ‘security services centres’, the intensifying of propaganda, and the assessment of the number of necessary active and reserve policemen, TO units, and civilian protection units, which were to be activated on the order of the crisis staff.<sup>13829</sup> The ‘second level’ included plans to convene a session of the Serb municipal assembly, to establish a municipal executive committee and municipal state or government organs, to mobilise all Serb police forces and ‘gradually re-subordinate them in coordination with JNA commands and staffs’, and to ensure the implementation of the order for mobilisation of the JNA reserve and TO units.<sup>13830</sup>

3682. In Variant A municipalities, the ‘assembly of the Serbian people’ was to be composed of representatives of the Serb people in the municipal assembly.<sup>13831</sup> Control over existing commodity reserves was to be established and material resources were to be protected.<sup>13832</sup> On the ‘second level’ of Variant A, the staff, buildings, and equipment taken over from the ‘security services centres’ were to be placed at the disposal of the ‘newly established organs of the interior’ at the seat of the centre.<sup>13833</sup> In implementing these measures, it was to be ensured that the rights of members of all nations were respected and that they would later be engaged in government organs established by the ‘assembly of the Serbian people’ in the municipality.<sup>13834</sup>

In Variant B municipalities it had to be ensured that ‘members of other nations and nationalities’ who expressed their loyalty to the federal state of Yugoslavia were proportionately represented in government organs.<sup>13835</sup> The staff and equipment taken over from CSBs were to be integrated with the SJB in the municipality or in the place where an SJB was established.<sup>13836</sup> In settlements with a predominant Serb population, observation and a reporting system to report all threats to the Serb population was to be organised.<sup>13837</sup> The crisis staffs were responsible for ‘special forms of organisation of defence’.<sup>13838</sup>

3684. The document reflected SDS policy and they found their way to local SDS leaders between 20 December 1991 and the early months of 1992.<sup>13839</sup> The instructions were received and implemented, fully or partially, in several municipalities in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13840</sup> The SDS in several municipalities relied on these instructions for actions, in particular when proclaiming the municipality as being Serb.<sup>13841</sup>

3685. Patrick Treanor testified that the instructions issued confidentially by the SDS Crisis Staff link the Bosnian-Serb leadership to a carefully planned and realised, top-down policy of dismemberment of Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines, whereby either existing Serb- or SDS-dominated municipalities would simply stop abiding by the laws of Bosnia-Herzegovina, thereby ignoring other legitimate party representatives and following the orders of parallel Serb authorities.<sup>13842</sup> Alternatively, in Serb-minority areas, exclusively Serb municipal institutions would be established in part of the territory, inevitably setting the stage for conflict.<sup>13843</sup> In a mid-February 1992 interview, Karadžić stated that the Serbs had developed a comprehensive programme for control of territory where they were an ethnic majority.<sup>13844</sup>

3686. Dorothea Hanson testified that the purpose of the Variant A/B instructions issued by the SDS Main Board was to ‘implement the plebiscite decision’ and ‘increase the mobility and readiness for defence of the interests of the Serbian people’.<sup>13845</sup> According to Hanson, the last page, type-signed ‘SDS BiH Crisis Staff’, was an early indication of a republic-level crisis staff.<sup>13846</sup> The Variant A/B instructions tied the crisis staffs and Serb municipalities to the SDS party centre through the Bosnian-Serb Assembly and the SDS Main Board.<sup>13847</sup> In order to create a shadow government, crisis staffs were instructed to include SDS members who already held leading positions in the existing municipal government; they were also told to cooperate with JNA command posts and headquarters.<sup>13848</sup> Jovan Čizmović, coordinator of the ARK and SAO governments, was tasked with facilitating the implementation of the Variant A/B instructions in the municipalities.<sup>13849</sup> As part of the discussion on the establishment of a Serb state within Bosnia-Herzegovina during the 6th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly on 26 January 1992, Čizmović urged that the tasks set out in these instructions be carried out.<sup>13850</sup>

3687. On 14 February 1992, during a meeting attended by the SDS leadership, as well as regional and municipal officials, Karadžić ordered the activation of the ‘second stage’ of the instructions, specifically the division of Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines.<sup>13851</sup> Karadžić advised those present that the implementation of the second stage should be done slowly, to have absolute control on who was travelling along their roads.<sup>13852</sup> This served as the signal for the realization of Serb municipal authorities, the purpose of which was to ‘intensify the functioning of the government at any cost and on every single millimetre of our territory’.<sup>13853</sup> In April 1995, during the 50th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Karadžić stated that ‘at the moment the war began, in the municipalities where we were in the majority, we had municipal power, held it firmly, controlled everything. In the municipalities where we were the minority, we set up secret government, municipal boards, municipal assemblies, presidents of executive boards.’<sup>13854</sup> According to Hanson, the municipal organs played a crucial role in the Bosnian-Serb Assembly’s efforts to making the Bosnian-Serb Republic a reality on the ground.<sup>13855</sup>

3688. On 17 February 1992, the Prijedor SDS municipal board noted that ‘it is necessary to activate the second stage of the position stated by the SDS BH Main Board. It is absolutely necessary to cover the territory and population (Serbs) by activists and representatives. Each should secure his own area.’<sup>13856</sup> Miroslav Deronjić stated that Bratunac was a ‘Variant B’ municipality for which the instructions envisaged the establishment of a crisis staff and a Serb assembly.<sup>13857</sup> He and his municipal board implemented these instructions upon his return to Bratunac Municipality.<sup>13858</sup>

3690. The Variant A/B instructions, which were to be implemented in two phases, set out practical preparations for the takeover of de facto power in the municipalities and the division of Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines. The first phase of the instructions called for preparatory steps to be taken in the municipalities. These included, inter alia, the establishment of Serb municipal crisis staffs (see the Trial Chamber’s findings on the structure of crisis staffs in chapter 2.2.2) and of Serb municipal assemblies, as well as preparations for the establishment of municipal state organs, including SJBs, executive committees, and administrative organs. According to the instructions, non-Serbs were to be engaged with and represented in government organs at a later stage. In Variant B municipalities, such participation was dependent on an expressed loyalty to the federal state of Yugoslavia. The Variant A/B instructions also included an assessment of the number of necessary active and reserve policemen, TO units, and civilian protection units, which were to be activated on the order of the crisis staff, as well as preparations for the takeover of the staff and some equipment of security services centres and intensification of propaganda. The second phase of the Variant A/B instructions, which Karadžić activated on 14 February 1992 at a meeting attended by the SDS leadership, as well as Bosnian-Serb regional and municipal officials, called for the establishment of municipal state or government organs and the convening of Serb municipal assembly sessions, as well as the mobilization of the JNA reserve, TO units, and all Serb police forces, who would gradually be re-subordinated in coordination with JNA commands. Implementation of the Variant A/B instructions would mean that in Variant A municipalities, where Serbs constituted a majority, the orders of newly established Bosnian-Serb municipal authorities would prevail, other legitimate party representatives would be ignored, and the laws of Bosnia-Herzegovina would no longer be respected. In Variant B municipalities, where Serbs constituted a minority, exclusively Serb municipal institutions would be established in parts of the territory.

3691. The Trial Chamber will further consider these findings in chapter 9.2.14 when determining whether an overarching JCE existed. In chapter 9.2.14, the Trial Chamber will also consider to what extent the implementation of the Variant A/B instructions further clarifies the policy of the Bosnian-Serb political leadership.

9.2.4 The Six Strategic Objectives

3692. The Prosecution argued that while the six strategic objectives were not criminal on their face, it was clear that they meant to express an intention to pursue Serb control over territories inhabited by other ethnicities through force.<sup>13859</sup> The Defence argued that the objectives refer to separation of territory, not people.<sup>13860</sup> The Prosecution responded that Karadžić, when presenting the objectives at the 16th Assembly Session and after mentioning the separation of states, immediately clarified that the separation was about people.<sup>13861</sup> It also pointed out that various comments at the session, such as ‘resettling’ or ‘moving’, clearly referred to people.<sup>13862</sup> Further, the Prosecution argued that Mladić’s comments need to be read in context and that he meant to convey that the real plan needed to be kept secret.<sup>13863</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence from Herbert Okun, special advisor and deputy to the Special Envoy of the UNSG from 1991 through 1997 and co-chairman of the International Conference on the former Yugoslavia,<sup>13864</sup> as well as documentary evidence in relation to the six strategic objectives, as set out below.<sup>13865</sup>

3693. On 7 May 1992, Mladić recorded that he had a meeting with Krajišnik, Vučurević, and Karadžić.<sup>13866</sup> Krajišnik mentioned the following ‘strategic goals’:

- (1) to separate from the Croats and the Muslims forever;
- (2) make a corridor from Krajina to Serbia;
- (3) establish a link with Serbia on the Drina, and cut off the Muslim’s link (Sandžak);
- (4) Neretva, a natural border with the Croats;
- (5) ‘[a] part of Sarajevo is to be ours. - The Muslims can have their part of the city and a link with their territory’;
- (6) to have a passage to the sea.<sup>13867</sup>

The record continues by noting ‘* We do not want to live alone’ and then ‘7. * In the near future, we must establish links with the Republic of Serbian Krajina’.<sup>13868</sup>

3694. On 12 May 1992, at the 16th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Karadžić noted that the political conditions in Bosnia-Herzegovina had been very complex since the founding of the HDZ with its ‘militant and dangerous gatherings, with insignia of the Ustaša regime which committed genocide against us, and the setting up of the SDA [...] with its militant Islamic fundamentalism’.<sup>13869</sup> According to Karadžić, the Serbs had set up their own national movement, the SDS, in response to the actions taken by the HDZ and the Muslim national community. While the Serbs had been trying to abstain from taking any steps that could have been detrimental to the peace in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the actions which had led them to the setting up of their own state had been provoked. According to Karadžić, after the deputies from Muslim and Croatian national communities had ‘denied any meaning of the [Bosnia-Herzegovina] Assembly’ and decided to enclose the Serbs in a state whose signs and symbols were well-known to them from the time of Croatian and Turkish occupation, the Serbs were forced to exercise their right to self-determination and set up their own state.<sup>13870</sup>

3695. According to Karadžić, the EC recognised that the ‘Serbian people’ would not accept the ‘unitarist Bosnia of Alija Izetbegović’.<sup>13871</sup> At the Conference on Bosnia-Herzegovina, under European auspices, the EC had given its approval for a three-part Bosnia-Herzegovina, consisting of three nation states.<sup>13872</sup> This approval by the EC was seen by Karadžić as recognition of the legitimacy of the Serbs’ wish to have their own state unit within Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Serbs had ‘opted for a political, peaceful solution, and accepted the political arbitration of the EC, which does not favour the Serbs at this moment, but [they] accepted the loss of a thing or two in order to avoid war’. On 4 April 1992, when the Bosnia-Herzegovina MUP had already been split, Alija Izetbegović mobilized the Croat and the Muslim national communities, so as to take control of the fate of the peoples in Bosnia-Herzegovina and speed up the process of recognition of the independence of Bosnia-Herzegovina. Already before Bosnia-Herzegovina was recognized by the EC, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly proclaimed the independence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic. This proclamation took place sometime on 6 or 7 April 1992. The EC had thus recognized a Bosnia-Herzegovina that did not exist and within whose territory there was already another state, the Bosnian-Serb Republic. Immediately after the international recognition, the Muslim representatives started sabotaging the Conference. The events which then followed resulted in war, through ‘terrorising the Serbian people in Sarajevo’ and through open attacks on Serbs in other areas, including Zvornik and Bijeljina.<sup>13873</sup>

3696. Karadžić announced that the Bosnian-Serb Presidency, the Bosnian-Serb Government, and the SNB had formulated the strategic goals for the ‘Serbian people'.<sup>13874</sup> According to Karadžić, the achievement of the six strategic goals would 'finally finish the job of the freedom struggle of the Serbian people'.<sup>13875</sup> Furthermore, Karadžić warned that an end had to be put to the 'Serbian megalomania' of trying to include 'as many of [their] enemies in [their] areas as possible, especially as much territory as possible'; this had to be brought to a 'reasonable measure' in order for the Serbs to be 'solid and compact'.<sup>13876</sup> According to Karadžić, by doing otherwise, the Serbs could be put in danger by the inclusion in their state of 'too many of [their] enemies, who [would] again work against that state'.<sup>13877</sup>

3697. The first strategic goal was the 'separation from the other two national communities - separation of states'.<sup>13878</sup> Karadžić characterised the other two national communities as enemies of the Serbs, who had used every opportunity to attack them and would continue to do so if they were to remain in the same state.<sup>13879</sup> Krajišnik added that the first goal was the most important one, and the others were sub-items of the first.<sup>13880</sup> According to Karadžić, the first strategic objective was 'that we want to be rid of enemies in the house, those being the Croats and Muslims, so that we are no longer together in the same state'.<sup>13881</sup>

3698. The second strategic goal was the establishment of a corridor between Semberija and Krajina, so as to connect the RSK, Bosnian-Serb Republic, and Serbia.<sup>13882</sup> According to Karadžić, this was a very important goal as there could be 'no Krajina, Bosnian Krajina, Serbian Krajina or alliance of Serbian states' without the establishment of such a corridor.<sup>13883</sup> In this respect, another speaker, 'Dr Beli', noted that the establishment of a corridor between Semberija and the Bosnian Krajina had been completed to a certain degree.<sup>13884</sup> However, Brčko still remained a 'fierce stronghold [...] of Muslim forces' and in dealing with such a priority task, it was necessary to act together instead of letting the burden fall on one area only.<sup>13885</sup> For a definite 'clearing of the area' it was necessary to have more forces there, especially well-qualified police staff.<sup>13886</sup> Beli also noted the necessity to conduct a general mobilization of the ‘Serbian people’ and suggested the issuance of directives so that the definition of general mobilization would not depend on individual municipalities.<sup>13887</sup>

3699. The third strategic goal was the establishment of a corridor in the Drina Valley, so as to eliminate the Drina ‘as a border between two worlds’. Karadžić noted that while it was possible for some Muslim enclaves to be set up along the river, the belt along the Drina had to belong to the Bosnian-Serb Republic. The establishment of this corridor would be both strategically useful for the Serbs – as they populated both sides of the Drina River – and would damage the interests of their enemy by preventing them from establishing a corridor connecting them to the ‘Muslim International’, which would render the area ‘permanently unstable’.<sup>13888</sup>

3700. The fourth strategic goal was the establishment of a border on the Una and Neretva rivers.<sup>13889</sup> In this respect, Miroslav Vještica, another speaker, noted that there were no more Muslims in the enclaves that used to exist on the right bank of the Una River, in the ‘Serbian’ Bosanska Krupa Municipality.<sup>13890</sup> According to Vještica, it was ‘unlikely’ for the Muslims who had been evacuated from these enclaves to have a place to return to, after the President had announced the ‘happy news’ that the right bank of the Una was to be the border.<sup>13891</sup>

3701. The fifth strategic goal was the division of Sarajevo into a ‘Serbian’ and a Muslim part and the implementation of an effective state government in each of the two parts.<sup>13892</sup> Karadžić emphasized that the battle for Sarajevo was of decisive importance, because as long as the Serbs held a part of Sarajevo, Alija could not establish ‘even the illusion of a state’.<sup>13893</sup> According to Karadžić, the most important thing for Alija was to create an illusion that there was a Bosnian state and that the Serbs were terrorists. Furthermore, the fighting in Sarajevo was keeping the fighting away from other areas such as the Krajina and the Drina, where the Serbs could also have conflicts with the Muslims. Therefore, according to Karadžić, the fighting in Sarajevo would decide the destiny of Bosnia-Herzegovina and, if there was going to be a war, '[the war] would start in Sarajevo and end in Sarajevo'.<sup>13894</sup>

3702. The sixth strategic goal was the establishment of access of the Bosnian-Serb Republic to the sea, by disputing a part of the territory by the sea and not recognizing the area as a part of the Croatian state.<sup>13895</sup>

3703. During the same session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Dragan Kalinić noted that the most important issue that the Bosnian-Serb Assembly had to decide on was whether to choose the option of war or the option of negotiating.<sup>13896</sup> In this respect, he considered that, 'knowing who our enemy is, how perfidious they are, how they cannot be trusted until they are physically, militarily destroyed and crushed, which, of course, implies eliminating and liquidating their key people', the fate of the Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina could only be solved through war.<sup>13897</sup> Vojo Kuprešanin stated that the Muslims 'must be forced to capitulate' and their attempts to turn the Serbs into a minority had to be broken.<sup>13898</sup> Velibor Ostojić noted that 'peace with Alija can only be achieved by war'.<sup>13899</sup> According to Kozić, 'the enemy – Ustašas and mujahedin – must be defeated by whatever means are necessary, and only after that can we negotiate'. Captain Garić noted that the Serbs did not want to go to war. He proposed that '[t]he Serb who refuses to come under the Serbian flag and under a šajkača, we will show that Serb the way to Istanbul, Teheran, just as we did to the mujahedin'.<sup>13900</sup> Krajišnik emphasized that the Serbs were all fighting for 'self-contained territories of a piece with the corridor, so that all of us will be in a single area that is linked with Serbia and Montenegro'.<sup>13901</sup>

3704. Herbert Okun stated that the six strategic objectives of 12 May 1992 primarily dealt with the issue of land.<sup>13902</sup> The Trial Chamber also reviewed Mladić's speech at the 16th Assembly Session, which is set out in chapters 9.3.7 and 9.5.5. Mladić inter alia noted that the 'thing' that they were doing 'need[ed] to be guarded as [their] deepest secret'.<sup>13903</sup> Serb representatives in the media and at political talks and negotiations would have to present the goals in a way that would sound appealing to those who they wanted to win over and the 'Serbian people' would need to know how to read between the lines.<sup>13904</sup> He said that it is better to have here this Hasotić who was here among us, than to have him take the place of Vehbija Karić or to have him in the trenches fighting against us. If Hasotić had been there instead of Vehbija, things would be more difficult for me now. He was with me, after all, and knows better how to neutralise me and to what extent and for how long and with what. And the other does not. There we cannot cleanse nor can we have a sieve to sift so that only Serbs would stay, or that the Serbs would fall through and the rest leave. Well that is, that will not, I do not know how Mr Krajišnik and Mr Karadžić would explain this to the world. People, that would be genocide. We have to call upon any man who has bowed his forehead to the ground to embrace these areas and the territory of the state we plan to make. He to [sic] has his place with us and next to us.<sup>13905</sup>

3705. Mladić further said: 'Fear, might, prays to no God, and God cares not for might. But that does not mean that Muslims have to be expelled or drowned [...] both Serbs and Muslims, all must take care of one another [...] [b]ut there are ways in which we can neutralise them'.<sup>13906</sup>

3706. The six strategic objectives were adopted unanimously at the 16th Assembly Session.<sup>13907</sup> They were published in the official gazette of the Bosnian-Serb Republic on 26 November 1993 as follows:

1. Demarcation of the state as separate from the other two national communities.
2. A corridor between Semberija and Krajina.
3. Establishment of a corridor in the Drina river valley, and the eradication of the Drina river as a border between the Serbian states.
4. Establishment of borders along the Una and Neretva rivers.
5. Partition of the city of Sarajevo into Serbian and Muslim sections and the establishment of an effective state authority in each section.
6. Access to the sea for Republika Srpska.<sup>13908</sup> engagement of the army in relation to the strategic objectives. We have not achieved: The Neretva, the sea, and the Podrinje area. We have achieved: The corridor and separation with the Muslims'.<sup>13909</sup>

3708. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 12 May 1992, after Karadžić presented six strategic objectives to the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, the assembly adopted the objectives, which most prominently included the demarcation of a Serb state, territorially separate from any Croat and Muslim state. This demarcation involved the separation of people along ethnic lines. Furthermore, at the assembly session, Mladić and others clarified their understanding of the objectives. It was emphasized that the objectives should be achieved by 'whatever means', should be made to sound appealing when referenced in public, and that the Bosnian Serbs' approach should be guarded as their deepest secret and that Bosnian Serbs need to know how to read between lines. The Trial Chamber further finds that prior to the session, on 7 May 1992, Mladić and Krajišnik had a meeting regarding the strategic objectives. The Trial Chamber will further consider these findings in chapter 9.2.14 when determining whether the Overarching JCE existed.

9.2.5 Speeches, statements, and utterances by members of the Bosnian-Serb political leadership

3709. The Prosecution argued that statements made by members of the alleged overarching JCE demonstrate that they shared the common objective of the overarching JCE.<sup>13910</sup> These included speeches, statements, and utterances threatening mass violence against non-Serbs; preparing for imposing a forcible solution; expecting that extreme levels of violence would be deployed and that violent crimes would be necessary to establish ethnically-homogenous territories; and asserting Bosnian Serbs' entitlement to lands in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13911</sup> The Prosecution further argued that members of the alleged overarching JCE prepared their followers logistically and psychologically for the use of force.<sup>13912</sup>

3710. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 728 with regard to the speeches and statements of members of the Bosnian-Serb political leadership relating to the common objective of the alleged overarching JCE. Further, it received evidence from Herbert Okun, special advisor and deputy to the Special Envoy of the UNSG from 1991 through 1997 and co-chairman of the International Conference on the former Yugoslavia;<sup>13913</sup> Sulejman Crnčalo, a Bosnian Muslim from Radačići in Pale Municipality;<sup>13914</sup> Witness RM-066, a Serb from Vlasenica;<sup>13915</sup> David Harland, an UNPROFOR Civil Affairs Officer assigned to Sarajevo as of May 1993;<sup>13916</sup> Anthony Banbury, an UNPROFOR Civil Affairs Officer in Sarajevo between March 1994 and May 1995 and subsequently the Assistant to the UN Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Bosnia-Herzegovina;<sup>13917</sup> and Husein Abdel-Razek, UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo Commander from 21 August 1992 to 20 February 1993;<sup>13918</sup> as well as documentary evidence.<sup>13919</sup> The Trial Chambers also refers to its review of statements of a similar nature made in the period leading up to the conflict in chapter 9.2.2. The Trial Chamber will review these statements and speeches, primarily by Radovan Karadžić from May 1992 through 1995, in chronological order below.

3711. According to a Tanjug article dated 17 May 1992, Mladić, Karadžić, and Krajišnik attended a meeting with representatives of the local authorities in Sokolac on 17 May 1992, during which Krajišnik called for an ethnic demarcation.<sup>13920</sup> Karadžić is reported to have said ‘we want our state in Bosnia-Herzegovina and if they want to take Bosnia-Herzegovina out of Yugoslavia, we want to take our state out of Bosnia-Herzegovina’.<sup>13921</sup>

3712. Sulejman Crnčalo testified that in June 1992, he saw Karadžić giving a speech at an open meeting in Pale.<sup>13922</sup> Crnčalo heard Karadžić say that the best way for Serbs to defend their houses was by attacking Muslim houses.<sup>13923</sup>

3713. On 13 June 1992, Karadžić issued an order stating that in an armed conflict, the VRS and the MUP should apply and respect the rules of international law of war, and the VRS should be regularly instructed on such rules.<sup>13924</sup> Commanders of all units, as well as each member of the VRS or other armed formation who took part in combat activities, were responsible for the application of the rules of international law of war.<sup>13925</sup>

3714. In an announcement on 11 July 1992, the Bosnian-Serb Presidency confirmed the will of the Serb people ‘to peacefully demarcate from Croats and Muslims in Bosnia and Herzegovina and solve the crisis in Bosnia and Herzegovina in a peaceful and democratic manner’.<sup>13926</sup> Noting that the Geneva Conventions mandate that emigration must be voluntary, the Presidency stated that all ‘refugees’ from the Bosnian-Serb Republic would be allowed to return and that Bosnian-Serb authorities were not forcing citizens to emigrate or forcibly detaining citizens in war zones.<sup>13927</sup>

3715. On 11 July 1992, Karadžić issued a congratulatory St Peter’s Day message to SDS members and officials. Therein, Karadžić called for particular attention to be paid to ‘the fair treatment of the civilian population of our Republic that is of a different ethnic background’. He also stated that defeated enemy soldiers should be given the protection of the Geneva Conventions.<sup>13928</sup>

3716. During the 17th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly of 24 and 26 July 1992, Karadžić stated: ‘We know very well what the fundamentalism is and that we cannot live together, there’s no tolerance, they quadruple through the birth-rate, and we Serbs are not up to that.’<sup>13929</sup>

3717. Herbert Okun stated that in September 1992, he and Cyrus Vance, both representatives of UNSG, repeatedly discussed the issue of widespread ‘ethnic cleansing’ in Bosnia-Herzegovina with the Bosnian-Serb leadership.<sup>13930</sup> When the issue of ‘ethnic cleansing’ was raised, the Bosnian-Serb leadership, such as Karadžić, Koljević, Krajišnik, and Čosić, did not deny that it was taking place.<sup>13931</sup> Rather, they stated that Muslims and Croats had also committed crimes against Serbs in World War II.<sup>13932</sup> The Bosnian-Serb leadership indicated to the witness and to Cyrus Vance during their negotiations that the use of force would stop as soon as the Bosnian Serbs got what they wanted.<sup>13933</sup>

3718. Between September 1992 and May 1993, the Bosnian-Serb leadership advocated six political goals: (i) the establishment of a Bosnian-Serb state as a separate legal entity; (ii) the establishment of a continuous Serb territory contiguous with Serbia; (iii) the establishment of an ethnically pure or overwhelmingly Bosnian-Serb state; (iv) the maintenance of a special relationship with the FRY; (v) the division of Sarajevo into Muslim and Bosnian-Serb sections; and (vi) to obtain a veto power against any residual powers which might be held by the central government of Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13934</sup> Okun stated these political goals were not to be confused with the six strategic objectives of 12 May 1992.<sup>13935</sup>

3719. On 8 September 1992, Karadžić sent a telegram to the presidents of all municipalities in the Bosnian-Serb Republic reminding them that they were bound by the Geneva Conventions.<sup>13936</sup>

3720. Okun stated that Koljević, during a meeting Okun held on 18 September 1992 with the Bosnian-Serb leadership, said that the Serbs would not accept internal borders

in Bosnia-Herzegovina ‘without some form of cantonisation’.<sup>13937</sup> Koljević explained the Serbs were, however, prepared to accept such internal borders ‘to accommodate ethnic realities’, by which Okun understood Koljević to mean ‘to make the [Bosnian-Serb Republic] pure, or as pure as the Serbian army could make it’ and based on a map drawn on the situation following ethnic cleansing had taken place.<sup>13938</sup> During a meeting of 24 September 1992, in Geneva, Okun stated that Cyrus Vance, Lord Owen, and he himself discussed the situation of ‘ethnic cleansing’ in Banja Luka with FRY Ambassador Pavićević, who acknowledged that ethnic cleansing was indeed ongoing in Banja Luka.<sup>13939</sup> Pavićević said that the ethnic cleansing ‘must be stopped’ and volunteered to call Dobrica Ćosić, President of the FRY, and Slobodan Milošević in Belgrade to put an end to the situation.<sup>13940</sup> Later that day, Okun met with Nikola Koljević, who acknowledged that ‘ethnic cleansing’ was indeed taking place in both Banja Luka and Prijedor.<sup>13941</sup> Koljević then called the regional police commander in Banja Luka; Okun reported that following the phone call, Koljević told those in the meeting a ‘fairy tale’ that the crimes in Banja Luka were committed by Muslims who had stolen VRS uniforms and were masquerading as Serbs while committing crimes.<sup>13942</sup>

3721. Witness RM-066 testified that on 30 September 1992, a funeral of 28 or 29 Serb soldiers who had been mutilated and killed by ABiH forces on the frontlines at Rogošija some days prior took place.<sup>13943</sup> The funeral was attended by over a thousand people, including Karadžić, Ostojić, Koljević, and Andrić.<sup>13944</sup> Manojlo Milovanović was also present, as were members of the SDS and the Crisis Staff (Savo Čeliković), and members of the police (Goran Višković).<sup>13945</sup> The witness testified that the atmosphere during the funeral was so tense that he was afraid of retaliatory actions of certain Serbs coming to Sušica camp to liquidate the detainees.<sup>13946</sup> In his speech, Karadžić stated:

[...] victims who will not have died in vain, whom we will not and must never forget. Nor must we forget their executioners and attackers. I do not know if I am allowed to say that we must not forgive either. Who knows how many times this century our brothers, who are no brothers at all, have been at our throats. They assault our good men. But the Lord sees that and has given us strength to resist.<sup>13947</sup>

3722. The witness testified that during a conversation concerns regarding the safety of the remaining detainees at Sušica camp were raised, and Đurić promised to assist in transferring those detainees (see the Trial Chamber's findings on the killing of detainees at Sušica camp in chapter 4.14.1 Schedule B.16.2).<sup>13948</sup> Ostojić heard the conversation.<sup>13949</sup> Also nearby were Vojislav Nikolić, Milanko Šargić, Mićo Kraljević, Milenko Stanić, Veljko Bašić, Radovan Karadžić, Nikola Koljević, and Risto Vidović.<sup>13950</sup> According to the witness, Ostojić had visited Sušica camp before, in August or early September 1992.<sup>13951</sup>

3723. During the 21st Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, on 30 October and 1 November 1992, Karadžić noted that the Serbs, together with their 'centuries-old foes', had been forcefully held in an 'artificial creation' that was Bosnia and Herzegovina.<sup>13952</sup> He further referred to the state as an experiment in which a dog and a cat were held together in a box against their will, noting that the two could remain in the box only if they lost their 'natural characteristics' and that 'we could not be Serbs and live in such a box'.<sup>13953</sup>

3724. According to a recording of the 22nd session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly on 23 and 24 November 1992, Aleksa Milojević stated that according to Article 1 of the Constitution, the Bosnian-Serb Republic was 'the state of the Serbian people' but that non-Serbs would enjoy civil rights.<sup>13954</sup> Miljanović proposed that an article should include: ‘Citizens of [the Bosnian-Serb Republic] shall be all Serbs born in the territory of former Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the National Assembly of [the Bosnian-Serb Republic] shall decide whether to grant Serbian citizenship to members of other nations, nationalities and other ethnic minorities.’<sup>13955</sup> The Assembly assigned Milojević and Radović to provide the MUP with assistance revising the citizenship bill as quickly as possible to reflect the goal that the Bosnian-Serb Republic, ‘a state of Serbian people’, naturally guarantees civil rights to all its citizens.<sup>13956</sup>

3726. On 21 January 1993, at an enlarged session of the Council for Coordination of State Policy, attended by, inter alios, Karadžić and Krajišnik, Serbia’s foreign minister Vladislav Jovanović warned that ‘ethnic cleansing carried out by force and violence’ was negatively affecting the Bosnian-Serb cause internationally.<sup>13958</sup> Jovanović suggested that the removal of the non-Serb population from areas claimed by Bosnian Serbs should instead be carried out by making life for the non-Serb population impossible so that they would ‘rush off to their original provinces’<sup>13959</sup> Karadžić responded that an ‘ethnically clean’ territory had already been achieved in some areas and gave the example of Zvornik, where 50 per cent of the population was Muslim prior to the war and where, by January 1993, the population was 100 per cent Serb.<sup>13960</sup>

3728. At a meeting on 24 April 1993, attended by Karadžić, Mladić, and Krajišnik, Karadžić said – in the context of discussions on the Vance-Owen plan – that the Bosnian Serbs would not live with Muslims, and that they would have a problem in any area where Muslims were numerous.<sup>13962</sup> Karadžić further asked to find land for the Bosnian Serbs or they would ‘fight until the end’.<sup>13963</sup>

3729. David Harland testified that during his negotiations with the Bosnian-Serb leadership, its representatives were quite open that the purpose of the conflict and the purpose of the pressure they were applying was to extract from the Bosnian government an acceptance of the redistribution of the populations.<sup>13964</sup> When asked about what was actually happening on the ground, Karadžić said that ‘some old people will probably want to remain’, envisaging the majority of the population remaining in Serb territory to be Serb and in the Muslim territory to be Muslim.<sup>13965</sup>

3730. During the 34th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, held on various dates between 27 August and 1 October 1993, Karadžić indicated that in the context of the Geneva Conference on the SFRY and according to the recommendations of the international community, a map of Bosnia-Herzegovina was drawn up, suggesting that: (i) the Muslim territory should cover 30 per cent of Bosnia-Herzegovina, (ii) the Croatian territory 16 to 17 per cent, (iii) and the Serb territory 52 to 53 per cent.<sup>13966</sup> He highlighted that the six strategic goals adopted by the Assembly (see chapter 9.2.4) had been or would be achieved.<sup>13967</sup> At the same session, Krajišnik stated that the Serbs ‘must have’ Banja Luka Municipality ‘clean’.<sup>13968</sup> adding that he would be willing to accept a smaller percentage of land provided it was separated from the Muslims.<sup>13969</sup>

3732. At a press conference following an 8 September 1994 meeting, Karadžić claimed that expulsions from Bijeljina were not the policy of the Bosnian-Serb Republic and were in fact against its interests.<sup>13970</sup> Nevertheless, Krajišnik was reported to have met with Serb ‘refugees’ on 6 September 1994, stating that there were now enough abandoned properties in Bijeljina and elsewhere to provide adequate housing for them.<sup>13971</sup>

3733. In the autumn of 1994, Momčilo Krajišnik addressed a gathering of people in Foča town, thanking them for creating a ‘true Serbian town’ and for preventing it from becoming ‘another Mecca’.<sup>13972</sup>

3734. According to a transcript of an 8 January 1995 Serbian radio-television news broadcast, Karadžić stated during a meeting with Krajišnik, Ostojić, and Prstojević in Ilidža Municipality:

If our neighbours do not show enough understanding, we will decide for ourselves how big Srpsko Sarajevo will be and what will be in Srpsko Sarajevo and then we/ unintelligible/ Sarajevo is a city and the city in [the Bosnian-Serb Republic] because all the land Sarajevo is situated on is Serbian and all the surroundings are Serbian and if they do not want to come to a quick solution, the whole Sarajevo will be Serbian in the end. We think that a more favourable variant for us is if they do not agree, and a more favourable variant for them is to agree, because in the long run, their part of the city, which has no/ favourable/ outer border, has no any prospects. Their Zenica and Tuzla will probably develop because they have got a natural outer border, however, the entire outer border in Sarajevo, all the surroundings around Sarajevo are Serbian and it is much more realistic that Sarajevo becomes Serbian than to be transformed into two cities and it is out of question that it becomes Muslim entirely.<sup>13973</sup>

3735. During the 14th Session of the VRS Supreme Command, held on 31 March 1995 in Pale, Karadžić stated: ‘It is the standpoint of our policy, there has been a separation of peoples, of cultures, of worlds.’<sup>13974</sup> He also stated: ‘Muslims remaining there in any way is disastrous for us.’<sup>13975</sup>

3736. On 28 August 1995, during the 53rd Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, Karadžić stated:

That’s our intention, to say, all right, everyone has the right to return to his home after the war, if that is an overall process. [...] That means that the Muslims from Kozluk can return to Kozluk, if the Serbs from Kozluk return to Zenica. If they don’t want to return, then we need, and if they cannot return, then we need a new war to exchange that, and that’s why I think we should always insist on this. So an overall process, either overall or none at all. [...] We can act the Serbian, Cyrillic way and tell it all to their face, or we can be a bit cunning, we do have to be a bit cunning.<sup>13976</sup>

3737. After Karadžić attended a conference in London in September 1995, Abdel-Razek met him, Plavšić, and Krajišnik in Pale, where Karadžić discussed his border plan that entailed removing Muslims from Serb territories and Serbs from Muslim territories.<sup>13977</sup> At this meeting, the witness asked Karadžić to put the heavy weapons under the control of the UN, but Karadžić refused and stated that he could not do that, as the Muslims were everywhere and the Serbs would need their heavy weapons if the Muslims attacked.<sup>13978</sup>

3738. Based on the foregoing and the evidence reviewed in chapter 9.2.4, the Trial Chamber finds that from at least 12 May 1992, members of the Bosnian-Serb political leadership, in particular Radovan Karadžić, gave speeches and statements (i) describing Muslims and Croats as enemies with whom the Bosnian Serbs could not coexist and threatening violence against those groups and (ii) advocating the transfer of populations.

3739. With respect to the Bosnian Serbs’ inability to coexist with Muslims and Croats, Karadžić made a number of statements, including threats of violence against these groups. In June 1992, he stated that the best way for Serbs to defend their houses was by attacking Muslim houses. On 24 or 26 July 1992, he asserted that ‘this conflict was roused to eliminate the Muslims’. Also on 24 or 26 July 1992, he stated that Bosnian Serbs could not live with ‘fundamentalism’. On 24 September 1992, FRY Ambassador Pavićević, and later that day, Koljević, acknowledged that ‘ethnic cleansing’ was taking place in Banja Luka, which Koljević reported was being committed by Muslims who were masquerading as Serbs. On 30 October or 1 November 1992, Karadžić said that Bosnian Serbs were held against their will with their ‘centuries-old foe’. On 24 April 1993, he further asserted that Bosnian Serbs would not live with Muslims. On 31 March 1995, he announced that the policy of the Bosnian-Serb Republic was ‘a separation of peoples’ and that Muslims remaining in Serb-controlled areas would be ‘disastrous’.

3740. The Trial Chamber further finds that Krajišnik also made a number of statements regarding the inability to coexist with Muslims and Croats, including threats of violence against these groups. On 17 May 1992, during a meeting attended by Mladić and Karadžić, he called for an ethnic demarcation. On 7 January 1993, during a meeting with Karadžić, Mladić, Gvero, and Plavšić, Krajišnik stated that ‘ethnic cleansing’ was necessary. During the 34th Session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly held between 27 August and 1 October 1993, he announced that the Serbs ‘must have’ Banja Luka Municipality ‘clean’. On 10 January 1994, he stated that Muslims living with Bosnian Serbs would be a tragedy. In autumn 1994, Krajišnik thanked people in Foča town for creating a ‘true Serbian town’ and for preventing it from becoming ‘another Mecca’.

3741. With respect to population transfers, on 7 January 1993, Karadžić stated that Muslims would be transferred out of Serb territory because the two groups could not live together. On 21 January 1993, Jovanović suggested that removal of non-Serb populations should be conducted by making life for them impossible so that they would ‘rush off to their original provinces.’

3742. The Trial Chamber further finds that the Bosnian-Serb political leadership made statements affirming respect for international law. In particular, on 13 June 1992, Karadžić ordered the VRS and the MUP to respect international law. On 11 July 1992, 8 September 1992, and 11 March 1993, he stressed the importance of abiding by the Geneva Conventions. On 8 September 1994, he stated that expulsions were not the policy of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.

3743. The Trial Chamber will further consider these findings in chapter 9.2.14 when determining whether the alleged overarching JCE existed.

9.2.6 The role of VJ

3744. According to the Prosecution, Mladić, Slobodan Milošević, and other JCE members used the JNA and later the VJ to facilitate the implementation of the common objective of the overarching JCE.<sup>13979</sup> Specifically, it argued that the VJ provided the VRS with logistical support, personnel assistance (including salaries, benefits, and other financial compensation), weapons, ammunition, and other materiel which was indispensable to the VRS's efforts in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>13980</sup> The Defence submitted that the only form of cooperation between the VJ and the VRS was done for pragmatic purposes and that cooperation was even more limited when the FRY Government imposed sanctions on the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>13981</sup> It further submitted that, while there were examples of material assistance and cooperation between the VRS and the VJ, this assistance did not imply a merged chain of command or the VJ participation's in a JCE.<sup>13982</sup> Finally, the Defence argued that VJ assistance to the VRS was intended for non-combat related activities only and that it was a legitimate form of support.<sup>13983</sup>

Formation of the VJ and the VRS

3746. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 3.2 that on 15 May 1992, the UNSC demanded that all interference from outside Bosnia-Herzegovina by units of the JNA cease immediately and that those units either be withdrawn, be subject to the authority of the Bosnia-Herzegovina Government, or be disbanded and disarmed. The formal withdrawal of the JNA from Bosnia-Herzegovina took place on 19 May 1992 and the FRY established the VJ as the successor to the JNA. Slobodan Milošević was the Supreme Commander of the VJ and President of the Supreme Defence Council. As such, Milošević commanded the VJ, in compliance with decisions of the Supreme Defence Council – a body he also chaired. The Commander of the VJ General Staff Života Panić – from May 1992 until August 1993 when he was replaced by Momčilo Perišić – determined the basic organisation and use of the VJ and implemented decisions issued by the FRY President.

3747. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 3.1.1 and 3.2 that the formation of the VRS in Bosnia-Herzegovina in May 1992 was a product of the dissolution of the JNA. In this respect, the Trial Chamber also recalls its findings in chapter 3.2 on the preparations in April and May 1992 by the FRY Presidency enabling the formation of the VRS. Specifically, on 6 May 1992, two days after it announced the JNA's withdrawal from Bosnia-Herzegovina, the FRY Presidency ordered that all JNA members who were citizens of Bosnia-Herzegovina were to be kept in their current posts in units and institutions of Bosnia-Herzegovina. These JNA members – a group of approximately 90,000 soldiers of mostly Serb ethnicity – were informed that they would retain all their rights associated with their military status as JNA members while serving in Bosnia-Herzegovina. When the VRS was established, many of the commands and units of the JNA simply renamed themselves as units of the VRS and remained organized as they had been under the JNA (on the establishment and structure of the VRS, see chapter 3.1.1). Finally, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 3.1.1 and 3.2 that withdrawing from Bosnia-Herzegovina on 19 May 1992, the JNA left the VRS with substantial amounts of materiel<sup>13992</sup>, including tanks, APCs, heavy artillery, and large quantities of ammunition.

Role of the VJ in procuring materiel to the VRS

3748. The Trial Chamber notes that a substantial amount of evidence regarding Mladić's role throughout the war in procuring materiel from the VJ (reviewed in chapters 3.2, 9.3.6, and 9.5.4 ) is relevant to the Trial Chamber's determination regarding the role of the VJ in facilitating the implementation of the common objective of the alleged overarching JCE. As a result, a number of references to the evidence reviewed in these chapters have been included below.

3749. Ewan Brown testified that in the late summer of 1992, the VRS Main Staff and the VJ General Staff agreed on a plan of supply code-named 'Izvor', to deliver large quantities of ammunition and fuel from the FRY to the VRS, despite the arms embargo imposed by the UNSC in September 1991. According to Brown, on 12 September 1992, the VRS Main Staff sent a letter to the 1KK noting that pursuant to an agreement between the VJ General Staff and the VRS, the 14th Logistics Base had received 225 tonnes of ammunition, and that a further 220 tonnes were to follow. The first delivery was, however, carried out through Operations Group Doboj; between 5 August 1992 and 14 September 1992, the FRY provided the Operations Group with large quantities of materiel, including small arms, artillery, tanks, and rocket ammunition.<sup>13993</sup> There were difficulties in obtaining combat and non-combat materials when the corridor between Belgrade and Banja Luka was blocked between May and August 1992, but 'almost immediately' after the opening of the corridor, materiel was again transferred between the two towns.<sup>13994</sup> On 1 January 1993, Colonel Vaso Tepšić, Assistant Commander for Logistics of the 1KK, reported to the VRS Main Staff that as part of the 'Izvor 3' plan, 29 trailer trucks had been sent to transport materiel from the FRY.<sup>13995</sup>

3750. On 8 April 1993, VRS logistics organs concluded at a meeting in Bijeljina that they had to count on the materiel and humanitarian support from the FRY, the VJ, and other sources outside the VJ in the coming period.<sup>13996</sup> It was also concluded that, with the exception of fuel, specific types of ammunition, mines, and explosives, the supply, however, had to mainly come from sources in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>13997</sup> VRS Main Staff requests for aid to the VJ General Staff were to be selective, realistic, and allow the requisition to be done with the authorization of the VRS Main Staff.<sup>13998</sup> The main role in forwarding the aid should be played by the logistics base which should ensure close cooperation with the units' organs, the VRS

Main Staff Logistic Sector, as well as military and civilian institutions in the FRY.<sup>13999</sup> The participants in the meeting concluded that, in general, all acquisition, forwarding and distribution was to be planned, organised, and carried out by the VRS Main Staff Logistic Sector.<sup>14000</sup> Following the Logistic Sector's collection of requests for materiel from subordinate units, a joint request would be forwarded to the VRS Main Staff Head of Legal Administration Affairs, who in turn would submit it to the VJ General Staff for authorisation.<sup>14001</sup>

3751. The Trial Chamber refers to the evidence reviewed in chapter 9.5.4 that Mladić issued instructions to organs of the VRS in March 1993, October 1993, and July 1995 according to which all requests for materiel from the VJ were to be authorized by himself and were to be coordinated through the VRS Main Staff Logistic Sector. In this respect, the Trial Chamber also refers to the evidence reviewed in chapters 9.3.6 and 9.5.4 regarding the manner in which the VJ provided materiel to the VRS and the type of materiel that it provided.

3752. On 10 December 1993, Đorđe Đukić ordered that any acquisition of material supply from the VJ was to be regulated by the VRS Main Staff and approved by the MoD.<sup>14002</sup> On 27 December 1993 Momčilo Perišić issued an order to the VJ General Staff Operations Administration that all requests from the VRS and the SVK to the VJ were to be sent through the VJ General Staff, which would in turn direct these requests to the relevant VJ specialist organs and representatives.<sup>14003</sup> Only requests signed by the respective SVK or VRS Main Staff Commander and which had been proposed to Perišić by his Assistants would be personally approved by Perišić; other requests would not be considered.<sup>14004</sup> The order was issued to further the cooperation and coordination in implementing joint tasks of providing prompt assistance to the SVK and the VRS and was forwarded on 27 December 1993 to all relevant VJ Army Commands and VJ

Perišić also ordered that every month, ‘a work plan by the VJ General Staff would regulate the issues and time of coordination with the Main Staffs of the SVK and VRS’.<sup>14006</sup> On 28 December 1993, Perišić issued a decision stating that the VJ would cede a certain amount of ammunition, weapons and military equipment to the VRS.<sup>14007</sup>

3753. Reynaud Theunens testified that, from August 1993 until December 1995, the VJ’s logistics assistance to the VRS included delivery of weapon systems, including Grad rocket engines.<sup>14008</sup> In 1994 and 1995, the VRS used these engines for the propulsion of the modified air bombs, which were deployed by the SRK in the wider Sarajevo area.<sup>14009</sup>

3754. Between 1993 and 1995, the supply of armament and ammunition from the VJ to the VRS was arranged by and through several companies, including Krušik based in Valjevo (Serbia) and Pretis based in Vogošća (Bosnia), and included modified air bombs, silencers and bullets for sniper rifles (for the SRK), mortar charges and shells, rockets, detonators, and hand-held rocket launchers.<sup>14010</sup> Once VJ approval was received, the VRS Main Staff would inform the MoD that a purchase from or through these companies could be made.<sup>14011</sup> The prices of the weapons and ammunition that were the subject of the sale contract between Pretis-Vogošća and Krušik-Valjevo were established by the responsible administration of the FRY MoD that dealt with the 3755. Ekrem Suljević testified that the shells recovered during the shelling incidents in 1995 with marking 'KB' in Cyrillic on them, standing for 'KV', were manufactured in Serbia, at Krušik-Valjevo factory, between 1993 and 1995.<sup>14014</sup> According to a 1971 JNA instruction manual, shells produced by Krušik-Valjevo were to include a marking 'KB' as well as the year of production.<sup>14015</sup>

3756. The Trial Chamber received evidence on reporting by VRS organs in 1994 regarding equipment received from the VJ. In June and December 1994, the VRS Main Staff required the SRK and various VRS units to submit reports on the receipt of materiel and technical equipment from the VJ ground forces, pursuant to VRS Main Staff requirements.<sup>14016</sup>

3757. Specifically concerning the SRK, on 15 January 1995, Čedo Sladoje, Deputy Commander of the corps, asked the VRS Main Staff to approach the VJ and request that the VJ replenish ammunition to units in the southern part of the Sarajevo front.<sup>14017</sup> Slavko Gengo testified that from March 1995 until the end of the war, he was often involved in collecting weapons for the VRS from the VJ in his capacity as SRK Commander of the 7th Infantry Battalion.<sup>14018</sup> Requests for weapons and ammunition by the SRK would be presented to SRK Commander Dragomir Milošević for his approval and signature; approved requests would then be sent to the VRS Main Staff.<sup>14019</sup> All such requests for munitions were either directed to Mladić or to one of his subordinates in the Main Staff Logistic Sector for urgent approval.<sup>14020</sup> Once an SRK request had been approved by the VRS Main Staff, Gengo was tasked with personally delivering the approved request to the VJ logistics base in Belgrade.<sup>14021</sup> On 18 April 1995, Dragomir Milošević addressed the VRS Main Staff with a request for the delivery of weapons and 3759. The Trial Chamber further refers to its review of the evidence in chapters 5.1.2, 9.3.2, 9.3.6, and 9.5.4 regarding the cooperation throughout the war between factories Pretis-Vogošća (Bosnia-Herzegovina) and Krušik-Valjevo (Serbia) on the production of weapons and ammunition for the VRS as well as the assembly of modified air bombs between 1993 and 1995 which were used by the SRK in Sarajevo. The Trial Chamber also refers to the evidence reviewed in chapter 9.3.6 that the VJ supplied materials to Pretis which were necessary for the production of various weapons and ammunition. The Trial Chamber also refers to its review of the evidence in chapter 5.1.2 and 9.5.4 regarding the role of the VJ in the development of modified air bombs for the VRS. Lastly, the Trial Chamber refers to its review of the evidence in chapter 9.5.4 regarding discussions between members of the FRY leadership, the VJ General Staff, and members of the VRS Main Staff concerning the covert transport of VJ materiel to the VRS and the logistics involved in getting the materiel from the FRY to Pretis in Bosnia-Herzegovina during the Indictment period.

Role of the VJ in procuring VRS personnel

3760. Ewan Brown testified that in 1992, some military personnel from the JNA volunteered to serve in the VRS and bridge the shortfall in manpower, particularly in some ranks.<sup>14027</sup> The numbers were however never large enough to cover the shortfall.<sup>14028</sup> The Trial Chamber refers to the evidence reviewed in chapter 9.3.6 regarding a meeting of Mladić and Commander of the JNA General Staff Adžić on 30 April 1992 regarding the payment of officers of (what would become) the VRS from the FRY budget. According to Brown, a February 1993 1KK document stated that the VJ should not send men to the VRS who, for various reasons, leave the VRS after two or three months of training.<sup>14029</sup> Professional JNA officers, non-commissioned officers, soldiers under contract and workers in the VRS who were previously members of the JNA continued to be financed by the FRY, but had problems with accessing accounts from around April 1992.<sup>14030</sup>

3761. On 10 February 1993, the FRY Supreme Defence Council held its 7th session at which problems related to the financing of the assistance offered to the RSK and the Bosnian-Serb Republic were discussed.<sup>14031</sup> Života Panić stated that ‘huge amounts of material means’ had been sent to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and to the RSK.<sup>14032</sup> The VJ had sent 2,500 commanding officers to the VRS and 700 to the SVK, and had also prepared and armed 3,000 volunteers who were sent to the RSK.<sup>14033</sup> Panić informed the Council that he received requests for ammunition and weapons on a daily basis.<sup>14034</sup> By 10 February 1993, the VJ had sent 68,000 combat rations to the SVK and provided them with equipment to form one complete corps.<sup>14035</sup> Since the VJ did not have funds for the purpose of helping the Bosnian-Serb Republic, such assistance would have to be provided through the fund for special purposes.<sup>14036</sup> Slobodan Milošević noted that 'they' did not ask for money, but only for ammunition, means, food, and clothing.<sup>14037</sup> Dragojević noted that the expenditures of the VJ were by far the largest in the FRY budget.<sup>14038</sup>

3762. On 11 October 1993, the FRY Supreme Defence Council held its 14th session at which one item on the agenda was 'personnel issues' which concerned regulating the status of officers in the VRS and SVK whose status had not been regulated under the new law of the FRY.<sup>14039</sup> Perišić explained that the way had been paved for the Bosnian-Serb President, in his capacity as Supreme Commander, to issue an order regulating the status of these officers.<sup>14040</sup> In order to avoid criticism, a temporary formation had been set up within the VJ in Serbia to which these officers would be appointed, whereas in reality these officers would carry out their duties elsewhere.<sup>14041</sup> Perišić expressed his concern that the VRS and SVK were asking for specific VJ officers and that, if these officers refused, the VJ would be forced to view them as deserters.<sup>14042</sup> He explained that the VJ would not have a basis to do so and risked that these VJ officers could expose the FRY's military assistance to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and say '[t]hey're claiming that they're not helping, but in fact they are'.<sup>14043</sup> Bulatović also expressed concerns on forcing a group of 7,000 VJ soldiers from Serbia and Montenegro who were born in Bosnia-Herzegovina to fight there, while half of them refused; Bulatović highlighted the risks involved if information of them being forced to fight in Bosnia-Herzegovina were to become public.<sup>14044</sup> Perišić stated that his proposal was only shared with Milošević as the VJ's Supreme Commander and with the Supreme Defence Council, to which Milošević responded that 'only a single copy' of the proposal should stay with Perišić.<sup>14045</sup> Bulatović expressed similar concerns to maintain the proposal's secrecy.<sup>14046</sup> The Council members concluded that Perišić's proposals on these issues were to be reviewed at the next session of the Supreme Defence Council.<sup>14047</sup> Next, Perišić discussed a proposal – put to him by the VRS and the Bosnian-Serb Government – for the Council to ‘verify’ promotions of VJ officers serving in the VRS to the ranks of Lieutenant General and Major General.<sup>14048</sup> Perišić stated that these officers serving in Bosnia-Herzegovina had been promoted to this rank and that the process of Council’s verification of their ranks meant that they – as well as their families who stayed in the FRY – would enjoy all the rights associated to this rank in the FRY.<sup>14049</sup> Milošević suggested that Perišić first consult with Mladić on the reason for each promotion, and then submit his own opinion about these proposed promotions at the next session of the Supreme Defence Council.<sup>14050</sup> The Trial Chamber also refers to its review of the evidence in chapter 9.3.6 regarding a conversation between Mladić, Perišić, and VRS Main Staff officers on 19 October 1993, in which Perišić stated that the VJ would send all officers and military conscripts born in Bosnia-Herzegovina to the Bosnian-Serb Republic, and that whoever would refuse would be discharged from the VJ.

3763. On 10 November 1993, the FRY Supreme Defence Council held its 15th Session and one of the agenda items of this meeting was the regulation of entitlement issues to members of the VRS and the SVK who were from the VJ and the former JNA.<sup>14051</sup> Momčilo Perišić explained that part of an earlier order issued by the Supreme Defence Council presented difficulties for him in promoting officers; it dictated that failure to obey orders by VJ superior officers to be deployed abroad resulted in punishment and the officer in question could no longer be promoted. Slobodan Milošević agreed and stated that the ability to promote someone was within Perišić’s general competence; no special authorization by the Supreme Defence Council to do so should be required; the Council members agreed and struck out the relevant clause. Regarding the Council’s decisions on deployment by VJ officers to the VRS and SRK, Momir Bulatović remarked that ‘it should remain confidential because this really is a very sensitive issue’, to which Milošević replied ‘[t]here is only one copy and General [Perišić] has it'.<sup>14052</sup> Perišić assured Bulatović that VJ officers would only receive an order stating they were deployed to the 40th Personnel Centre and no mention would be made of the Bosnian-Serb Republic or the RSK.<sup>14053</sup> Perišić then stated that the Council should pass a decree 'verifying' the promotions of VJ officers serving in the VRS and the SVK who, while serving in those armies, had received a promotion to the rank of lieutenant general and major general. Milošević asked Perišić whether Mladić had reported to Perišić on this issue, which Perišić confirmed Mladić had done. At this point, Zoran Lilić asked '[i]s the clause "who are in the army of Republika Srpska and the Republic of Serbian Krajina" really necessary? They are, after all, on our payroll', to which Momčilo Perišić responded '[t]he decree will not contain that clause; this will not be in writing anywhere. That'll be in the explanation, but they will not be given a copy of the explanation'.<sup>14054</sup> Milošević, who was worried officers would 'boast' about the Council's decision ratifying their promotion in the newspaper, asked whether decrees verifying VRS and SVK promotions would be sent to the officers in question, to which Perišić replied that this would not be the case.<sup>14055</sup> Milošević proposed that the Supreme Defence Council accept Perišić's proposals for the promotion of these officers.<sup>14056</sup> Boško Kelečević testified that promotions in the VRS and the subsequent promotion in the VJ indeed followed the procedure discussed in the Supreme Defence Council.<sup>14057</sup> Following the witness's promotion in the VRS, the Supreme Defence Council verified his promotion after which he received his new rank in the VJ.<sup>14058</sup>

General Staff of the VJ, Perišić, ordered the formation of the 30th and 40th Personnel Centres; assigning the VJ General Staff's Chief of the Organisation, Mobilisation and Recruitment Administration to determine their organisational and establishment composition, and the Chief of the Personnel Administration to determine any other elements of the basic mobilisation plan.<sup>14060</sup>

3765. The Trial Chamber refers to its review of the evidence in chapter 9.5.4 that on 27 December 1993, Perišić informed Mladić that the FRY Supreme Defence Council adopted a decision for 'everyone' to go back to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and the RSK, as well as that the offensive on Sarajevo should be kept 'universal'. Approximately 19,000 conscripts and 3,500 recruits would be transferred to Han Pijesak and should be deployed from there to war units. On 27 December 1993, Mladić recorded a meeting in Belgrade with the Commander of the VJ General Staff Perišić, in which the latter informed Mladić that the Supreme Defence Council adopted a decision for 'everyone' to go back to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and the RSK, as well as that the offensive on Sarajevo should be kept 'universal'.<sup>14061</sup> Approximately 19,000 conscripts and 3,500 recruits would be transferred to Han Pijesak and should be deployed from there to war units.<sup>14062</sup> Perišić was told that he and Mladić should make an assessment of Sarajevo, as the politicians would come to a decision on this regard.<sup>14063</sup> The Trial Chamber also refers to its review of the evidence in chapter 9.3.6 on coordination meetings held between 1993 and 1995 between the VJ General Staff and Mladić on staff promotions and the VJ's authority – which it used – to deny, approve, extend, or verify VRS promotions.

3766. The Trial Chamber also considered the evidence in exhibit P5093, which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D. At the FRY Supreme Defence Council's 21st session on 7 June 1994 Perišić raised the question of military service of national minorities, and stated that the VJ had around 19,000 'šiptar'<sup>14064</sup> recruits eligible for the compulsory military service annually.<sup>14065</sup> Perišić argued that it would be <sup>14064</sup> The Trial Chamber understands the term 'šiptars' to be a derogatory term for Albanians, see translator's note at P5091 (Stenographic record of the 21st Session of the Supreme Defence Council held on June 1994), p. 39.

‘detrimental’ to the security situation in the FRY if the VJ were to draft them, but that it would also be damaging to the VJ that they did not respond to the call-up for military service; Perišić proposed that these Albanians should in some way make amends for not serving in the VJ.<sup>14066</sup> The Council members agreed a three to five percent quota for Albanians, and applying the same principle to Muslims and Hungarians, could be drafted into the VJ, as long as there were internal rules that these soldiers could not carry weapons or ammunition, and they could not be assigned to guard duty.<sup>14067</sup> This way, Perišić explained, no one could say these minorities were not in the VJ.<sup>14068</sup> Perišić stated that Muslims who had completed military training in the FRY could not be sent to the Bosnian-Serb Republic: ‘[...] this is very important. If we send Muslims there, they’ll kill them’.<sup>14069</sup> He also said that the RSK and the Bosnian-Serb Republic could no longer wage war without the help of the VJ.<sup>14070</sup> Perišić further set out that the Bosnian-Serb Republic and the RSK had maintained superiority because they could rely on technical and materiel advantages provided by the VJ; if the VJ would stop helping these Republics in the area of education, financing of educated personnel and material assistance for combat operations, they would start losing territories. Perišić proposed that:

Perhaps the best solution would be to force their political leaderships and governments to form a budget and say how much they have earmarked for the army and how much they need in aid. So far, believe it or not, they didn’t earmark any funds for the army, they did this only superficially. They have no laws or a defined budget for the army and so on. They rely solely on us and come to us with demands. However, when something has to be thought up, which could have decisive consequences, they often take counter-productive decisions.<sup>14071</sup>

Perišić then raised problems caused by the Bosnian-Serb Republic and RSK on which he could not decide without the approval of the Supreme Defence Council.<sup>14072</sup> He explained that one of the problems of the republics was the relinquishment of spare parts for weapons and military equipment, to which Milošević responded '[t]heir principle is – what's ours is ours and theirs, but what's theirs is only theirs. We can use every trick in the book but they won't give us anything. They have spare parts for which they have no use.'<sup>14073</sup> Perišić raised the problem that the VRS and the SVK had promoted hundreds of commissioned and non-commissioned officers, but the VJ had no means to pay for the difference in salary.<sup>14074</sup> Later during the meeting, Perišić informed the Council 'You should know, and this is not contained in the report, that in Republika Srpska we support and pay for 4,173 persons, or 7,42% from the VJ, and in the Republic of Serbian Krajina 1,474 persons or 2.62% from the VJ'; that's a total of 5,647 persons. We allot around 14 million for them each year and we need the same amount for next year, and that's just for their salaries. That's a great help to them'.<sup>14075</sup>

3767. According to the transcript of the 50th session of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, held on 15 and 16 April 1995, VRS Main Staff Chief of Staff Milovanović stated that he had warned the president and the prime minister that the effects of economic sanctions by Serbia against the Bosnian-Serb Republic would be catastrophic for the families of officers and presented a picture of them without salaries for six months.<sup>14076</sup> Milovanović stressed that these salaries were the result of an agreement between the Bosnian-Serb Presidency and the Presidency of Yugoslavia and that 3,000 families living in Serbia were dependent on them.<sup>14077</sup>

3768. On 13 June 1995, the Supreme Defence Council verified the promotions of a number of professional soldiers from the 30th Personnel Centre, namely Major General Đorđe Đukić and Major General Milan Gvero to the ranks of Lieutenant General; and of Colonel Radivoje Miletić, Colonel Zdravko Tolimir, Colonel Jovan Marić, and Colonel

Role of the VJ in VRS combat operations

3769. Brown testified that the VJ assisted the VRS on matters of communications and radio-technical reconnaissance by making a number of its connecting pathways and communication channels at FRY stationary communication hubs available to the VRS for the transit of a number of VRS radio-relay channels.<sup>14080</sup> According to Brown, Talić recommended that a logistics base for the VRS be established on the territory of the FRY with the ‘objective of coordinating procurement and the execution of logistics support tasks on the territory of the FRY for the needs of the VRS’.<sup>14081</sup> As of late 1992, the linking of interception and monitoring of electronic emitting systems, a.k.a. RTI, started in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic so as to enable the collection of data on enemy radar stations, surveillance, navigation, and guidance systems.<sup>14082</sup> The VRS also received support from the FRY in terms of foodstuffs, medical assistance and supplies, the treatment of soldiers in FRY hospitals, and the passing of military and civilian mail between the VJ, the VRS Main Staff, and subordinate units.<sup>14083</sup>

3770. On 6 February 1993, Lieutenant General Zoran Stojković, Assistant Commander of the VJ General Staff, requested that the VRS and the SVK provide timely and more complete information for the purpose of assessing and monitoring the situation in the territories of the Bosnian-Serb Republic and the RSK.<sup>14084</sup> The VJ sought information on the enemy and own forces, in relation to their composition, deployment, and troop strength, the tasks of their own units, as well as on probable intentions, manner, and axes of enemy activity.<sup>14085</sup>

3771. According to a VJ General Staff report, dated 26 October 1993, Momčilo Perišić assigned certain tasks at a meeting of the Supreme Command Staff on 27 September 1993.<sup>14086</sup> Among these tasks was an instruction to the Sector for Operations Affairs of the VJ General Staff, to improve coordination and cooperation with the SVK and with the VRS.<sup>14087</sup> Perišić also ordered the Intelligence Administration to ensure the inflow of as much verified intelligence as possible on the situation in the RSK and Bosnian-Serb Republic, in cooperation with intelligence organs of the Main Staff of the SVK and with the VRS Main Staff.<sup>14088</sup>

3772. On 11 April 1994, Mladić reported to the Chief of Staff of the VJ General Staff about combat operations that took place that day between 9:45 a.m. and 2:45 p.m.: the launch of two ABiH attacks and the destruction of an unidentified helicopter by VRS troops in the area of the Nišići Plateau, and the NATO offensive against the VRS troops in the region of Goražde.<sup>14089</sup>

3773. The Trial Chamber refers to its findings in chapter 9.5.4 regarding the involvement of the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade in VRS operations in Sarajevo in November and December 1993, as well as Mladić's involvement therein. Evidence related to this operation which was not directly related to the Accused's acts and conduct is reviewed below.

3774. On 13 January 1994, Lieutenant Colonel Ljubiša Stojimirović, Commander of the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade reported that elements of this brigade's units reinforced the 72nd Special Brigade thus entering the formation of the SRK on 17 December 1993.<sup>14090</sup> On 31 December 1993, upon the arrival of the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade in Vogošća, the reinforcement units left the formation of the 72nd Brigade and re-entered the formation of the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade. Stojimirović reported that the current numerical strength of the brigade was 210 men. Pursuant to an order of the SRK Commander, the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade entered the reserve formation of the SRK on 2 January 1994. Since that date, all units of the brigade, with the exception of the military police platoon, were engaged in the areas of responsibility of the Vogošća, Mrkonjić, and Koševo brigades. The engagement of the military police detachment for special purposes also included the area of operations of the Rajlovac Brigade. The VJ Guards Motorised Brigade had at its disposal three 82 millimetre recoilless guns and four 120 millimetre mortars.<sup>14091</sup>

3775. On 30 December 1993, the VJ Guards Motorised Brigade noted in its war diary that several of its units were to march from Belgrade through Zvornik to Han Pijesak.<sup>14092</sup> On 31 December 1993, the brigade arrived at its destination in Vogošća.<sup>14093</sup> On 5 January 1994 on the approval of the VJ Commander of the General Staff, the 72nd Special Brigade was to leave the SRK zone of responsibility on 6 January 1994 and that a part of the zone of responsibility which was held by this brigade was to be taken over by the Guards Motorised Brigade.<sup>14094</sup> On 28 January 1994, a column of nine vehicles, two Praga and one 20/3 20 millimetre triple-barreled self-propelled anti aircraft gun set off for Belgrade.<sup>14095</sup> On 30 January 1994, the commands of the Special Units Corps and of the Guards Motorised Brigade, along with the Military Police Battalion and the Engineers Company set off for Belgrade.<sup>14096</sup>

The Trial Chamber's findings

3776. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that, when confronted with resolutions by the UNSC to cease its military involvement in Bosnia-Herzegovina in 1991 and 1992, the FRY Presidency ordered all JNA soldiers stationed there to withdraw from Bosnia-Herzegovina in May 1992. At the same time, the JNA was transformed into VJ, the new army of the FRY; as such, soldiers of the former JNA became soldiers of the VJ.

3777. The Trial Chamber finds that the FRY did not cease its military involvement in Bosnia-Herzegovina in May 1992. In carrying out the instructions of the FRY Supreme Defence Council, the VJ General Staff set up a covert personnel centre called the '30th Personnel Centre' through which VJ soldiers were paid in order to fight in Bosnia-

Herzegovina as part of the VRS. These soldiers were employed and paid by the VJ 30th Personnel Centre (and received all associated benefits, such as pension) and were formally listed as working in the FRY. However, they were carrying out their military duties within the VRS. Up until at least October 1993, all Bosnian-Serb JNA soldiers born in Bosnia-Herzegovina were ordered by the VJ to go there; and those who were already stationed there, were ordered to stay in Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 3.2 that upon the JNA's declared withdrawal in May 1992, approximately 90,000 former JNA soldiers who were Bosnian-Serb were ordered to remain in Bosnia-Herzegovina so that the Bosnian-Serb leadership could take command of them. The Trial Chamber finds that most of these soldiers, through assistance of the VJ, were incorporated into the VRS and the SVK. In this context, the Trial Chamber refers to its review of evidence in chapter 9.5.4 that in December 1993, VJ General Staff Commander Perišić informed the Accused of a decision by the FRY Supreme Defence Council that 'everyone' in the FRY had to go back to the Bosnian-Serb Republic and the RSK; approximately 19,000 VJ conscripts and 3,500 VJ recruits would be transferred to Han Pijesak (the location of the command of the VRS Main Staff), from where they would be deployed to the relevant VRS units. The Trial Chamber concludes in this respect that VJ soldiers born in Bosnia-Herzegovina who refused to serve in the VRS when requested either by the VJ or by the VRS, risked immediate expulsion from the VJ and could, in any event, no longer be considered for any kind of future promotion. If a VJ soldier was promoted in the VRS, approval of that same promotion by the VJ was required so that rights and benefits associated to that new rank could be enjoyed upon return to the FRY. For promotions to the highest army ranks in the VRS, the FRY Supreme Defence Council's approval ('verification') was required.

3778. The Trial Chamber further finds that arms and ammunition factories in Serbia, including Krušik-Valjevo, produced material for the VJ, which in turn was provided to units of the VRS. Among others, Krušik-Valjevo produced aerial bombs and 120-millimetre mortar shells which were supplied to the SRK through organs of the VJ. Approval by the VJ General Staff was required for material to be provided from Krušik-Valjevo to the VRS. The Trial Chamber also finds that Pretis- Vogošća in the Bosnian-Serb Republic produced weapons and ammunition for the VRS and the SRK and assembled modified air bombs for the SRK. The VJ supplied Pretis with the material necessary for their production.

3779. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 9.5.4 that as of March 1993, both the VRS and the VJ issued orders to keep tight control over the materiel provided by the VJ to the VRS. In order to ensure full control over the materiel coming from the VJ to the VRS, Mladić ordered that all requests for materiel were to be authorized by himself and were to be coordinated through the VRS Main Staff Logistics sector. In December 1993, Perišić issued a similar order to all related VJ organs, in which he added that only VRS requests which had been approved by Mladić would be considered by the VJ General Staff Logistics organ.<sup>14097</sup>

3780. The Trial Chamber notes that until at least June 1994 the Bosnian-Serb Republic did not have an army budget and finds that all members of the FRY Supreme Defence Council – including Slobodan Milošević and Momčilo Perišić – were in agreement that the VRS relied solely on the VJ to sustain the army's needs. In this respect, the Trial Chamber refers to its findings in chapter 9.3.6 that Mladić acknowledged that almost 90 per cent of the ammunition used by the VRS between May 1992 and April 1995 had been provided by the VJ and its predecessor, the JNA.

3781. The Trial Chamber recalls its factual finding in chapter 9.5.4 that in order to prevent the breaking of blockade of Sarajevo, at least one VJ unit, the Guards Motorised Brigade, was re-subordinated to the SRK around the area of Vogošća.

3782. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the VJ provided the VRS with weapons, ammunition, and thousands of soldiers throughout the war; these soldiers received their salaries and benefits from the VJ while they were incorporated into the VRS. In this respect, the Trial Chamber notes that it received no evidence to suggest that the VJ issued instructions (or was able to issue instructions) to these soldiers once they were incorporated into the VRS.

3783. The Trial Chamber will further consider the above findings in chapter 9.2.14 below.

<sup>14097</sup> The Trial Chamber understands the measures taken by the VJ General Staff to tighten its control over VJ resources were implemented against a background of an enormous strain caused by the VJ on the overall budget of the FRY and the persistent refusal of the VRS to pay for materiel and other costs covered by the VJ.

9.2.7 The role of MUP

3784. According to the Indictment, from 12 May 1992 until 30 November 1995, members of the MUP at a republic, regional, municipal, and local level were members of an overarching JCE together with the Accused and a number of others, including Radovan Karadžić, with the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory in Bosnia-Herzegovina through the crimes charged.<sup>14098</sup> The Prosecution argued that JCE members heightened their focus on the need for an ethnically-separate MUP as the tactic to keep all Serbs in one state shifted to the establishment of an ethnically-separate Serb entity in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>14099</sup> The MUP played a key role in the implementation of the common criminal objective and immediately after its formation, participated in the wave of take-overs and operations to consolidate or expand Bosnian-Serb territory.<sup>14100</sup> According to the Prosecution, during combat operations in which units of both the VRS and the MUP participated, MUP forces were often re-subordinated to the VRS to ensure singleness and unity of command.<sup>14101</sup> The Prosecution further argued that the MUP also participated in the implementation of the common criminal objective by committing crimes independently of the VRS during a number of ‘cleansing operations’.<sup>14102</sup> The Defence, in addition to submitting that the MUP was created out of necessity, argued that the chain of command of the MUP was exclusively within the MUP and that there was only very limited de facto re-subordination of the MUP to the VRS.<sup>14103</sup> If there was coordination, it was ad hoc and each organization maintained its own chain of command.<sup>14104</sup>

3785. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts in relation to the role of the MUP. It also received evidence from Vinko Nikolić, a member of the SOS from November 1991 to mid-May 1992 and a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff from its creation on 14 April 1992, where he held the position

The creation of the ethnically-separate MUP

3786. Tomislav Puhac testified that the newly formed coalition of the SDA and HDZ at the helm of the MUP did everything possible to appoint Serb employees to lower-ranking positions, thereby preventing their influence in decision-making.<sup>14120</sup> In the course of 1991, following an order by Alija Delimustafić, the reserve police forces were mobilized. According to the witness, they did not mobilize the old reserve police forces who had gone through a verification process and training, but new forces who were loyal to the SDA. The witness received information from colleagues at the SJB Administration that Serbs from the police were abandoning or changing their jobs, and that consequently the police stations had only one ethnic group, i.e. Bosnian Muslims.<sup>14121</sup> According to the witness, SDA extremists and criminals were being provided with weapons under the guise of mobilization of the reserve police forces.<sup>14122</sup> The only police station in the territory of Sarajevo which remained mixed, i.e. comprised both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims, was the Ilidža police station.<sup>14123</sup> The reason for this, in the opinion of the witness, was that the majority of the population was Serbian in this part of Ilidža.<sup>14124</sup> Around 20 April 1992, the Green Berets, Patriotic League, and the reserve police carried out a heavy attack on the part of Ilidža where Serbs were the majority.<sup>14125</sup> Following this event, the Muslim police officers left the Ilidža police station.<sup>14126</sup> As a result, the personnel of this station also were of one ethnicity, namely Serbian.<sup>14127</sup>

3787. In a speech, Tomislav Kovač, Minister and Acting Minister of Interior during the war (see chapter 3.4), stated that in a meeting held at the Holiday Inn Hotel in Sarajevo, the members of the MUP, together with the political structures from the ranks of the Serbian people, received instructions for the creation of a Serbian state in the territory of the former Bosnia-Herzegovina. According to Kovač, the MUP was the first state organ of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, comprising former Bosnian MUP personnel of Serb ethnicity. Kovač further stated that the MUP combat units, together with the TO units created by the SDS throughout the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, ‘existed as the backbone of the Serbian movement in the fight for the protection [of] the people, and the creation of the Serbian state’.<sup>14128</sup> Milenko Karišik testified that Kovač’s speech would have referred to the period between 5 April and mid-May 1992, before the establishment of the VRS.<sup>14129</sup>

3788. On 17 April 1992, Stojan Župljanin, head of the CSB Banja Luka, ordered the division of the police along ethnic lines. Police officers were ordered to demonstrate their loyalty to the Serb municipality by wearing the insignia of the Bosnian-Serb Republic and signing a declaration that they would respect its laws and regulations. Only persons of Serb ethnicity signed the declaration.<sup>14130</sup> Part of the preparation for separation included the arming of Serb police officers and Serb police stations.<sup>14131</sup> The CSBs and SJBs reassigned stockpiled weapons belonging to the reserve police force to the new Serb MUP.<sup>14132</sup> Employees of the Bosnia-Herzegovina MUP and the abolished CSBs and SJBs were to be given the opportunity to be taken over by the Bosnian-Serb MUP, if they were willing to take an oath of allegiance prior to their engagement.<sup>14133</sup> In the spring of 1992, all employees in local SJBs and other public services were required to sign an oath of loyalty to the Bosnian-Serb authorities. Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who refused to sign the declaration of loyalty were dismissed. Those who accepted to sign could remain within the service.<sup>14134</sup>

3789. With regard to Sanski Most Municipality, Mirzet Karabeg stated that around mid-April 1992, the Serbs changed the insignia of the police into the Bosnian-Serb Republic insignia and put up a Serb flag on the police building.<sup>14135</sup> Already on 11 April 1992, Vlado Vrkeš, the Municipal President of the Sanski Most SDS, gave a 48-hour ultimatum to the non-Serb members of the police to sign a loyalty oath and wear the Serb insignia.<sup>14136</sup> After the ultimatum, the Serbs took over the MUP.<sup>14137</sup> Vinko Nikolić provided further details, testifying that the Bosnian-Serb political leadership and the leadership of the Sanski Most SJB offered all Muslim and Croat policemen a chance to stay in the newly formed Bosnian-Serb police forces.<sup>14138</sup> Only one Croat policeman remained.<sup>14139</sup> The other policemen went to the Sanski Most Municipal Assembly building, armed with weapons from the Sanski Most police station, and tried to set up a purely Muslim police station.<sup>14140</sup> The Bosnian-Serb political leadership issued an ultimatum for these policemen to surrender their weapons and leave the Municipal Assembly building.<sup>14141</sup> As it was not respected, the Sanski Most TO and the Serb police force were ordered to disarm the Muslim policemen and to liberate the Municipal Assembly.<sup>14142</sup> The Muslim policemen left the building by a side entrance and set off to the villages of Šehovci and Trova, which both had a Muslim majority.<sup>14143</sup> According to the witness, the municipal building was not surrounded and the Muslim forces were given space to get out, in order to avoid conflict.<sup>14144</sup>

With regard to Prijedor Municipality, Witness RM-065 stated that sometime before 30 April 1992, the SDS discussed the division of Prijedor Municipality and the police department into Serb and Muslim parts.<sup>14145</sup> In early April 1992, a meeting was held in the Municipal Assembly building in Prijedor attended by, inter alios, Stojan Župljanin, Chief of the CSB Banja Luka, Župljanin's deputy, and Milimir Stakić. Župljanin stated that the purpose of his visit was to discuss the separation of the police force into Serb and Muslim parts. The witness saw the participants of the meeting walk into the meeting room; Župljanin and his bodyguard were both wearing camouflage uniforms and the latter carried a 'Scorpio gun'.<sup>14146</sup> Although the witness was unsure if

Župljanin had the authority to resolve the issue of separating the police force, he assumed this was the case based on how everyone treated him.<sup>14147</sup>

MUP involvement in disarming non-Serbs

3791. The Trial Chamber will now address the involvement of members of the MUP in the disarming of non-Serbs in the Municipalities. On 18 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff demanded the disarmament of non-Serbs in the ARK through public announcements, orders and decisions.<sup>14148</sup> Calls for disarmament usually involved the issuance of an ultimatum to hand in illegally owned weapons.<sup>14149</sup> The ARK decisions on disarmament were implemented by the municipal civilian authorities, the CSB and the SJBs, and also by the army.<sup>14150</sup> The military and civilian police were responsible for the implementation of the decision on disarmament. In accordance with this decision, Stojan Župljanin ordered all SJBs to report back to the CSB on the disarmament operations. The order contained detailed instructions on the expected contents of the report.<sup>14151</sup> The municipal SJBs, as ordered, reported back to the CSB on the operations implemented in their respective areas of control.<sup>14152</sup> Although the calls for disarmament in the ARK were directed to all ‘paramilitary units and individuals who illegally possess weapons’, they were selectively enforced against non-Serbs.<sup>14153</sup> The disarmament of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats throughout the ARK created an imbalance of arms and weapons favouring the Bosnian Serbs in the Bosnian Krajina, a situation amplified by the fact that the Bosnian-Serb population was arming itself on a massive scale at the same time.<sup>14154</sup> The disarmament of the non-Serbs guaranteed Bosnian-Serb control over the population of villages, towns and cities throughout the ARK.<sup>14155</sup>

3792. With regard to Sanski Most Municipality, Karabeg stated that at the end of April 1992, non-Serbs in Sanski Most Municipality were being disarmed.<sup>14156</sup> Witness RM-

MUP involvement during the take-over of Municipalities and coordination with the VRS 3793. The MUP cooperated closely with the VRS.<sup>14161</sup> On 15 May 1992, Mićo Stanišić ordered that all employees of the MUP organize into 'war units'.<sup>14162</sup> The units included squads, platoons, companies, and battalions and this organization was for the purposes of defending the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>14163</sup> Stanišić also authorized CSB chiefs and the commander of the police detachment of the Sarajevo CSB to appoint officers with appropriate qualifications to command posts of established war units, and to ensure that the principle of subordination and superiority in the command system was upheld.<sup>14164</sup> The Minister of Interior, the commander of the police detachment of the Sarajevo CSB, and the chiefs of the CSB could order the use of MUP units in coordinated action with the VRS.<sup>14165</sup> The commander of the police detachment and CSB Chiefs were to inform Ministry staff of such use.<sup>14166</sup> While participating in combat operations, MUP units were to be subordinated to the command of the armed forces, but they would still be under the direct command of certain Ministry officials.<sup>14167</sup> In order to command and control the MUP forces, Stanišić ordered that a staff be established, comprised of a commander, who would be the Minister of Interior, and numerous members, including, inter alios, the commander and deputy commander of the police detachment and CSB chiefs.<sup>14168</sup> The order formalized the cooperation by explaining how MUP units should cooperate with the VRS.<sup>14169</sup> Stanišić authorized the CSB heads to implement these arrangements.<sup>14170</sup> MUP's first annual report, covering the period April to December 1992, stated that participation in combat activities stood at '1,451 police officers, on average, every day'.<sup>14171</sup> The Ministry had put 6,167 police officers at the disposal of the VRS, most of them from the reserve.<sup>14172</sup>

3794. In accordance with the law in effect in the Bosnian-Serb Republic, MUP units could be re-subordinated to the VRS for various purposes, including to reinforce the VRS during combat activities.<sup>14173</sup> When re-subordinated, the MUP forces followed orders issued by the VRS.<sup>14174</sup> The commander of the VRS unit to which the MUP unit was re-subordinated and the commander of the MUP unit coordinated their work in carrying out the tasks assigned by the VRS.<sup>14175</sup> MUP forces were engaged in combat operations for a specific time to carry out a precisely described task.<sup>14176</sup> During their re-subordination, MUP forces retained their formation and could not be disintegrated or separated.<sup>14177</sup>

3795. In a video interview, Mićo Stanišić stated that members of the MUP, including those taking part in the defence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic and those involved in regular police tasks, and the VRS were 'a single organism, a single cell, or rather, many cells in a single organism, with their roles in the organism'.<sup>14178</sup> He continued that they were an indivisible force that together made the armed forces of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>14179</sup> According to Karišik, Stanišić's remarks pertained to combat operations only.<sup>14180</sup> He added that from early May 1992 onwards, the VRS and the units of the MUP together comprised the armed forces of the Bosnian-Serb Republic in a constitutional and legal manner.<sup>14181</sup> Milosav Gagović testified that around 16 May 1992, the period when the SRK was being formed, the MUP forces were subordinated to the armed forces, but not to the JNA 4th Corps.<sup>14182</sup>

3797. On 22 June 1992, the commander of the 30th Krajina Division, Stanislav Galić, issued an order to the commands of the Operation Group-30, 1st Infantry Brigade, and the 19th Partisan Brigade of the 30th Krajina Division on the use of police in armed combat. The order was issued since police forces had been used in different ways in armed combat in the area of responsibility of the 30th Krajina Division and in order to overcome related problems. Only in exceptional cases, police forces could be used where there was an urgent need for them to participate in direct combat activities. In other cases, the use of the police required permission from the chief of the CSB.<sup>14190</sup>

3798. Đorđe Đukić stated that special MUP brigades existed in the battalions. Whenever the VRS Main Staff planned an operation in the field, it would request

Karadžić, the Supreme Commander of the VRS, to use police units or, if an operation was planned on the Corps level, the Corps commander would address the MUP organ in the relevant area to request the engagement of their units. Throughout the war, the civilian police participated in battles and was mainly autonomous in action and under its own command, even though it operated as part of a unit. According to the witness, for a brief period in 1992 the civilian police was re-subordinated to army commands.<sup>14191</sup>

3799. On 11 July 1992, the Minister of Interior called a meeting that was attended by, inter alios, various chiefs of SJBs, SNBs and CSBs.<sup>14192</sup> The Minister recalled that as early as mid-May, the MUP issued a special order on organizing police and other MUP forces into war-time units for the defence of the territory of the 'Serbian Republic'.<sup>14193</sup> Thus, cooperation was immediately achieved with other parts of the Serb defence forces, i.e. the Army.<sup>14194</sup> The Minister, in his introductory address, stated that a large number of members of the MUP, nearly all of them, were involved in war operations. The chiefs of the centres noted that the discharge of regular duties and tasks of MUP members was greatly affected by the fact that the police were still on the first combat lines, which was justified in the beginning. The VRS kept civilian police within its ranks after their agreed engagement in combat activities as part of military police units, which greatly affected the discharge of regular duties and tasks of MUP members.<sup>14195</sup> The Minister pointed out that Serbs accounted for only one-third of the total population of the former Bosnia-Herzegovina and that they were at war with a Muslim-Croat coalition, comprising the remaining two-third, which meant that the balance of power was in the enemy's favour.<sup>14196</sup> Consequently, it had been necessary for the MUP to replenish front-line units where the VRS units were, which could be the case in the future as well.<sup>14197</sup> At the meeting, the request by the VRS, crisis staffs, and the war presidencies to the army to round up or capture as many Muslim civilians as possible and to leave 'undefined camps' to internal affairs organs was also discussed.<sup>14198</sup> In addition, conditions in some of these camps were described as poor, with no food, and some individuals in the camps were disregarding international norms.<sup>14199</sup> It was decided that a joint meeting between the MUP and the VRS had to be organized in order to ensure more effective cooperation and coordinated action, with special emphasis to be placed on the problem of engaging police in combat activities when this was not necessary.<sup>14200</sup> It was also discussed that looting mostly occurred during ‘mopping-up’ operations and was conducted by paramilitary formations, military formations, and the police.<sup>14201</sup> If a convoy transporting the looted property was stopped at checkpoints or confronted by authorised personnel, weapons were sometimes drawn, hindering law-enforcement organs from preventing the looting.<sup>14202</sup>

3800. On 27 July 1992 Mladić recorded that he had a meeting with the Bosnian-Serb Republic Deputy Prime Minister Trbojević and the Minister of Interior Mićo Stanišić.<sup>14203</sup> Mladić noted that Trbojević had stated that a schedule had to be made of what was placed at the disposal of the SJB and Military Police.<sup>14204</sup> Mladić recorded that Stanišić stated that they were now in a position to choose policemen and that according to the structure, 80 per cent was now in the army.<sup>14205</sup> It was therefore necessary to clarify the responsibilities of the MUP and the VRS.<sup>14206</sup> Stanišić noted that cooperation was insufficient and suggested to link up and cooperate more.<sup>14207</sup> Stanišić also stated that he had sent an order that morning that a whole section of the MUP forces had to be placed within the competence of the VRS.<sup>14208</sup>

3801. Ratko Adžić, the Minister of Interior from 20 January until 12 July 1993 (see chapter 3.4), testified that the CSB and local police stations performed most operative businesses within the jurisdiction of the MUP.<sup>14209</sup> Police forces in every police station were prepared to work alongside the VRS, if required by the military situation.<sup>14210</sup> According to the Law on the MUP and its organisation, the Minister of Interior determined the use of MUP forces and of the Special Police Brigade. of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, the witness transferred the responsibility for the use of police units in joint cooperation with the army to the chiefs of CSBs. Adžić testified that in the field, the VRS corps commanders and the CSB chiefs decided together on the use of these police units in combat operations. However, during combat assignments in the context of joint operations, each commander retained command over their own units.<sup>14211</sup>

3802. On 5 June 1993, Mladić requested the Prime Minister and the Minister of the Interior to provide a battalion-strong unit (500 to 600 men) of MUP forces for the independent execution of tasks relating to operation Mač in coordinated action with VRS units.<sup>14212</sup> This unit was to be re-subordinated to the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade Commander, Colonel Lizdek.<sup>14213</sup> A MUP representative had to go to the IKM of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade in the course of combat operations and was to report necessary information on the engaged unit to Colonel Lizdek on 7 June 1993.<sup>14214</sup> Mladić requested to be informed, at least by 6 June 1993, about the possibility of the engagement of the requested MUP unit.<sup>14215</sup>

3803. On 17 January 1994, Karadžić approved Mladić's request to engage members of the CSB in combat operations in the zone of responsibility of the Doboj OG and the IBK.<sup>14216</sup> Minister of Interior Stanišić also received a copy of Karadžić's decision.<sup>14217</sup>

3805. On 8 February 1995, Mladić recorded a meeting he had with Karadžić and representatives of MUP, including Milenko Karišik and Special Police Brigade Commander Goran Sarić, as well as Kapetina.<sup>14219</sup> During this meeting, Karišik explained the manpower used by the MUP, including at the front lines in the area of Bihać; he explained that some 5,700 MUP members were engaged in combat operations

He also stated that ‘4500 policemen trained during the war’. Kapetina stated that from a total of 219,268 military conscripts, 209,409 were VRS members and 9,859 were MUP members. He concluded that 4.7 per cent of the total number of military conscripts were members of the MUP. Kapetina reported that the MoD had no undeployed military conscripts and that some members were fictitiously registered in both the MUP and the VRS.<sup>14225</sup> Mladić summarized Karadžić to have stated that ‘military conscripts not registered anywhere – that’s a big reserve –’.<sup>14226</sup>

3806. On 10 March 1995, Mladić sent an order to the Commands of the 1KK and 2KK, the IBK, and IKM-1 and 2 of the VRS Main Staff, concerning a series of combat unit transfers.<sup>14227</sup> Mladić ordered the 2KK Command to pull MUP forces out of combat operations and replace them with their own forces in the Corps’ zone of responsibility by 12 March 1995.<sup>14228</sup> After two days, the MUP forces were to be sent to the zone of responsibility of Operations Group Pauk, pursuant to orders of Karadžić and the MUP.<sup>14229</sup> Corps commanders were personally accountable to Mladić for the execution of these tasks.<sup>14230</sup>

3807. On 7 April 1995, Karadžić ordered the VRS Main Staff and the MoD to transfer 56 military conscripts from VRS units to the MUP in order to form a detachment of special police forces in Srbinje.<sup>14231</sup> Fifty conscripts were members of the Srbinje 11th Herzegovina Light Infantry Battalion and six were members of the DK.<sup>14232</sup> In an interview in November 1994, Malko Koroman, the Head of Police Administration in Pale Municipality, stated that the police participated in and organized all armed action in Pale until the VRS was formed.<sup>14233</sup> Furthermore, according to Koroman, the only way to fill the MUP ranks was to make an agreement with the Supreme Commander, VRS Main Staff, and MoD that the MUP would get at least five per cent of the VRS recruits.<sup>14234</sup> He stated that he would make efforts to cooperate closely with the VRS Main Staff on all military issues and combat actions.<sup>14235</sup>

3808. On 6 June 1995, Mladić contacted the President, Prime Minister, and Minister of Defence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, as well as the commands of the the SRK, HK, IBK, and DK in order to stop the incursions of Muslim forces in the zones of responsibility of the SRK and the HK.<sup>14236</sup> He requested full mobilisation of all available able-bodied men in the zone of responsibility of the SRK and the HK and to place them at the disposal of those Corps'.<sup>14237</sup> He also suggested that civilians be prohibited from moving out of the Sarajevo municipalities, Kalinovik, Trnovo, Rudo, and Čajniče Municipalities, and other border municipalities without approval and to engage the MUP and members of the Military Police to bring in conscripts who did not respond to the call up.<sup>14238</sup> In addition, units of the MUP in the zone of responsibility of the SRK, the HK, and the IBK were to be placed at the disposal of the SRK and the HK to end the enemy offensive and to secure the Sarajevo-Trnovo-Dobro Polje-Miljevina road.<sup>14239</sup>

3809. On 1 July 1995, Mladić sent a telegram to the SRK, the 1st IKM of the HK, the 3rd IKM of the VRS Main Staff, and the MUP in Pale that the VRS Main Staff had to be informed through the proper channels if anyone was seriously wounded in the

3810. On 26 September 1995, Tomislav Kovač, Deputy Minister of the MUP, proposed to the VRS Main Staff, in particular Mladić, and the Banja Luka IKM to schedule a meeting between Dragan Filipović, the coordinator of the MUP forces, Mladić, and Kovač himself to resolve problems with regard to the command of troops currently part of the MUP.<sup>14243</sup>

3811. The Trial Chamber received evidence about the specific situation in various municipalities. With regard to Vlasenica Municipality, Mane Đurić testified that as of the spring of 1992, the SJB Vlasenica carried out some of its activities in coordination with the JNA, and later the VRS.<sup>14244</sup> According to the witness, after 19 May 1992 when the VRS was already established, the VRS requested police forces from the SJBs. Đurić explained that as head of the SJB, it was his task to then ask the chief of the CSB for approval. The witness would then send the policemen to the VRS where they would be placed under the command of the VRS unit in charge. Đurić confirmed that this meant that the police forces would be re-subordinated to the VRS.<sup>14245</sup>

3812. With regard to Kotor Varoš Municipality, on 6 July 1992, the 1KK Command reported to the VRS Main Staff that the Banja Luka MUP, together with the 22nd Brigade and the Čelinac Light Brigade, was taking part in the mopping-up of the area of Kotor Varoš, Šiprage and Maslovare in Kotor Varoš Municipality.<sup>14246</sup>

3813. With regard to Sarajevo, on 3 August 1992, Radomir Bjelanović, the Chief of the Milići SJB, reported to Zoran Cvijetić, the Chief of the Sarajevo SJB, that the Milići SJB was engaged in combat activities or operations at various times during May and June 1992, and had policemen 'at positions' between 26 July 1992 and 3 August 1992.<sup>14247</sup> Bjelanović also reported that '[t]here were no problems with regards the co-

3814. Concerning Rogatica Municipality, a Rogatica SJB report to the Romanija Birač CSB dated 14 August 1992, sets out that members of the SJB Rogatica participated in all combat activities that took place in Višegrad and Rogatica Municipalities from April to July 1992.<sup>14251</sup>

3815. With regard to Prijedor and Sanski Most Municipalities, a report from Momir Talić stated that by 14 June 1992, volunteers and police, together with the Prijedor Operations and Tactical Group, had secured the Bosanski Novi – Prijedor – Banja Luka, the Prijedor – Sanski Most – Sanica, and the Sanski Most – Bosanska Krupa routes, and had dealt with the remaining enemy troops in the areas of Kozarac village, Prijedor Municipality, Prijedor and Sanski Most.<sup>14252</sup> The report also states that volunteers and police were positioned together with the 1st and 2nd Infantry Brigades, who were part of the Doboje Operations Group, south of Donji Vakuf on the axis north of Koščani village – north of Kopčić village – Brežičani village and in the Vrbas river valley south of Jajce.<sup>14253</sup>

3816. On 5 August 1992, Sanski Most SJB Chief Mirko Vrućinić reported to the Banja Luka SJB that members of the Sanski Most SJB had neither been deployed nor participated in combat operations conducted by the armed forces.<sup>14254</sup> Vrućinić also reported that in combat operations or 'so-called clearing operations', the army picked up the population, lately only those fit for military service, and simply handed them over to the civilian organs and authorities. After that, the police were obliged to provide security for these camps and were responsible for, inter alia, food, health care, and hygiene. Additionally, SJB investigation organs and national security services were obliged to take over the entire job of the operative processing of prisoners, including interviewing and triage. As of 5 August 1992, approximately 1,600 prisoners had been processed. Vrućinić raised numerous questions with regard to the status of these camps and those responsible for them, as well as to the status of those held in the camps. Additionally, Vrućinić reported that the exchange of information between the armed forces and the SJB was not at the required level, primarily because permanent collaboration had not been established between them.<sup>14255</sup>

3817. Branko Basara testified that the 6th Krajina Brigade did not co-operate with the municipal authorities and the MUP, except for exchange of information and the 'manning of units'.<sup>14256</sup> According to the witness, the brigade did not cooperate with the SJB and TO in terms of carrying out disarming operations in Sanski Most.<sup>14257</sup> According to a report on a consultation meeting with, inter alios, the brigade commanders, a senior officer of the 1KK, the presidents of municipal assemblies, and chiefs of MUP on 13 September 1992, Mladić tasked brigade commanders to extend maximum support to the civilian authorities and the MUP.<sup>14258</sup> Basara stressed that assistance was only provided if those authorities asked for it.<sup>14259</sup>

3818. On 15 September 1992, the Prijedor SJB Chief, Simo Drljača, informed the CSB Banja Luka that it was unable to meet the request of the 1st Krajna Corps to put 100 policemen of the Prijedor SJB at the disposal of the VRS by 16 September 1992.<sup>14260</sup> Drljača recalled that earlier that month, they 'gave' 417 policemen to the VRS in order to go to the Han Pijesak area and that there were currently five policemen in Kotor Varoš and one policeman was in Jajce as a combat vehicle driver.<sup>14261</sup> In an interview of 9 April 1993, Simo Drljača commented that cooperation between the Prijedor police and the VRS and its officers was 'exceptional'.<sup>14262</sup> Drljača commented that the cooperation occurred in 'joint cleansing of renegades on the terrain', joint work at the

Crimes perpetrated by the MUP

3819. In chapters 4.1-4.7, 4.9-4.12, and 4.14, the Trial Chamber found that members of the MUP were involved in a large number of crimes, including murder, unlawful detention, and cruel or inhumane treatment, committed in the following municipalities: Banja Luka, Bijeljina, Foča, Ilidža, Kalinovik, Ključ, Kotor Varoš, Pale, Prijedor, Rogatica, Sanski Most, and Vlasenica. In most of these municipalities the MUP members committed the crimes in cooperation or coordination with the members of the VRS.

The Trial Chamber's findings

3820. The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence's submission that the MUP was created out of necessity is not relevant to determining the role of the MUP with regard to the implementation of the common objective of the alleged overarching JCE. The Trial Chamber therefore dismisses this argument.

3821. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapter 3.4 on the structure of the MUP. There, the Trial Chamber found that: the MUP was established on 28 March 1992; from at least 18 April 1992 onwards there was a functioning reporting system within the MUP and information collected by the MUP-SNB was also provided to the SJB administration; from April 1992 onwards, the MUP started establishing special police units. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapter 9.2.2 that as early as 1991, the SDS promoted territorial division along ethnic lines and the establishment of separate, parallel Bosnian-Serb political, police and military institutions. From April 1992, previously established Bosnian-Serb institutions were no longer working in parallel to those of multi-ethnic Bosnia-Herzegovina, but constituted separate and distinct authorities founded by the SDS, and that as such, they constituted de facto state institutions, functioned autonomously, and answered to the Bosnian-Serb leadership and institutions.

3822. Based on the evidence reviewed above, the Trial Chamber finds that in the spring of 1992, all employees in local SJBs and other public services were required to sign an oath of loyalty to the Bosnian-Serb authorities; Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who refused to do so were dismissed. In preparation for the establishment of a separate Bosnian-Serb MUP, Serb police officers and police stations were armed.

3823. The Trial Chamber further finds that organs of the MUP, including the CSBs and SJBs, implemented the ARK Crisis Staff's order to disarm non-Serbs in April and May 1992 and seized a large number of weapons from non-Serbs in municipalities of the ARK, including Banja Luka, Ključ, Sanski Most, and Prijedor.

3824. The Trial Chamber further finds that the MUP cooperated closely with the VRS. On 15 May 1992, this cooperation was formalized when Minister of Interior Stanišić ordered the organization of all MUP employees into war units for the purpose of defending the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic. Stanišić authorized CSB chiefs and the commander of the police detachment of the Sarajevo CSB to appoint officers to command posts of established war units. These CSB chiefs and the commander were also ordered to ensure that the principle of subordination and superiority in the command system of the MUP was upheld. In accordance with the laws of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, MUP units could be re-subordinated to the VRS for various purposes, including reinforcement of the VRS during combat activities.

3825. The Law on Internal Affairs set out that the Minister of Interior determined the use of the MUP forces, including the Special Police Brigade. However, in practice, the Minister of Interior delegated the authority to make such a decision to the chiefs of CSBs. If the VRS Main Staff planned a combat operation and it required the involvement of the MUP, it requested Karadžić to authorize the use of police units, who then informed the Minister of Interior. At times, the Commander of the VRS Main Staff also requested the Bosnian-Serb Prime Minister and the Minister of Interior for the assistance of MUP forces. If an operation was planned at the corps level, the corps commander would address the Chief of the CSB of the respective area to request the engagement of their units. VRS corps commanders and the CSB chiefs then decided together on the use of the MUP units in combat operations. Problems that arose with regard to the engagement of members of the MUP in combat operations were discussed with members of the VRS Main Staff and the MUP.

3826. The Trial Chamber finds that MUP units were engaged in combat operations for a specific time to carry out a precisely described task. When MUP units were participating in combat operations, they were re-subordinated to the command of the VRS, while still being under the direct command of MUP officials. This meant that tasks were assigned by the VRS and that MUP units followed orders issued by the VRS in that respect. From at least 12 May 1992 until at least 26 September 1995, MUP units participated in combat operations with the VRS. From April until at least December 1992, the MUP placed 6,167 police men at the disposal of the VRS. In February 1995, approximately 5,700 MUP members were engaged in combat operations. SJBs in several municipalities, including Ilidža, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, Rogatica, and Vlasenica, carried out combat activities in cooperation with the VRS or responded to requests to provide police men to participate in operations. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's argument that there was only limited de facto re-subordination of the MUP to the VRS and that the chain of command of the MUP was exclusively within the MUP.

3827. The Trial Chamber will further consider the involvement and participation of the MUP in the take-over of the Municipalities and the commission of the crimes, as set out above, in the context of the existence of the alleged overarching JCE in chapter 9.2.14 below.

3828. The Trial Chamber will address the evidence pertaining to the Accused's role with regard to the MUP in chapter 9.3.3 and 9.3.4.

9.2.8 The role of paramilitary formations

3829. The Trial Chamber will first consider evidence with regard to the general role of paramilitary units in relation to the alleged overarching JCE. The Trial Chamber will then turn to evidence specific only to those individual paramilitary units that it has found to have committed crimes within the temporal and geographic scope of the Indictment. Evidence pertaining to the Accused's connection to any such paramilitary unit will be considered in chapter 9.3.4.

Overview

3830. According to the Indictment, members of the alleged overarching JCE included leaders of Serbian and Bosnian-Serb paramilitary forces and volunteer units, or alternatively, these leaders were used by members of the alleged JCE to carry out crimes in furtherance of its objectives.<sup>14264</sup> The Trial Chamber will address the Defence arguments with regard to paramilitaries in relation to the specific units discussed below. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of Adjudicated Facts with regard to the general role of the paramilitary units in relation to the alleged overarching JCE. Further, it received evidence from Witness RM-802, a VRS officer;<sup>14265</sup> Božidar Krnojelac, a Serb member of the ‘village guards’ in Foča who was present at the KP Dom facility daily from mid-April to mid-May 1992;<sup>14266</sup> Branko Basara, Commander of the 6th Krajina Brigade from 29 October 1991 to mid-December 1992;<sup>14267</sup> Duško Čorokalo, a reserve second lieutenant in the command of the 6th Krajina Brigade;<sup>14268</sup> Trivko Pljevaljčić, a Bosnian Serb from Foča Municipality who was commander of the 3rd Company of the 5th Battalion of the Foča Tactical Group and who worked in KP Dom Foča in 1995;<sup>14269</sup> Radoslav Daničić, a driver for Branko Basara who was stationed in Sanski Most;<sup>14270</sup> Vinko Nikolić, a member of the SOS from November 1991 to mid-May 1992 and a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff from its creation on 14 April 1992, where he held the position of transport commissioner since 19 June 1992;<sup>14271</sup> Dragomir Andan, a Bosnian Serb who served as a MUP senior inspector in Bijeljina, Zvornik and Brčko from 1 June 1992 and then as an intelligence officer in the VRS Main Staff from September 1992;<sup>14272</sup> Ratomir Maksimović, who served in the SRK Command from 1 April 1993 to 1 September 1994 and from 30 April 1995 to 31 March

3832. A decision by the Bosnian-Serb Presidency of 13 June 1992 banned the formation and operation of all self-organized armed groups on the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>14279</sup> The decision also ordered existing self-organized armed groups and individuals to put themselves under the command of either the VRS or the MUP.<sup>14280</sup> Any armed groups that continued to operate independently would be disavowed by the Bosnian-Serb Presidency and severely sanctioned.<sup>14281</sup> Also on 13 June 1992, Karadžić informed the UNSG of the decision disowning all paramilitary groups to demonstrate the attempt to stop the tragedy of ethnic conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina at different relevant levels.<sup>14282</sup>

3833. Following this decision, there were numerous military and MUP reports about the activities of paramilitary formations throughout the Bosnian-Serb Republic. support' for paramilitary formations.<sup>14283</sup> He further reported that all military formations were put under unified control of the organs of the Bosnian-Serb Republic pursuant to an order by the Bijeljina Presidency on 11 June 1992 but several paramilitary organisations failed to respect several orders by the unified command.<sup>14284</sup>

3834. According to a report from the 1KK Command to the VRS Main Staff dated 10 July 1992, a power struggle existed throughout the entire corps' zone of responsibility, because of strong self-proclaimed groups and organisations which were, inter alia, looting in the area, especially in Banja Luka.<sup>14285</sup>

3835. During a MUP meeting on 11 July 1992, attended by, inter alios, the Minister of Interior and various chiefs of SJBs, SNBs, and CSBs, it was noted that many paramilitary formations lacked a unified command and engaged in looting.<sup>14286</sup>

3836. On 24 July 1992, the SRK Command issued a directive noting that paramilitary formations had been unmasked and eliminated.<sup>14287</sup> The directive also noted that commands and units had a special duty to break up, expel, and destroy various paramilitary formations.<sup>14288</sup>

3837. According to a MUP Trebinje CSB report on the activities of paramilitary formations on the territory of the SAO Herzegovina dated 30 July 1992, at the beginning of the war, different armed military formations, both small and big groups, performed tasks in the zone of the war operations mostly in co-operation with the VRS.<sup>14289</sup> However, later, especially during July 1992, the activities of some armed groups or parts of the larger formations complicated the security situation significantly, particularly in the municipalities of Nevesinje and Stolac.<sup>14290</sup> Attempts to establish checkpoints and maintain law and order in the area of Bileća and Trebinje were prevented by the SJB.<sup>14291</sup> In order to prevent illegal activities by these armed groups, SJBs made agreements with authorised VRS commands that members of certain groups be sent to the frontline under the command of VRS units. According to the report, there was a lack of active and consistent engagement of the authorised military organs, particularly of the military police, who claimed that the problem should be solved by the MUP because the armed groups did not belong to the VRS. The report recommended eliminating the leaders and sending local persons to join these groups within the VRS in order to dismantle the armed groups.<sup>14292</sup>

3838. Dragomir Andan testified that in July 1992, he and his colleague, Mićo Davidović, requested the assistance of the VRS Main Staff because they lacked the resources to oppose the Yellow Wasps, who, at that time, were a well-armed paramilitary unit consisting of 120 men.<sup>14293</sup> At a Main Staff meeting in Han Pijesak attended by Salapura and Tolimir, and partially attended by Mladić, the witness and Davidović put forward a proposal for disarming, arresting and eliminating the paramilitaries.<sup>14294</sup> The operation commenced on 29 July 1992 with the cooperation of the VRS Main Staff.<sup>14295</sup> Sixty-five people were detained, of whom 47 were Yellow Wasps.<sup>14296</sup> A large quantity of stolen cars, weapons and ammunition, gold, and other goods was confiscated, and the Zvornik police were ordered to return the seized property to its Muslim owners.<sup>14297</sup> It was not possible to obtain evidence against 54 of the 65 arrested paramilitary members.<sup>14298</sup> Those of them who were Serbian citizens were deported back to the FRY and those who were Bosnian Serbs were turned over to the VRS because ‘they were military conscripts’.<sup>14299</sup> However, eleven members of the Yellow Wasps could be identified as organisers of criminal activities, and the witness filed charges against them in the prosecutor’s office in Bijeljina on 28 August 1992.<sup>14300</sup> The charges were filed at the civilian and not the military prosecutor’s office because the paramilitaries did not belong to the VRS and were considered civilians.<sup>14301</sup> They were charged with aggravated robbery, which could lead up to 20 years in prison.<sup>14302</sup> The prosecutor who took over the case was called Biljana, and the witness heard from his colleague Davidović that she released all of them without a trial.<sup>14303</sup> After the Yellow Wasps were released, Vojin Vučković went to Pale and met Plavšić and Malko Koroman, chief of the police station in Pale.<sup>14304</sup> His brother Dušan Vučković, however, was handed over to the military police in August 1992 in order to verify if he had committed crimes against Muslim civilians.<sup>14305</sup> He was tried in Serbia and sentenced to prison on 8 July 1996.<sup>14306</sup>

3839. On 28 July 1992, Tolimir, the Head of the Department for Intelligence and Security Affairs, reported to among others the VRS Main Staff Commander, the President and the Prime-Minister of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, and the departments of intelligence and security of all corps commands, that paramilitary formations and groups were an important feature of the war in the former Yugoslavia. These groups included Arkan's men, Šešelj's men, Captain Dragan's Commandos, Captain Oliver's Commandos, Čarli's men, Jović's men, the White Eagles, the Wolves, and the Smoked Ribs. These groups displayed iconography ranging from Orthodox ornaments and symbols to Chetnik and Vietnamese war symbols.<sup>14307</sup> According to the report, the precondition for the presence and activity of paramilitary formations was the breakdown of civilian and military authorities.<sup>14308</sup> Paramilitary units were mostly composed of persons of low moral quality, including those who had previously been convicted for murder, robbery, larceny and the like. Often such units included pathological criminals whom the conditions of war and general lawlessness brought to the fore. The report also details that many paramilitary formations displayed hatred of non-Serbs and 'one can conclude without reservations that [they] are the genocidal element among the Serbian people'. The majority of such groups were motivated by war profiteering and looting and none expressed political affiliation to the ruling SDS, instead maintaining ties with opposition parties from Serbia, including the Serbian Renewal Movement, the Serbian

People's Renewal, and the SRS.<sup>14309</sup> Paramilitary formations did not take part in direct fighting with the enemy, but instead operated behind the lines of regular VRS units, looting and burning property and killing the innocent population.<sup>14310</sup> There were about 60 paramilitary groups in the Bosnian-Serb Republic totalling between four and five thousand men.<sup>14311</sup> Tolimir stated that every armed Serb in the VRS had to be placed under the exclusive command of the VRS, or else be disarmed and legal measures were to be taken.<sup>14312</sup>

3840. On the same day, Mladić ordered the disarmament of all paramilitary formations, groups, and individuals in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic by 15 August 1992 in order to put all armed formations and individuals under the unified command of the VRS.<sup>14313</sup> All paramilitary formations were instructed to join the regular units of the VRS. The order stated that those who carried out misdeeds and crimes, including robberies, were to be disarmed, arrested, and prosecuted before the courts of the VRS, regardless of their citizenship. Paramilitary formations, groups, and individuals from within their structure who refused to be placed under the unified command of the VRS in cooperation with the MUP were to be disarmed, arrested, and charged with crimes.<sup>14314</sup> Mladić issued this order after finding that paramilitary formations were present in the zones of responsibility of all VRS corps.<sup>14315</sup> They presented themselves as Special Activity Units, 'Četniks', or Guards Units and acted under the symbols of opposition parties, such as the Serbian Renewal Movement, the SNO, and the SRS.<sup>14316</sup> Corps commanders and the Chief of Administration for Intelligence-Security Affairs of the Main Staff were responsible for implementing and executing this order.<sup>14317</sup>

3841. The VRS Main Staff Intelligence report of 28 July 1992, while aimed at bringing law back to areas now under Bosnian-Serb control, also shows that the VRS was more concerned with looting and the breakdown of order than with the widespread crimes committed by the paramilitaries.<sup>14318</sup> The report also does not account for the fact that incorporation of paramilitaries had been the rule already before July 1992 and that crimes were committed, and were continuing to be committed, by the paramilitaries under the auspices of the Bosnian-Serb armed forces.<sup>14319</sup> For example, the Prijedor paramilitary units named in the report took part in the attacks on Kozarac, Hambarine, and other areas in Prijedor as part of the VRS in May 1992.<sup>14320</sup>

3842. Witness RM-802 referred to the decision to subordinate the paramilitaries in mid-July to mid-August 1992 and, according to him, the absorbing of the paramilitaries into the VRS legitimised and enabled their continued criminal activities.<sup>14321</sup> They were involved in looting and profiteering and neither the brigades nor the corps did anything to disband them.<sup>14322</sup> General Talić at first did nothing to remove such extremist personnel from the ranks because the climate at the time allowed extremists to operate and prevented officers from punishing any Serb who was 'at the fronts and [...] doing something against the Muslims and Croats.'<sup>14323</sup> According to Witness RM-802, this climate and attitude resulted from enormous political pressure exerted on military commanders by the SDS leadership including the municipal presidents, presidents of municipal boards, and the relatives of extremist SDS members.<sup>14324</sup> This climate existed at all levels within the VRS.<sup>14325</sup> Later, around mid-August 1992, Talić stated at a meeting attended by several VRS officers that he wanted the paramilitaries to be controlled and subordinated to the VRS, either by integrating them into the army or police, or disbanding them.<sup>14326</sup> When these paramilitaries were finally subordinated, many of them became units of the MUP.<sup>14327</sup>

3843. On 30 July 1992, the HK Command forwarded Mladić's order to all subordinate commands and instructed them to carry out the order by 14 August 1992.<sup>14328</sup> The same day, 1KK Commander Momir Talić issued a similar order to the 1KK Command and set the deadline for disarmament at 15 August 1992.<sup>14329</sup> Commanders of independent battalions, regiments, brigades, and divisions in their zones of responsibility, and the 3844. On 3 August 1992, the MUP Administration for the Police Duties and Affairs of Sarajevo reported to the Minister of the Interior regarding the problem of the presence of paramilitary formations and individuals in certain areas that 'made war as they pleased'. These groups responded to and assisted VRS units and the police, but seemed to have special motives for war and did not operate under VRS command. In some areas, including Ilidža and Pale, they stayed in separate buildings and moved in different areas. They ignored their SJBs or threatened to attack their policemen at checkpoints.<sup>14331</sup>

3845. On 5 August 1992, during a meeting with the Bosnian-Serb Presidency, the Prime minister noted that individual military units located in the territory of Banja Luka that were not under military command, should be placed under the central military command and withdrawn from Banja Luka.<sup>14332</sup> According to an announcement by the Bosnian-Serb Presidency of 6 August 1992, its order for all groups and individuals to be put under a single command of the VRS or the MUP had 'for the most part' been implemented, with the exception of several groups in Podrinje and Ključ.<sup>14333</sup> Further, the MUP had arrested groups and individuals who had taken to looting and arson.<sup>14334</sup> The arrests did not involve 'politically organised units or units with other names that have subordinated themselves to a single command and are bravely fighting for the freedom of their Serbian Bosnia and Herzegovina'.<sup>14335</sup>

3846. According to a 9 August 1992 report from the VRS Main Staff, the objectives of the Serb people in the conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina were considerably hampered by outside forces, including paramilitary groups and criminals.<sup>14336</sup> The people and troops were beginning to express doubt that official institutions and responsible individuals could address the issue.<sup>14337</sup> According to the report, organised measures were required to address this matter, and the military prosecutor and courts, security organs, and the

3847. On 17 August 1992, Mladić instructed the commands of the 1KK, SRK, IBK, and HK to submit reports on the disarmament of paramilitary formations in their zones of responsibility to the VRS Main Staff by 20 August 1992, as they had failed to do so by the deadline of 15 August 1992.<sup>14339</sup> On 18 August 1992, SRK Commander Tomislav Šipčić sent a report to the SRK Command stating that paramilitary formations that were not yet disarmed were causing big problems and that disarming them would not be possible without armed clashes, especially because they were supported and established by organs in the local authorities and police.<sup>14340</sup>

3848. On 16 October 1992, the Minister of Defence of the Bosnian-Serb Republic stated in a letter to the Zvornik Municipality Executive Board that, in a state of war, the VRS could recruit volunteers, even from outside the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>14341</sup> Individual volunteers or volunteer units had the same rights and obligations as members of the VRS.<sup>14342</sup> These obligations included wearing the VRS uniform and insignia, and involvement in the formational and organizational structure of the Army and the commanding units.<sup>14343</sup> Any volunteers who did not accept these conditions were banned from engagement.<sup>14344</sup>

3849. On 1 January 1993, Manojlo Milovanović sent a report to Karadžić, the Prime Minister of the Bosnian-Serb Republic, and the DK stating that in the Zvornik Brigade, an attempt at creating private and party armies, and village ‘vojvodas’ was breaking the unity of the units.<sup>14345</sup> This report also noted that the Command of the DK had written to the municipal assembly, the MUP, and all enterprises in Zvornik, making several requests including to rein in self-proclaimed vojvodas (commanders), and to file

3850. On 19 February 1993, Zdravko Tolimir ordered the departments for Intelligence Affairs of the 1KK and 2KK, the SRK, the IBK, the HK, and the DK to send information on paramilitary units in their area of responsibility to the Administration for Intelligence and Security Affairs before 28 February.<sup>14347</sup> This information was to include the type of units concerned, their composition, available weaponry, tasks, participation in combat operations, and alleged participation in crimes.<sup>14348</sup>

3851. On 5 March 1993, Stanislav Galić instructed the SRK Command to take immediate measures, with a deadline of 20 March 1993, to neutralise the perpetrators of crimes and violent behaviour by members of paramilitary formations and provide legal protection to the people and soldiers.<sup>14349</sup>

3852. In an order of 22 May 1993, Mladić strictly prohibited the organization or activity along 'para-army', 'para-militia', or 'para-political lines', warning that all such groups would be arrested and eliminated, or physically liquidated in case of resistance.<sup>14350</sup>

3854. In an interview with the German news magazine Der Spiegel in 1995, Karadžić distanced himself from the paramilitary formations which were active in Bosnia-Herzegovina, referring to them as extremists and strongly condemning their acts of revenge.<sup>14356</sup> He stated that it was however impossible for him to keep all embittered Serbian 'refugees' under control.<sup>14357</sup>

3855. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that as of July 1992, there were approximately 60 paramilitary groups in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic totalling between four and five thousand men. These groups were known by the VRS leadership as being composed of criminal elements who displayed a hatred of non-Serbs and comprised a 'genocidal element among the Serbian people'. The majority of such groups were reported as being motivated by profiteering and looting, and maintained ties with opposition parties from Serbia. Paramilitary forces were known by the VRS leadership to be an important feature of the war. On 13 June 1992, Karadžić ordered that all self-organized armed groups place themselves under the command of either the VRS or the MUP. On 28 July 1992, Mladić ordered the disarmament of all paramilitary formations, groups, and individuals in the territory of the Bosnian-Serb Republic by 15 August 1992 in order to put all armed formations and individuals under the unified command of the VRS. Despite efforts by the Bosnian-Serb political leadership and the VRS in this respect, some paramilitary formations continued to exist and to operate outside the command of the VRS throughout the conflict. The exact nature of the relationship between these paramilitary formations, on the one hand, and the VRS and the MUP, on the other, differed from formation to formation. Below, the Trial Chamber will review this relationship for the paramilitary formations that it has found committed crimes within the scope of the Indictment, in chapters 4 and 8.

The White Eagles

3856. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.4.7 and 8.5.2 that, on 24 May 1992, a member of a group referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ in Ilidža Municipality displaced a Bosnian-Muslim family by threatening their lives should they refuse to leave the municipality or not take up arms and become loyal to Serb authorities. The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings in chapters 4.12.6 and 8.9.2 that, from March to the end of May 1992, a group referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ in Sanski Most Municipality imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures by erecting and manning checkpoints, restricting the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality.

3857. The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Witness RM-081, a Bosnian Muslim from Rogatica Municipality.<sup>14358</sup> He testified that 300 White Eagles members were stationed in Borike.<sup>14359</sup> Rajko Kušić, commander of the Rogatica Brigade (see chapter 3.1.2), told him that the White Eagles in Borike were essentially under his command.<sup>14360</sup> The paramilitary unit members spoke the Ekavian dialect of the Serbo-Croat language, and worked with regular Serb police and soldiers.<sup>14361</sup>

3858. As set out in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1, 4.6.1 Schedule A.3.3, 4.6.3, 4.6.7, 4.8.7, 4.11.3, 4.13.7, and 4.15.2, the Trial Chamber received further evidence that groups referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ were present in Foča, Ključ, Novi Grad, Rogatica, Sokolac, and Vlasenica Municipalities. The Trial Chamber has not received evidence – such as information pertaining to unit structure, leadership, or membership – that would allow it to determine whether the various groups referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ were one and the same. It is consequently unable to conclude that there was only one group referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina and has reviewed the evidence of the groups referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ as such.

3859. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that a group referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ was present in Ilidža Municipality at least on 24 May 1992 and that a group referred to as ‘the White Eagles’ was present in Sanski Most Municipality at least from March to the end of May 1992. With respect to the White Eagles in Sanski Most Municipality, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.6 that this group operated in cooperation with soldiers of the 6th Krajina Brigade, Serb policemen, local Serbs from Lukavica, Martić’s paramilitary unit, and Šešelj’s paramilitary unit.

The Skorpions

3860. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 7.12 Schedule E.13.1 and 8.3.2 that members of the Skorpions murdered six Muslim men near Trnovo some time between mid-July and mid-August 1995.

3861. The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Witness RM-280, a Serb from Croatia,<sup>14362</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

3862. Witness RM-280 testified that after the JNA took over the Tovarnik area, he heard that a JNA Major called Antonić gave permission to Slobodan Medić, a.k.a. Boca, to establish a unit called the Skorpions to guard the oilfields in Đeletovci.<sup>14363</sup> According to the witness, the Skorpions were first under the command of the JNA, but as of late 1992 or early 1993, the Serbian SDB assumed control over the Skorpions.<sup>14364</sup> Milan Milanović, a.k.a. Mrgud, was the intermediary between Medić and the leadership of the Serbian SDB in Belgrade.<sup>14365</sup> Apart from meetings with Mrgud and Ulemek, Medić bragged about meetings with Arkan, Radovan Stojičić a.k.a. Badža, Franko Simatović, and Jovica Stanišić.<sup>14366</sup> The unit was organized in two companies and six platoons, one reconnaissance platoon, and one working platoon.<sup>14367</sup> They had jeeps, trucks, and a refrigerator truck, with civilian, police, and military licence plates.<sup>14368</sup>

They wore red berets and green camouflage uniforms, as well as a badge with a sword and an inscription below the sword saying ‘Skorpions’.<sup>14369</sup> According to the witness, the sword was the insignia of the Serbian SDB.<sup>14370</sup> Before every operation Mrgud told Medić where he could pick up weapons and the rest of the necessary equipment.<sup>14371</sup> After the Skorpions were disbanded, some members, who were recommended by Medić, received a document stating that they were part of the reserve force of the Special Unit of the Serbian SDB, known as the ‘JSO’.<sup>14372</sup> A former member of the Skorpions showed this document to the witness.<sup>14373</sup> The Trial Chamber has also received official military and police documentation, in which the Skorpions are referred to as a unit of MUP of Serbia.<sup>14374</sup>

3863. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Slobodan Medić, a.k.a. ‘Boca’, established the Skorpions with the permission of JNA Major Antonić. The Skorpions were initially under the command of the JNA, but by late 1992 or early 1993, the Serbian SDB assumed control over the Skorpions. There were approximately 150 members of the Skorpions, including Slobodan Davidović, Aleksander Medić, Branislav Medić, Braco Meleusić, Đuro Meleusić, Milorad Momić, Pero Petrašević, Slobodan Stojković, a.k.a. Bugar, a man called Saša, a.k.a. Vuk, and a man called Šiptar. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 7.12 Schedule E.13.1 that the Skorpions were commanded by Slobodan Medić and that, at the time of the aforementioned murder of six Muslim men, i.e. some time between mid-July and mid-August 1995, the Skorpions worked in coordination with VRS units in an area under the responsibility of the SRK.

The Spare Ribs

archive and library of the Medžlis of the Islamic Community, and Muslim homes, all located in Prijedor Municipality.

3865. The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Draško Vujić, a VRS battalion commander from Prijedor.<sup>14375</sup> He testified that various ‘Serbian’ paramilitary groups roamed around Prijedor Municipality, causing problems for both the Muslim and Serb population.<sup>14376</sup> One example was the Smoked Ribs unit,<sup>14377</sup> which appeared in Vujić’s recruitment zone following combat operations in Prijedor on 30 May 1992.<sup>14378</sup> The group said they came to help but were told by Vujić that their help was not needed, after which they left.<sup>14379</sup> 3866. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Spare Ribs were a Serb paramilitary unit that participated in the 30 May 1992 attack on Prijedor Town and then left the area. With respect to that combat operation, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 4.10.3 that the Spare Ribs operated in cooperation with the 5th Kozarac Brigade, the 43rd Motorised Brigade, some members of the 6th Krajina Brigade, the Prijedor police, and members of Milan Andžić’s paramilitary unit.

Šešelj’s unit

3867. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.6 and 8.9.2 that from March to the end of May 1992, individuals referred to as ‘Šešelj’s Chetniks’ imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures in Sanski Most Municipality by erecting and manning checkpoints, restricting the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality.

3868. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts with regard to the individuals referred to as ‘Šešelj’s Chetniks’.<sup>14380</sup> It further received evidence from Mile Ujić, the President of the Executive Committee of the Rogatica Municipality from 1990 until March 1992 and the Chief and acting Chief of Staff of the 3869. According to a radio interview with Vojislav Šešelj in September 1992, volunteers from Serbia and Montenegro, from the Serbian Radical Party, or from the Serbian Chetnik Movement came to Bosnia-Herzegovina to fight for the liberty of ‘the Serbian people’.<sup>14383</sup> They did not act independently, as the Bosnian-Serb Republic quickly established the VRS and the entire manpower of the Serbian Radical Party was immediately put under its exclusive command.<sup>14384</sup> Šešelj praised the morale of ‘Serbian soldiers’ who were ‘full of élan, full of strength and ready to finish off this battle for Sarajevo’.<sup>14385</sup> In his view, the war helped the Serbs to gain territories and the Muslims would ‘end up with nothing’; no territories should be handed over to them.<sup>14386</sup>

3870. On 13 May 1993, Šešelj commended 16 Serbian ‘Chetnik’ commanders for their participation in the military efforts by granting them the title of Vojvoda.<sup>14387</sup> He commended them for their exceptional courage and skill in areas including Sarajevo, Bijeljina, and Srebrenica.<sup>14388</sup> On 20 March 1994, Šešelj again awarded various members of the Serbian Chetnik Movement the title of ‘Vojvoda’ to reward their services in war operations on battlefields in, inter alia, Sarajevo-IIijaš and Herzegovina between 1991 and 1992.<sup>14389</sup> On 20 April 1994, he deprived four persons of this title for, inter alia, disrespecting the code of the Chetnik Vojvodas, betraying or damaging the reputation of the SRS, the Serbian Chetnik Movement and the Serb people, or for being recruited into the Serb MUP.<sup>14390</sup> On 28 April 1994, Šešelj announced that the Serbian Chetnik Movement would no longer be a special section of the SRS, but that the two would be integrated; all soldiers fighting for the freedom of Serb people were called Serb Chetniks, regardless of their membership in the SRS.<sup>14391</sup> He further emphasised that Chetnik volunteers acted exclusively under the command of the Serb Army, despite the enemy's attempts to 'abuse the formal organisation of the Serbian Chetnik Movement' as proof of paramilitary organisations being active in the Serb states.<sup>14392</sup>

3871. According to a MUP Trebinje CSB report on the activities of paramilitary formations on the territory of the SAO Herzegovina dated 30 July 1992, the group referred to as 'šešeljevci' (Šešelj's men) and other self-proclaimed groups under different names complicated the security situation significantly.<sup>14393</sup> According to the report, these groups did not belong to any regular unit of the VRS and undertook their actions arbitrarily and on their own initiative out of the zone of war operations.<sup>14394</sup> An attempt of a group of about 20 members of 'šešeljevci' to be integrated into the activities of the police station in Berkovići and to operate the police station under their command was foiled in consultation with the responsible VRS command.<sup>14395</sup> Mile Ujić testified that since 22 May 1992, the Rogatica Brigade received orders from the SRK command who, at the end of 1992, also commanded the brigade's activities.<sup>14396</sup> According to him, the brigade also incorporated Serb volunteers such as Arkan's, Jović's, and Šešelj's men.<sup>14397</sup>

3872. With regard to Vojislav Šešelj's radio interview of September 1992, in evidence as exhibit P4013, in which he claimed that all volunteers of the SRS and the Serbian Chetnik Movement who came to Bosnia-Herzegovina were put under the exclusive command of the VRS, the Trial Chamber notes that given the nature of the evidence, and the absence of an opportunity to cross-examine the witness about its veracity in court, it is unable to establish whether the assertions therein are based on opinions from facts. Moreover, it notes that the claims of subordination are general and not linked to any specific persons, places or dates. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber finds that, in the absence of further corroboration, it cannot rely solely on exhibit P4013 to establish that all volunteer units from Serbia and Montenegro who came to Bosnia-Herzegovina were put under the exclusive command of the VRS. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber will not rely on P4013 in this respect.

3873. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that a paramilitary unit referred to as 'Šešelj's men' was present in Sanski Most Municipality from at least March to the end of May 1992 and in Kotor Varoš Municipality in July and August 1992. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.6 that, in connection with erecting and manning checkpoints in and around the town of Sanski Most and around non-Serb villages from March to end of May 1992, this unit worked in cooperation with soldiers of the 6th Krajina Brigade, Serb policemen, local Serbs from Lukavica, Martić's paramilitary unit, and the White Eagles.

Savić's unit, a.k.a. 'Mauzer's men', a.k.a. the Panthers

3874. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.2.4 and 8.9.2 that from 1992 onwards, Mauzer's men (a group headed by Ljubiša Savić, a.k.a. Mauzer) aided Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS in plundering property and valuables from Bosnian Muslims before they were forced out of Bijeljina Municipality. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.2.7 that in the summer of 1992, Mauzer's men aided Đurković in forcibly transferring many Muslims from Bijeljina Municipality.

3875. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts with regard to Savić's unit.<sup>14398</sup> It further received evidence from Witness RM-513, a Bosnian Serb from Bijeljina;<sup>14399</sup> Dragomir Andan, a Bosnian Serb who served as a MUP senior inspector in Bijeljina, Zvornik and Brčko from 1 June 1992 and then as an intelligence officer in the VRS Main Staff from September 1992,<sup>14400</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

3876. In 1992, Ljubiša (Mauzer) Savić was a leading SDS figure in Bijeljina and commander of the Serb (National) Guard paramilitary unit.<sup>14401</sup> On 15 June 1992, Mauzer stated that the presidency of SAO Semberija-Majevica had decided to replace Muslims in managerial positions in Bijeljina, and should ‘the genocide against the Serbian people’ in Bosnia-Herzegovina continue, all Muslims would be fired from their jobs and expelled from the territory.<sup>14402</sup> Mauzer also stated that the 2,500 Muslims aged between 18 and 35 who had fled Bijeljina in the aftermath of the Serb take-over would lose their jobs, and their apartments would be seized and sealed, and he advised them not to return.<sup>14403</sup>

3877. In a 31 May 1992 meeting of the Bosnian-Serb leadership attended by Mladić, Karadžić reported that, in the absence of functioning authorities in many of the municipalities, there were thieves, warlords, and ‘various military’.<sup>14404</sup> In particular, he noted that ‘Mauzer (in Bijeljina) has grown arrogant and he cannot work in the way that he wants’.<sup>14405</sup> In an 11 June 1992 meeting attended by Mladić, Colonel Zarić discussed Ljubiša Savić, a.k.a Mauzer, a ‘self-proclaimed major’ who ‘got some of Arkan’s decorations or others’ and who controlled over half of the municipal presidency in Bijeljina and had been chosen by the municipality to act as its ‘security organ’.<sup>14406</sup> He noted that Savić had surrounded himself with 100 criminals who were ‘carrying out searches’, and he described Predrag Ješarić as the ‘brain behind the whole team’.<sup>14407</sup> He further noted that Mauzer’s unit was in the barracks in Bijeljina and that Mauzer ‘made Denčić appoint him to the duty of commander for counter-intelligence affairs’ (see the Trial Chamber’s findings on Nikola Denčić’s role as IBK commander in chapter 3.1.2).<sup>14408</sup>

front and detaining Muslims in a cooling plant that the paramilitaries used as a warehouse.<sup>14410</sup> After the second arrest, the Panthers surrounded the police station with weapons and demanded that the witness and his colleague Davidović be removed from their posts in the security services of Bijeljina.<sup>14411</sup> Mauzer was released and was never tried, but the witness sent a criminal report to the prosecutor.<sup>14412</sup> The stolen property recovered from the cooling plant was handed over to the military police.<sup>14413</sup> Towards the end of 1992, 'perhaps' in September or October, Mauzer's unit was subordinated to the IBK and from then onwards, the VRS had control over him.<sup>14414</sup> It was one of the better organised and better equipped units in the VRS and there was no record of them participating in any crime when engaged as a VRS unit.<sup>14415</sup>

3879. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Ljubiša Savić, a.k.a. Mauzer, was a leading SDS figure in Bijeljina Municipality who in 1992 commanded a paramilitary unit known as the Panthers. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 3.1.2 that on 3 June 1992, Mauzer's unit joined the IBK and was put under the unified command of the VRS. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapter 4.2.4 and 4.2.7 that, in connection with plunder in Bijeljina Municipality from 1992 onwards and in connection with forcible transfer in Bijeljina Municipality in the summer of 1992, Mauzer's unit worked in cooperation with Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS.

Praštaló's unit

The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings in chapters 4.12.1 Schedules A.7.2 and A.7.4 and 8.3.2 that on 31 May 1992, soldiers of the VRS's 6th Krajina Brigade or a paramilitary formation, all under the command of Colonel Basara, commander of the VRS's 6th Krajina Brigade, murdered around 31 people in Jelečevići, a Bosnian-Muslim hamlet in the area of Hrustovo. Further, on 1 August 1992, a group of approximately 200 Serb soldiers led by Praštalo murdered 14 Bosnian-Muslim men in Budim, Sanski Most Municipality.

3881. The Trial Chamber received evidence with regard to Praštalo's unit from Witness RM-015, a Bosnian Serb from Sanski Most,<sup>14416</sup> who testified that on 27 May 1992, Praštalo's paramilitary unit attacked Kljevci in cooperation with battalions of the 6th Krajina Brigade, and that in May or early June 1992, Colonel Aničić ordered Praštalo to ambush and kill Muslim resistance fighters travelling on buses.<sup>14417</sup>

3882. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Mićo 'Kudra' Praštalo headed a paramilitary unit of at least 200 Serb soldiers from Lušci Palanka in Sanski Most Municipality. This unit was present in Sanski Most Municipality at least from late May to early August 1992, and its members wore olive-coloured uniforms with a red stripe pinned to their epaulettes. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.1 Schedule A.7.2 that on 31 May 1992, this unit was under the command of Colonel Basara of the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade. It further recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.3 that, with respect to the 27 May 1992 attack on Kljevci, this unit operated in cooperation with battalions of the 6th Krajina Brigade.

Martić's unit

3883. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.6 and 8.9.2 that, from March to the end of May 1992, a group referred to as 'Martić's men' in Sanski Most Municipality imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures by erecting and manning checkpoints, restricting the movement of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality.

3884. The Trial Chamber received evidence with regard to Martić's unit from Mevludin Sejmenović, the Vice President of the SDA in Prijedor from 1990 to 1992,<sup>14418</sup> who testified that individuals wearing 'Martić's militia' uniforms were among those who took men and boys to Trnopolje camp after the shelling of the village.<sup>14419</sup>

<sup>14419</sup> The relevant evidence of Sejmenović is reviewed in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.4.

3885. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that a paramilitary unit referred to as ‘Martić’s men’ was present in Prijedor Municipality and participated in the capture and transport of men and boys to Trnopolje camp following the shelling of Trnopolje Village. It was also present in Sanski Most Municipality at least from March to the end of May 1992. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.6 that, with respect to the erection and manning of checkpoints in and around the town of Sanski Most during this time, Martić’s men operated in cooperation with soldiers of the 6th Krajina Brigade, Serb policemen, local Serbs from Lukavica, the White Eagles, and ‘Šešelj’s Chetniks’.

Kunarac’s unit

3886. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.4 and 8.9.2 that in July and August 1992, Dragoljub Kunarac, a.k.a. Žaga, and Montenegrin soldiers under his command raped Bosnian-Muslim women and girls detained at Partizan Hall. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.5.4 and 8.9.2 that in July or August 1992, Kunarac’s men plundered valuables from Bosnian-Muslim detainees at the Kalinovik elementary school.

3887. The Trial Chamber received evidence relating to Kunarac’s unit from Božidar Krnojelac, a Serb member of the ‘village guards’ in Foča who was present at the KP Dom facility daily from mid-April to mid-May 1992;<sup>14420</sup> Veselinko Simović, a marksman in the 5th Battalion from 15 April 1992 and later a member of the Dragan Nikolić Intervention Unit, both TO formations in Foča which later became part of the VRS;<sup>14421</sup> Witness RM-070, a Muslim woman from Foča municipality;<sup>14422</sup> Witness RM-048, a Bosnian Muslim from Bosnia-Herzegovina;<sup>14423</sup> Zoran Nikolić, a Serb from Foča;<sup>14424</sup> and Witness RM-032, a Bosnian-Muslim woman,<sup>14425</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

3888. Božidar Krnojelac testified that until 22 June 1992 neither the VRS nor any battalions were in Foča Municipality.<sup>14426</sup> ‘Serbian forces’ units including the ones in which the witness was engaged, i.e. Vujičić’s unit and Nikolić’s detachment, acted independently and without a single command.<sup>14427</sup> Several groups of self-proclaimed intervention platoons under the command of Žaga, Gojko, Pero, and Ćosa as well as of the police, existed independently of the VRS in Foča town.<sup>14428</sup> Only after 22 June 1992, a brigade and tactical group was formed and effectively assumed operational control over Foča.<sup>14429</sup> On 7 July 1992, Colonel Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group, ordered the ‘Independent Zaga Detachment’ to take part in ‘cleansing or mopping-up’ areas in connection with the VRS 5th Battalion’s attack on Goražde.<sup>14430</sup>

3889. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Dragoljub Kunarac, a.k.a. Žaga, headed a paramilitary unit of Montenegrin soldiers, some of whom wore camouflage uniforms with an insignia of an eagle and the letter ‘S’. This unit was present in Kalinovik Municipality in July or August 1992. This was a paramilitary unit that was incorporated into the VRS by at least July 1992. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in 3.1.2 that the Independent ‘Žaga’ Detachment commanded by Dragomir or ‘Dragoljub’ Kunarac was subordinated to Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group. The Trial Chamber further recalls its findings in chapters 4.3.2 Schedules C.6.2 and C.6.4 and 4.3.3 that Kunarac’s unit was present in Foča Municipality in July and August 1992 and that, with respect to the ill-treatment of detainees at Partizan Hall at that time, this unit operated in cooperation with Dragan Gagović, a.k.a. ‘Gaga’, the head of Foča police, and Janko Janjić, a.k.a. ‘Tuta’. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding in chapter 4.5.4 that, with respect to the plundering the property of detainees at Kalinovik elementary school in July or August 1992, this unit operated in cooperation with Ćosa’s unit and Pero Elez’s unit.

3890. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.5.1 Schedule B.7.1, 8.3.2 and 8.9.2 that on 5 August 1992, Serb soldiers commanded by Pero Elez murdered 23 Bosnian-Muslim detainees taken from the ammunition warehouse in Jalašačko Polje in Kalinovik Municipality. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.5.4 and 8.9.2 that in July or August 1992, Elez's men plundered valuables from Bosnian-Muslim detainees at the Kalinovik elementary school. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.2 and 8.9.2 that from early August 1992, Radovan Stanković, who was affiliated with Elez, unlawfully detained several groups of Bosnian-Muslim women and girls in 'Karaman's house' in Foča Municipality, and that Elez and his men raped those women and girls there. Lastly, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.3.1 Schedule AB.5.1, 8.3.2 and 8.9.2 that in the second half of 1992, Elez and Predrag Trivun, a.k.a. Pedolino or Pedo, murdered some of the hundreds of predominantly Bosnian-Muslim detainees who were killed at KP Dom Foča.

3891. 3892. According to 'VINS' newspaper, a publication of the VRS Srbinje Garrison Command, 'Serbian' soldiers took over all the institutions in Bistrica on 6 April 1992 in a well-organised and professionally conducted operation. After the take-over, Pero Elez, and a group of fellow Serb co-fighters, referred to as 'the Serbian volunteer guard' were joined by many 'Serbian' men and they became the 7th Battalion. He was unanimously chosen as commander of the Battalion by the 'Serbian people's army', and they were to 'win glory for the Serbian Army in the whole area'.<sup>14441</sup> Elez and Dragan Nikolić, amongst other soldiers, fought in the battle for Foča against 'a much stronger enemy', and ultimately 'liberated Foča'.<sup>14442</sup> According to the article, after Foča was 'liberated', Muslims in Kratine, Kozja Luka, and Poljice burned 'Serbian' houses and killed 'Serbian' children.<sup>14443</sup> Following this, the 7th Battalion set out with the goal of liberating the area around Miljevina and Foča.<sup>14444</sup>

Ćosa, was subordinated to Marko Kovač, Commander of the Foča Tactical Group. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that this unit was incorporated into the VRS by at least July 1992. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding in chapter 3.1.2 that Brane Ćosović headed other sub-units, including a unit led by Janko Janjić a.k.a. Tuta. The Trial Chamber finds that Ćosa’s men were present in Kalinovik Municipality in July or August 1992. Units commanded by Basara 3898. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.3 and 8.9.2 that, with regard to the destruction of houses and four Muslim sacred sites in the Muslim villages of Hrustovo and Vrhpolje at the end of May 1992, paramilitary units subordinated to Colonel Branko Basara, commander of the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, operated in cooperation with the 6th Krajina Brigade and the SOS in Sanski Most Municipality. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.1 Schedule A.7.2, 8.3.2, and 8.9.2 that, on 31 May 1992, forces under the command of Basara – either paramilitary formations or the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade – murdered approximately 31 Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most Municipality.

3899. The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Witness RM-015, a Bosnian Serb from Sanski Most.<sup>14456</sup> He testified that on 1 June 1992, Colonel Basara issued an order prohibiting ‘[a]ll self-declared soldiers from other units or irregular formations’ from entering combat operation zones ‘because in most cases they enter ... to commit genocide and loot property’ and establishing a military court ‘to sentence war criminals and war profiteers from our own brigade’.<sup>14457</sup> Given the timing of this order, Witness RM-015 saw it as a response to killings in Hrustovo and Vrhpolje, and believed that the 3900. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that paramilitary units in Sanski Most Municipality were subordinated to the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade, at least in late May 1992. This included paramilitary units located in Lušci Palanka, Dabar, Klejevci, Tomina, Kozica, Podlug, and Tramošinja. These units participated in the 30 and 31 May 1992 attacks on Hrustovo and Vrhpolje villages.

3903. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.3 and 8.9.2 that members of the SOS (i) at the end of May 1992, destroyed houses and four Muslim sacred sites in the Muslim villages of Vrhpolje and Hrustovo, (ii) destroyed one Muslim sacred site in the Muslim neighbourhood of Mahala, in cooperation with the TO, and (iii) destroyed three Muslim sacred sites and one Muslim cultural monument in the Muslim villages of Lukavice, Okreč, and Čirkići. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.3 and 8.9.2 that members of the SOS destroyed properties and businesses owned by non-Serbs, including Bosnian Muslims, in Sanski Most Town from the spring of 1992 until late May 1992. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.4 and 8.9.2 that in May and June 1992, the Sanski Most SOS plundered property belonging to the Bosnian-Muslim inhabitants of the Mahala neighbourhood.

3906. Witness RM-015 testified that the weapons storage department at the Sanski Most TO was also the logistics base of the SOS, which was formed at the end of 1991. The weapons storage department issued some materials to the SOS, such as blankets, rations, and military support equipment, but not weapons, and SOS members were sent to Dabarska Pećina and Kruhari for training by local Serb military instructors. The uniforms issued to the SOS were camouflage unlike the JNA camouflage uniforms, and SOS members wore different headpieces such as red berets, fur hats, and black bandanas. Some wore the Kokarda insignia and others wore the tri-colour star.<sup>14480</sup> According to the witness, the SOS was a group of undisciplined criminals whose objective was to commit robbery, and the only authority they respected was that of their commander, Duško Šaović, a.k.a. Njunja.<sup>14481</sup> Šaović's deputy was Duško Mudrinić, a.k.a. Mirko Delić threw a small explosive into the premises of Serb Dragan Lazić's business for this purpose.<sup>14487</sup> In approximately October 1992, Šaović reported to Vlado Vrkeš that he had done as ordered in Jajce and that Jajce had fallen.<sup>14488</sup> This convinced Witness RM-015 that the SOS was directly under the ultimate authority of the SDS.<sup>14489</sup>

3909. Branko Davidović testified that the SDS set up the SOS, a paramilitary unit, within the TO.<sup>14495</sup> The witness believed that the SOS unit was part of the Sanski Most TO, of which Colonel Aničić was the commander.<sup>14496</sup> Aničić received orders from the Sanski Most Crisis Staff.<sup>14497</sup> There were no paramilitary formations in the 6th Krajina Brigade and paramilitary formations were not close to the brigade's command.<sup>14498</sup> The 6th Krajina Brigade and the SOS functioned independently of each other and had their own chain of command and subordination rules.<sup>14499</sup> When the SOS was disbanded in 1992, part of its personnel became members of the 6th Krajina Brigade.<sup>14500</sup> Radoslav

On 30 May 1992, the Sanski Most SOS issued a proclamation to the attention of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, stating all of their actions had been undertaken to protect citizens and in agreement with ‘the legal authorities’, ‘the official bodies’, and the 6th Krajina Brigade Command.<sup>14502</sup> They stated that, due to hostile propaganda regarding the behaviour of the Sanski Most SOS that had been spread by ‘individual members of the present official authorities’, the Sanski Most SOS would leave Sanski Most and continue their fight for ‘the Serbian cause’ elsewhere.<sup>14503</sup>

SOS in Banja Luka

3912. The SOS paramilitary group under Nenad Stevandić, a member of the ARK Crisis Staff, was operative in Banja Luka in spring and summer 1992. It included convicted criminals and had links to SJB and CSB officials. Members of the SOS even acted as escorts for SDS leaders such as Radoslav Brđanin.<sup>14508</sup> Witness RM-802 testified that Nenad Stevandić was in charge of the Sokol Society in Banja Luka, which formed armed paramilitary formations, and he was politically connected to the highest levels of the SDS including Karadžić and Brđanin.<sup>14509</sup> The SOS was part of the SDS ‘Party Army’.<sup>14510</sup> According to a 28 July 1992 report from Tolimir to be distributed to

Karadžić, Mladić, Đeric, and the VRS Corps Commands' Departments of Intelligence and Security Affairs, the SOS from Banja Luka consisted of many infamous Banja Luka criminals, whilst the Banja Luka CSB exerted considerable influence over the group.<sup>14511</sup> Part of the SOS formations joined the Banja Luka CSB special police detachment, but they were not really under the control of the detachment's command or the CSB.<sup>14512</sup>

The Trial Chamber's findings on the SOS

3913. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the SOS was a paramilitary unit established in late 1991. The SOS included local SDS members, some of whom had deserted from the 6th Krajina Brigade and some of whom were convicted criminals. They were heavily armed with automatic weapons and wore camouflage uniforms distinct from JNA uniforms. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 4.12.3 that the SOS in Sanski Most Municipality was led by Dušan Saović, a.k.a. Njunja. The SOS in Banja Luka was led by Nenad Stevandić, a member of the ARK Crisis Staff. Saović's deputy was Duško Mudrinić, a.k.a. Medeni, and Daniluško Kajtez was also a leader.<sup>14513</sup>

3914. The SOS arrived in Sanski Most Municipality by early 1992 and was present there at least between April and September 1992. The SOS was supported by the SDS, had links to SDS leaders and to SJB and CSB officials, received material support from the Sanski Most TO and the Crisis Staff, and implemented instructions from the SDS and the Crisis Staff. The SOS was present in Banja Luka Municipality by 29 February 1992 and was operational in the municipality through the summer of 1992. As late as July 1992, the Banja Luka CSB exerted considerable influence over the SOS, and SOS units joined the Banja Luka CSB special police detachment. In mid-May 1992, the SOS was placed under the command of the 6th Krajina Brigade as a sabotage or intervention platoon, but SOS members did not always accept the command of the brigade. The SOS had severed ties with the brigade by approximately June 1992.

3915. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapters 4.12.3 and 4.12.6 that in Sanski Most Municipality from the spring of 1992 until June 1992, the SOS operated in cooperation with the 6th Krajina Brigade, paramilitary units subordinated to Branko Basara, the TO, and the local police; and that they were politically connected to Karadžić and Brđanin.

3916. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.3.3, 4.3.7, 4.10.3, 4.11.2 Schedule C.16.1, 4.13.7, 7.12 Schedule E.15.1, 8.3.2, and 8.9.2 that unnamed paramilitary units perpetrated crimes covered by the Indictment. In the absence of any specificity as to the identity of these paramilitary units, the Trial Chamber will not further consider these incidents insofar as the unnamed paramilitary units are concerned.

3918. The Defence argued that crisis staffs responded to local events and local interests; they were not coordinated in accordance with any common plan.<sup>14515</sup> Crisis staffs had ‘a tremendous amount of autonomy’, were governed by local personalities with local influence, and pursued their own agenda in defiance of state-level authorities.<sup>14516</sup> As for any relationship between the crisis staffs and the VRS, the Defence submitted that the crisis staffs’ formal chain of command was separate to the

<sup>14513</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that it found Kajtez to have perpetrated killings in Sanski Most Municipality on 2 November 1995 (see chapter 4.12.1 Schedule A.7.5). The Trial Chamber found that, at the time, Kajtez was a soldier in the VRS 6th Krajina Brigade.

<sup>14514</sup> Indictment, paras 8, 11. According to the Indictment, some or all of these individuals were, alternatively, not members of the JCE but were used by members of the JCE to carry out crimes committed in furtherance of its objective. See Indictment, para. 11.

VRS chain of command and the crisis staffs only commanded the TO.<sup>14517</sup> VRS personnel were not members of any crisis staff and were not involved in any crisis staff decision-making.<sup>14518</sup> The presence of any VRS personnel at crisis staff meetings was limited to matters such as updates on the combat situation and the provision of supplies to the VRS.<sup>14519</sup> Finally, the Defence pointed to fundamental disagreements between the VRS and the crisis staffs, including criticism from the VRS on the way in which municipal leaders struggled for power over military matters and tolerated inter-ethnic crimes.<sup>14520</sup>

3919. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts in relation to the alleged involvement of the regional and municipal leadership in the alleged overarching JCE.<sup>14521</sup> It also received documentary evidence, and finds that this evidence is consistent with the Adjudicated Facts.<sup>14522</sup> The Trial Chamber further received evidence from Dorothea Hanson, a research officer for the Prosecution Leadership Research Team;<sup>14523</sup> Nikola Erceg, President of the ARK Executive Committee as of March 1992, a member of the ARK Crisis Staff as of May 1992, and a member of the Banja Luka War Presidency as of July 1995;<sup>14524</sup> Predrag Radić, President of the Banja Luka Municipal Assembly as of January 1991, a member of the SDS Main Board as of July 1991, a member of the ARK Crisis Staff as of 1992, and a member of the Banja Luka Crisis Staff;<sup>14525</sup> Milorad Sokolović, President of the Rogatica Crisis Staff from April 1992 until 25 June 1992 and President of the Executive Board of the Rogatica Municipality from May 1992 until October 1993;<sup>14526</sup> Sveto Veselinović, member of the SDS and the Rogatica Crisis Staff;<sup>14527</sup> Milan Tupajić, 3920. This evidence is in addition to the evidence reviewed, and the subsequent findings made, in chapters 2.2.1 and 2.2.2 on the establishment and structure of regional and municipal crisis staffs, war presidencies, and war commissions. It is also in addition to the evidence on crimes committed in the Municipalities, reviewed in chapter 4.

The role of the VRS personnel on crisis staffs

3921. The Trial Chamber will now focus on the alleged membership of VRS personnel in regional and municipal crisis staffs, war presidencies, and war commissions. Most of the evidence received by the Trial Chamber concerned the ARK Crisis Staff and municipal political structures in Sanski Most Municipality.

3922. Rade Javorić testified that he was not a member of the crisis staff, nor was anybody from the military.<sup>14548</sup> Witness GRM-014 testified that by 21 May 1992, VRS officer Colonel Milenko Milojević was attending Ključ Crisis Staff meetings, but did not vote and was not one of its members.<sup>14549</sup> Vladimir Radojčić testified that at one point he was a member of the Ilidža War Presidency so that he could provide information about the army's logistical needs.<sup>14550</sup> Milorad Sokolović testified that the role of the Rogatica Crisis Staff was to prevent conflict, supply the army, provide necessities for refugees and displaced people, and establish authority.<sup>14551</sup> It did not deal with, and was not informed of, operational military and police tasks.<sup>14552</sup>

3923. Nikola Erceg testified that the ARK Crisis Staff's expanded meetings were attended by ARK Crisis Staff members, members of municipal crisis staffs, and representatives of municipal departments, such as health care or education, and that at times there would be 40-50 people present.<sup>14553</sup>

3924. Adjudicated Facts numbers 419 and 420, which formed the basis of the Trial Chamber's findings on the non-VRS members of the ARK Crisis Staff, were also discussed in chapter 2.2.1. However, among the core members of the ARK Crisis Staff, such as the Head of the Banja Luka CSB Stojan Župljanin, Nenad Stevandić, who was the head of the SOS, and Slobodan Dubočanin, who was connected with the SOS and the Special Intervention Squad, there were VRS members: the Commander of the First Krajina Corps of the VRS General Momir Talić and VRS Air Force officer Major Zoran Jokić.<sup>14554</sup>

3926. With regard to Sanski Most Municipality specifically, Witness RM-016 testified that the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, later renamed the war presidency, was the highest authority in the municipality in 1992 and had absolute powers.<sup>14556</sup> The crisis staff was composed of Neđeljko Rašula, president of the crisis staff, Vlado Vrkeš, president of the SDS, Mirko Vručinić, chief of police, Colonel Aničić, liaison between the military and civilian authorities in Sanski Most, and Branko Basara, Commander of the 6th Krajina Brigade.<sup>14557</sup> Ahmet Zulić stated that the members of the Sanski Most War Presidency were Rašula, Milorad Krunić, a local police commander, or his brother Milan Krunić, a.k.a. Buco, and Boro Tadić. Boro Tadić was in charge of the SOS within the Sanski

Most War Presidency.<sup>14558</sup> Mirzet Karabeg stated that the Sanski Most Crisis Staff was composed of Branko Basara; SDS representatives; the Serb chief of police, Drago Majkić; and the commanders of the TO.<sup>14559</sup> Adil Draganović stated that a Serb Crisis Staff, presided over by Neđeljko Rašula, was set up on 14 April 1992.<sup>14560</sup> On 16 April 1992, the Serb Assembly of Sanski Most adopted its statute and appointed Milan Ivanić as acting Chief of the SJB and Neđeljko Aničić as acting commander of the Serb TO.<sup>14561</sup>

3927. Karabeg stated that in March 1992, Basara, Commander of the 6th Krajina Brigade, began attending Municipal Assembly meetings and explaining that his role, as a military representative, was to protect non-Serbs from what he called the 'extremist wing of the SDS', meaning Vrkeš, Rašula, and Savanović.<sup>14562</sup> On or around 20 April 1992, the witness was given a message from Rašula that 'the doors of the Municipal Building would remain closed' to him. Following this, Mladen Lukić was appointed President of the Executive Board of 'Serbian Sanski Most', taking over the position from the witness. Neđeljko Aničić, a Serb, took over the position as head of the TO from Nijaz Hadžić, a Muslim, and Mirko Vručinić became the Chief of the Police. After April 1992, Basara called a series of meetings in surrounding villages and the town and presented himself as a neutral peacemaker who wanted to deal with the SDS and the SOS extremists.<sup>14563</sup>

3928. According to the conclusions of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff on 30 May 1992, on 30 May 1992, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff consisted of, inter alios, Branko Basara, 6th Krajina Brigade Commander, Mirko Vručinić, SJB Chief, and Neđo Aničić, TO Commander.<sup>14564</sup>

3929. On 18 June 1992, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff adopted conclusions that set out that the seven permanent members of the Crisis Staff were Mladen Lukić, Neđeljko Rašula, Vlado Vrkeš, Mirko Vručinić, Neđo Aničić, Boro Savanović, and Branko

Basara. Five persons were appointed as commissioners: Nenad Davidović as Commissioner for Health and Chief of the 6th Krajina Brigade Medical Corps; Nemanja Tripković as Commissioner for Primary and Secondary Education; Vinko Nikolić as Commissioner for Transport; Milenko Stojinović as Commissioner for Civilian Protection Affairs; and Boro Tadić as Commissioner for National Defence.<sup>14565</sup>

3930. Branko Basara testified that he attended certain meetings of the Crisis Staff and tried to influence the decision making process, but he was not a member of this body and did not take part in the actual decision-making.<sup>14566</sup>

3931. Branko Davidović testified that officers of the 6th Krajina Brigade, including the witness, were army representatives who sometimes attended Sanski Most Crisis Staff meetings. They did not have the right to vote, did not participate in the decision-making process, and were not members of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff.<sup>14567</sup> According to the witness, brigade commander Basara attended some meetings even though he was not a member of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff or an SDS member.<sup>14568</sup>

The relationship between the regional and municipal leadership and military and police structures

3932. The Trial Chamber received the following evidence on the nature of the alleged relationship between the regional and municipal leadership and military structures. Dorothea Hanson testified that the coordination and cooperation between the crisis staffs and the VRS differed from municipality to municipality.<sup>14569</sup> While some municipalities did not in any way limit the military authority of crisis staffs, others explicitly distanced themselves from any direct military command.<sup>14570</sup> For example, on 26 June 1992, the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff publicized that while it required the police and the army to secure safe conditions in the municipality, it did not have the right to interfere in their professional work, nor did it wish to do so.<sup>14571</sup> Some crisis staffs interpreted the government and party instructions in a manner that gave them command authority, set tasks for the military, issued orders, and claimed authority over military units in their municipality.<sup>14572</sup> In some cases, crisis staff leaders styled themselves commanders and took control over local forces to the point of assuming direct command of local units.<sup>14573</sup> Despite local differences, the cooperation and coordination offered by the crisis staffs were essential to the VRS and its operations; they provided the recruits, supplies, material, and moral support without which the military units could not have operated.<sup>14574</sup>

3933. On 26 April 1992, Branko Đerić, head of the Bosnian-Serb Government, issued instructions for the work of the crisis staffs.<sup>14575</sup> One of the instructions was that the crisis staffs shall consist of members, each of whom has an individual responsibility. These members included the commander of the TO, chief of the MUP, as well as members responsible for war crimes and damage. The instructions further stipulated that command of the TO and police forces were exclusively within the competence of professional personnel and any interference should be prevented.<sup>14576</sup>

3934. In the introduction to an order issued by Mladić on 4 June 1992, Mladić stated that local leadership loved power and self-advertisement, which resulted in casualties, massacres, and looting that seriously damaged the struggle.<sup>14577</sup> On 9 June 1992, General Talić informed the VRS Main Staff that the unwillingness of authorities in Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Ključ to deal with the refugee problem, the slow process of disarmament, and economic inertia unfavourably affected the morale of the First Krajina Corps.<sup>14578</sup>

3935. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Hanson on the dissolution of the crisis staffs in July 1992. She testified that by July 1992, the VRS structures were sufficiently robust that the Minister of Defence also called for the abolition of the crisis staffs; noting that there was no legal basis for their creation and that the lack of regulation of the relationship with the military hindered military operations.<sup>14579</sup> Miloš Šolaja provided similar evidence, reviewed in chapter 3.1.1. In a research article on the abolition of the crisis staff on 7 July 1992, he outlined that the jurisdiction of the crisis staffs and military organs were not always clearly delineated, so minor misunderstandings occurred.<sup>14580</sup>

3936. According to a report to the 1KK Command, on 3 February 1993, problems caused by insufficient coordination and cooperation between the authorities and the army command on the one hand, and the military police and the civilian police on the other hand, were identified.<sup>14581</sup>

3937. The Trial Chamber also received evidence about the situation in specific municipalities.

3938. Milan Tupajić stated that in execution of a Sokolac Crisis Staff order dated 21 April 1992, the Municipal Secretariat for National Defence of Sokolac Municipality took legal measures against Serbs who did not respond to the call for mobilization, such as filing reports and having the military police bring people in.<sup>14582</sup>

3939. On 29 April 1992, the Trnovo SDS Crisis Staff Municipal Committee held a meeting, at which Radivoje Drašković, Danilo Golijanin, Gliša Simanić, Rade Ivanović, Nedo Vlaški, Anđelko Milić, Savo Vlačić, Dragan Klepić, and Radmilo Golijanin were present.<sup>14583</sup> Radivoje Drašković stated that they agreed with the JNA representatives, who were to get involved in the ‘cleaning up’ of the municipality, and that they had to make the ground ready for APCs and tanks, as the APCs and tanks were good for ‘psychological effect’. He also stated that they had to work on psychological and propaganda activities.<sup>14584</sup>

3940. Mevludin Sejmenović testified that when the VRS was created, the relationship between the Prijedor Crisis Staff and the military became more direct than it had been under the JNA. The Prijedor Crisis Staff could decide to militarily intervene in a particular village, as it did in Hambarine.<sup>14585</sup>

3941. On 8 May 1992, General Talić informed the President of the ARK Assembly that he was dissatisfied with the cooperation provided by the municipal organs in Ključ Municipality to the JNA units in the area. He was concerned about extremism in the municipality, such as self-proclaimed 'Vojvodas' and 'Chetnik' units, the killing of two Muslims for unknown reasons, and attempts by the President of the Ključ Municipal Assembly to exercise command over the JNA units in the area.<sup>14586</sup>

3942. According to the minutes of the Ključ Crisis Staff meeting on 16 June 1992, following the conclusions of the ARK Crisis Staff, the Ključ Crisis Staff would remain the highest authority and it would cooperate fully with the military command and the Ključ SJB.<sup>14587</sup>

3943. On 11 May 1992, the SDS Vogošća Crisis Staff, following the announcement on the mobilization of the Serb TO Vogošća, requested all conscripts from the territory of Vogošća aged 16 to 60 to report immediately to the TO Command for mobilization and deployment.<sup>14588</sup>

3944. Nenad Davidović testified that Neđeljko Rašula commanded the SOS and TO units as well as the police.<sup>14589</sup> The Sanki Most Crisis Staff was superior to the TO and its units.<sup>14590</sup> According to minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Municipal Assembly dated 27 July 1992, Vlado Vrkeš advised that the 'soldiers' and the people of Sanski Most Municipality 'required' the crisis staff to make Sanski Most a Serb town.<sup>14591</sup>

3945. The Trial Chamber received evidence from Branko Davidović, reviewed in chapter 3.1.2, that the brigade command was under the sole and exclusive command of the corps commander from Banja Luka.<sup>14592</sup> According to the witness, there were attempts by SDS leaders to exert influence over the military but that never materialised and the Sanski Most Crisis Staff could not issue orders to an officer belonging to the First Krajina Corps.<sup>14593</sup>

3946. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence of Basara, reviewed in chapter 9.2.7, on the limited involvement of the 6th Krajina Brigade with the municipal authorities and attempts by the municipal authorities to interfere in the work of the brigade.

3947. According to a report from the 2nd Military District Reserve Command on 6 April 1992, the unit had maintained ‘constant contact and coordination of operations’ with the Pale Crisis Staff.<sup>14594</sup> According to a letter from the Executive Committee of the Rogatica Municipality dated 30 November 1992, the First Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade was invited to discuss with the civilian authorities any existing problems concerning, among others, mobilization and the provision of supplies to the army by these authorities.<sup>14595</sup> However, according to Milorad Sokolović the Executive Committee never received any professional assignments from the MUP or the military, except in terms of requests for logistical support.<sup>14596</sup>

3948. Witness RM-513 testified that when the Bijeljina Crisis Staff evolved into the Bijeljina War Presidency, it took command of the defence and military forces, cooperating with the JNA.<sup>14597</sup>

3949. Radojčić testified that civilian authorities were not expected to interfere in command and military matters, and the President of Ilidža Municipality did not exercise any command and control or have any jurisdiction over the Ilidža Brigade.<sup>14598</sup>

3950. Slavko Mijanović testified that on 5 July 1992, the Ilidža War Commission adopted regulations on allocating flats for temporary use and, pursuant to the regulations, the Commission for the Allocation of Flats for Temporary Use was 3951. In respect of the nature of the alleged relationship between the regional and municipal leadership and police structures, Hanson testified on the closer and clearer ties between the police and the crisis staffs than between the military and the crisis staffs.<sup>14601</sup> In this respect, Hanson testified that by July 1992, the higher levels of the MUP began to express the need for clearer delineation of authority between local political leaders and the police, complaining of an ‘interference in local politics’ and ‘interventions and tampering’ by local governments.<sup>14602</sup> According to Hanson, the police were also crucial to the establishment and maintenance of Serb power on the ground.<sup>14603</sup> As the police were based in and materially supported by the municipalities, their ties with the crisis staff were closer and clearer than those of the military.<sup>14604</sup> Bosnian-Serb legislation stipulated that municipal police stations were to be tasked by, and report to, the MUP and the municipal assembly.<sup>14605</sup> The police were under the control of the civilian authority.<sup>14606</sup> Crisis staffs were further instructed to recruit active and reserve police forces, order their activation, and name new staff to run the Serb police stations.<sup>14607</sup> The crisis staffs enabled the creation of Serb police forces in the municipalities, including the firing of non-Serbs.<sup>14608</sup> CSBs regularly reported information to municipal and regional government organs.<sup>14609</sup> By July 1992, however, the higher levels of the MUP began to express the need for clearer delineation of authority between local political leaders and the police, complaining of an ‘interference in local politics’ and ‘interventions and tampering’ by local governments.<sup>14610</sup> While the police’s task was to ensure the functioning of the crisis staffs, the crisis staffs’ task was to ensure local security and safety.<sup>14611</sup> While the crisis staffs could issue orders to the police, the commander of the police was a member of the crisis staff.<sup>14612</sup> As well as overlap at the municipal level, the crisis staff and police were responsible to the same organs at the republican level, the government and the Presidency.<sup>14613</sup> According to Hanson, the common purpose of all was to establish and maintain Serb power in the municipalities.<sup>14614</sup>

3952. Mane Đurić testified that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, which was established in early April 1992, included the SJB Chief.<sup>14615</sup> According to Hanson, once a ‘purely Serb’ police force was established, the crisis staffs issued orders to, and received reports from, their municipal police force, including on the disarming of the non-Serb population.<sup>14616</sup> On 20 April 1992, the Sokolac Crisis Staff ordered the Sokolac SJB, together with JNA security organs, to identify those involved in the theft of military equipment from Faletići.<sup>14617</sup>

The relationship between the regional and municipal leadership and the Bosnian-Serb leadership

3953. Hanson testified that the SDS used the crisis staffs as party organs, and the crisis staffs claimed the authority of a collective municipal presidency.<sup>14618</sup> The SDS trusted the crisis staffs to operate based on their own initiative, in accordance with SDS policies, until the full functioning of the municipal organs of the new Bosnian-Serb state could be ensured.<sup>14619</sup> The crisis staffs cited the regional crisis staffs, the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, the Bosnian-Serb Presidency, and government orders and decisions as justification for their actions, including moving non-Serbs out of the municipalities.<sup>14620</sup>

3954. A list of commissioners was drawn up on 10 June 1992 and included Dragan Đokanović, Nikola Poplašen, Milimir Mučibabić, Miroslav Radovanović, Jovan Tintor, and Danilo Veselinović. Soon thereafter, Dragan Đokanović was appointed state commissioner for Zvornik, Vlasenica, Skelani, Bratunac, Šekovići, and Novo Sarajevo.<sup>14621</sup> Karadžić appointed a state commissioner for Ildiža Municipality on 21 August 1992.<sup>14622</sup> The appointed municipal war commissions were to act in accordance with the decision on the formation of war commissions in municipalities during a state of an imminent threat of war or war, dated 10 June 1992.<sup>14623</sup>

On 1 September 1992, Karadžić issued a decision that the organs of civilian and military authorities in the Bosnian-Serb Republic were required to cooperate with Mirko Mijatović, Commissioner of the Bosnian-Serb Presidency for Foča, Čajniče, Rudo, and Višegrad Municipalities, in the performance of the commissioner's tasks, and to provide him with accommodation, food, fuel, and personal security in their municipalities.<sup>14627</sup>

On 17 September 1992, Karadžić confirmed members of the Višegrad War Commission as well as another municipal war commission.<sup>14628</sup>

3956. Predrag Radić testified that he asked the JNA to help him establish communication lines with Pale about five times during the blockade, which lasted for about two months, from April until 26 June 1992.<sup>14629</sup>

3957. Witness RM-016 testified that the ARK Crisis Staff in Banja Luka was in absolute control of the decisions and events occurring in the ARK region and Neđeljko Rašula, President of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, communicated directly with the ARK Crisis Staff.<sup>14630</sup> From May to August 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff was the organ of authority in Banja Luka.<sup>14631</sup> The SDS controlled powerful positions in organs of authority, the police, the army, and civilian structures.<sup>14632</sup> Nenad Davidović testified that Rašula was also the main liaison between the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and the ARK Crisis Staff.<sup>14633</sup>

3958. The Trial Chamber also received the following evidence on the alleged specific links between municipal leaders and the Bosnian-Serb leadership.

3959. In relation to Foča Municipality, according to a letter from the Foča SDS Municipal Board to the SDS Crisis Staff dated 2 March 1992, the Foča SDS Municipal Board stated that it was capable of providing security to the Serb people and their property in the area and that it was ready to carry out any orders that would be issued.

The Foča SDS Municipal Board also expressed its unconditional support for the SDS Crisis Staff in Bosnia-Herzegovina.<sup>14634</sup>

3960. In relation to Rogatica Municipality, Sveto Veselinović testified that the main task of the Rogatica Crisis Staff was negotiations on the delineation of the municipality's territory and the division of power with the Muslims. The Rogatica Crisis Staff was later expanded from three to about 15 people, without any influence from the SDS Main Board or the party's highest officials.<sup>14635</sup>

3961. In relation to Sokolac Municipality, Tupajić stated that in 1991 and early 1992, the Sokolac SDS received orders, directives, and guidelines from the SDS Main Board.<sup>14636</sup> Important decisions were received in writing and, at times, orally.<sup>14637</sup> In June 1992, a war commission, consisting of the witness, Marko Simić, and two others was established in Sokolac and the war commissioners, who were also members of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly, kept the President of the Assembly informed of the situation on the ground.<sup>14638</sup> Marko Simić was a deputy for Sokolac to the Bosnian-Serb Assembly and Milovan Bjelica was President of the SDS Municipal Board; according to the witness, they had the most contact with the SDS and the Bosnian-Serb Republic leadership.<sup>14639</sup> On 15 May 1992, the Sokolac Crisis Staff provided three trucks with tarpaulins, in execution of Branko Đerić's order to transport 500 to 600 Muslims, originally detained in Bratunac, from Pale to Visoko via Ilijaš.<sup>14640</sup>

In relation to Zvornik Municipality, according to a report on the work of the Zvornik War Presidency, on 18 October 1995, the war presidency sent a telegram of support to Karadžić in connection with the measures taken to overcome and improve the situation at the time and the functioning of the authorities.<sup>14641</sup> The war presidency also noted its commitment to keeping the MoD regularly informed of its activities, the measures and tasks it would take and perform in accordance with the guidelines on the

Crimes perpetrated by the regional and municipal political leadership

3963. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4 and 8 that members of the following political structures, i.e. crisis staffs, war presidencies, war commissions, and municipal assemblies, committed underlying acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

3964. Starting with the regional political structures, as further set out in chapters 4.10.4 and 8.9.2 when Bosnian-Muslim and Bosnian-Croat villagers left Prijedor Municipality, the Crisis Staff plundered their property. In Banja Luka and Sanski Most municipalities, from 12 May 1992 and throughout the remainder of that year, the ARK Crisis Staff imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats by issuing decisions that were implemented by other perpetrators, discussed in chapters 4.1.6, 4.12.6, and 8.9.2. In Banja Luka and Ključ municipalities, between May 1992 and May 1993 and 27 May 1992 and May 1993 respectively, the ARK Crisis Staff also displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, as discussed in chapters 4.1.7, 4.6.7, and 8.5.2.

3965. Turning to the municipal political structures, as further set out in chapters 4.2.4 and 8.9.2 from 1992 onwards, including after the Bosnian Muslims were forced out of Bijeljina Municipality, Vojkan Đurković of the Bijeljina SDS, aided by Mauzer's men plundered property from Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina Municipality. They also displaced Bosnian Muslims from Bijeljina Municipality from the summer of 1992 until 1995, as described in chapters 4.2.7 and 8.5.2.

3966. As further set out in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.5 and 8.9.2, policemen subjected Bosnian Muslims to unlawful detention and cruel and/or inhumane treatment at Foča High School in June and July 1992. Mitar Sipčić, member of the Serb Crisis Staff in Foča, was in charge of these policemen in June 1992. As discussed in chapters 4.3.7 and 8.5.2, the Foča War Commission displaced Muslims from Foča Municipality from July until 13 August 1992.

3967. The SDS crisis staff in Kalinovik Municipality imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Bosnian Muslims from 12 May or later in May 1992, as further set out in chapters 4.5.6 and 8.9.2.

3968. As established in chapters 4.6.7 and 8.5.2, the Ključ Crisis Staff and members of the Civilian Protection Department in the Ključ Municipal Assembly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Ključ Municipality between 27 May 1992 and May 1993. Some displacements were perpetrated with members of the police and members of the VRS. From 12 May or later in May 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff with members of the Ključ SJB imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures, as further set out in chapters 4.6.6 and 8.9.2.

3969. As discussed in chapters 4.7.6 and 8.9.2, the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, alongside members of the Kotor Varoš MUP and members of the VRS, imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from 12 May 1992 onwards. Furthermore, the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats between June and November 1992, as established in chapters 4.7.7 and 8.5.2.

3970. As discussed in chapters 4.10.6 and 8.9.2, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, from 12 May 1992 onwards, imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Prijedor Municipality. They, alongside members of the VRS, including the Military Police of the Banja Luka Corps/1KK, the Omarska TO, and the Prijedor SJB, inter alia, subjected Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to unlawful detention and cruel and/or inhumane treatment at Omarska camp between 27 May and 16 August 1992, and at Keraterm camp between 25 May and at least 5 August 1992, as established in chapters 4.10.2 Schedules C.15.2 and C.15.3 and 8.9.2. A member of the Prijedor Crisis Staff also destroyed Bosnian-Muslim houses, as further set out in chapters 4.10.3 and 8.5.2.

3971. Members of the municipal crisis staff in Sanski Most Municipality destroyed a Muslim sacred site in mid-1992, as described in chapters 4.12.3 and 8.9.2. The Sanski Most Crisis Staff, on 15 May 1992 and pursuant to ARK Crisis Staff decisions, imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Muslims, as further set out in chapters 4.12.6 and 8.9.2. Between 27 May 1992 and 13 October 1995, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff and members of the SDS, alongside members of VRS units,

TO, MUP, and paramilitary groups displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, as discussed in chapters 4.12.7 and 8.5.2.

3972. As further set out in chapters 4.13.7 and 8.5.2, from 12 May 1992 onwards members of the crisis staff displaced Muslims from Sokolac Municipality.

3973. The Vlasenica Crisis Staff, alongside members of the VRS and members of the MUP, as well as Dragan Nikolić and camp guards, including Goran Tešić, a.k.a. Goce, a member of the MUP, other police officers, and Goran a.k.a. Vjetar and Đuro subjected Bosnian Muslims to unlawful detention and cruel and/or inhumane treatment at Sušica camp between 31 May 1992 and September 1992, as established in chapters 4.14.2 Schedule C.19.3 and 8.9.2. From 19 May 1992, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff imposed and maintained restrictive and discriminatory measures against Bosnian Muslims, as discussed in chapters 4.14.6 and 8.9.2. Furthermore, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff displaced Bosnian Muslims throughout May and June 1992, as further set out in chapters 4.14.7 and 8.5.2. Kraljević, under the command of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, led his unit, supported by a VRS unit, also displaced Bosnian Muslims during this time.

Knowledge of and response to crimes

3974. At a press conference on 11 November 1991, Radoslav Brđanin proposed that all directors and managers who did not participate in the plebiscite be urgently fired from their positions in the ARK and in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Brđanin stated that those who did not participate in the plebiscite should immediately tender their resignations, as their identities would soon be discovered from the lists of voters.<sup>14643</sup> On 22 June 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a decision, signed by Radoslav Brđanin, President of the ARK Crisis Staff, providing that only personnel of Serb ethnicity may hold posts important to the functioning of the economic entities, including posts in socially owned enterprises, state institutions, public enterprises, shareholding societies, the VRS, and the MUP.<sup>14644</sup> The decision further stated that these posts could not be held by personnel of Serb ethnicity who 'have not confirmed it in the plebiscite' or have not accepted that the only representative of the Serb people is the SDS. 3975. On 25 June 1992, the Petrovac Municipal Assembly Crisis Staff informed the ARK Crisis Staff of the steps taken to implement the ARK Crisis Staff decision of 22 June 1992.<sup>14646</sup> The steps in item one, paragraph one of the decision had been implemented in all public enterprises, institutions of public interest, and other labour associations, as well as public places. Further, all members of the police of Muslim 'nationality', both active and reserve, at the SJB had been fired.<sup>14647</sup> Muslims employed at the Municipal Assembly Administrative Organs had been fired, with the exception of one employee who was to be fired after completing his tasks.<sup>14648</sup> Employees of Serb 'nationality', who were considered disloyal, had already been fired from executive posts in public enterprises and institutions.<sup>14649</sup>

3976. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence of Bekir Delić, reviewed in chapter 9.2.10, that political leaders of the ARK in Banja Luka, including Vojo Kuprešanin, visited Manjača camp together with Popović. Zulić stated that on 13 August 1992, Anđelko Grahovac and Kuprešanin visited Manjača camp and promised the detainees more food.<sup>14650</sup> Muhamed Filipović stated that Kuprešanin told the detainees he had heard complaints of mistreatment. He was accompanied by Popović and Serb journalists.<sup>14651</sup> According to Witness RM-709, Kuprešanin also told the detainees that this situation had been imposed on the ARK, it was only temporary, and that the corps commander would improve the conditions in the camp.<sup>14652</sup>

3978. According to a report on the implementation of the conclusions of the Prijedor Municipal Crisis Staff dated 13 July 1992, the SJB was responsible for the implementation of a number of conclusions such as the ban on releasing detainees, which was being fully respected, and the issuing of permits to persons who were moving out of the municipality.<sup>14658</sup> The report also stated that the Prijedor SJB formed a unified intervention platoon which was actively engaged with members of the military police in the prevention and suppression of crimes, and the first results were visible with the ‘cracking down’ on looting, robbery, and the confiscation of illegally obtained property.<sup>14659</sup> The decision about the legalization of passes allowing citizens freedom of movement was being carried out and, according to this decision, passes were not distributed in crisis areas or to individuals wanted for crimes.<sup>14660</sup> The 22 June 1992 ARK Crisis Staff decision regarding the filling of vacant positions important for the functioning of the economy was implemented in the SJB.<sup>14661</sup>

3979. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the structure and establishment of regional and municipal political structures in the Bosnian-Serb Republic, including that crisis staffs and war presidencies publicly operated in the municipalities in 1992, as further set out in chapters 2.2.1 and 2.2.2.

3980. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that depending on the municipality, VRS personnel, usually the commander or his deputy, were members of crisis staffs and war presidencies in 1992. In some circumstances, such as in Prijedor Municipality, VRS personnel were not members of the crisis staff, war presidency, or war commission. Members of the ARK Crisis Staff, on the other hand, included the Commander of the VRS First Krajina Corps, General Momir Talić, and VRS Air Force officer, Major Zoran Jokić. The Commander of the VRS Ilidža Brigade, Vladimir Radojčić, was a member of the Ilidža War Presidency. Members of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff included Branko Basara, 6th Krajina Brigade Commander, and Colonel Neđeljko Aničić, who was the liaison between the military and civilian authorities in Sanski Most Municipality and acting commander of the Serb TO. Therefore, in light of the evidence before the Trial Chamber, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's argument that VRS personnel were not members of any crisis staff.

3981. To the extent that VRS personnel were members of crisis staffs and war presidencies or attended their meetings without being members, their role at least included coordinating logistics, such as arranging recruits and supplies, and updating the regional and municipal political leaders on the combat situation. Depending on the municipality, there were tensions between the VRS and the regional and municipal political leadership, such that Talić informed the VRS Main Staff in June 1992 that the unwillingness of the authorities in Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Ključ municipalities to address refugee problems, slow disarmament, and economic inertia unfavourably affected the morale of the First Krajina Corps. Nevertheless, that same month, the Ključ Crisis Staff agreed to cooperate fully with the military command. Some crisis staffs claimed authority over and issued orders to military units in their municipality. These attempts failed in Sanski Most Municipality, but not in Bijeljina Municipality. Although Basara did not make any decisions on the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, he tried to influence the decision-making process. By July 1992, the VRS was sufficiently robust so that the Minister of Defence called for the abolition of the crisis staffs.

3982. Contrary to the Defence's argument that VRS involvement was limited to logistical support, and despite the above-mentioned tensions, the Trial Chamber reiterates its findings on crimes in the municipalities, recalled above: the Ključ Crisis Staff, the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff, the Prijedor Crisis Staff, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff, and the Vlasenica Crisis Staff worked with members of the VRS, including the First Krajina Corps, to carry out underlying acts of persecution as a crime against humanity. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber finds that ARK political leaders, including Vojo Kuprešanin, visited Manjača camp and knew of the poor conditions and mistreatment of detainees. In this respect, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings in chapters 4.1.2 Schedule C.1.2 and 8.9.2 that members of the VRS, including the VRS First Krajina Corps, subjected detainees in Manjača camp to unlawful detention and cruel and/or inhumane treatment.

3983. Turning to the relationship between the MUP and the regional and municipal political leadership, the SJB Sanski Most Chief, Drago Majkić, and the SJB Chief, Mirko Vručinić, were members of the Sanski Most Crisis Staff. The Vlasenica SJB Chief was also a member of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff. The head of the Banja Luka CSB, Stojan Župljanin, was a member of the ARK Crisis Staff. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding in chapter 3.4 that the CSBs and SJBs were to implement certain municipal assembly regulations. Further to this, crisis staffs and war presidencies issued orders to and received reports from the MUP. Although by July 1992, the higher levels of the MUP sought a clearer delineation of authority between the police and crisis staffs, this does not detract from the Trial Chamber's findings, recalled above, that Mitar Sipčić, a member of the Foča Crisis Staff, worked with policemen in Foča Municipality in June 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff worked with Serb police, the Kotor Varoš Crisis Staff worked with the Kotor Varoš MUP, the Prijedor Crisis Staff worked with the Prijedor SJB, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff worked with the MUP, and the Vlasenica Crisis Staff worked with the MUP, including the Vlasenica SJB special police platoon, each in order to carry out underlying acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

3984. Regarding the Bosnian-Serb leadership, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings set out in chapters 2.1.1, 2.2.1, and 2.2.2. Further to this, the Trial Chamber finds that from April to June 1992, the regional and municipal leadership in Banja Luka Municipality needed to communicate with the Bosnian-Serb leadership in Pale, to the extent that Predrag Radić, a member of the Banja Luka and ARK Crisis Staffs, asked about five times for the JNA to help him establish communication. In May 1992, the Sokolac Crisis Staff followed orders from the Bosnian-Serb Republic. In June 1992 in Sokolac Municipality, republic commissioners informed the President of the Bosnian-Serb Assembly of the situation on the ground. On 1 September 1992, Karadžić directed civilian authorities to cooperate with republic commissioners.

3985. The Trial Chamber will further consider these findings in relation to the alleged overarching JCE in chapter 9.2.14.

9.2.10 Attempts to cover up crimes

3986. The Prosecution argued that JCE members, including members of the VRS, attempted to conceal the conditions in the camps in which thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained in inhumane conditions and covered up many of the crimes committed during the alleged ethnic cleansing campaign.<sup>14662</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence in relation to attempts to conceal the commission of some of the crimes charged in the Indictment committed in Banja Luka, Bijeljina, Foča, Kotor Varoš, Prijedor, and Vlasenica municipalities and will consider this evidence in this chapter. Much of the evidence has been reviewed in chapter 4. The Trial Chamber will address the specific submissions of the Defence below.

Banja Luka Municipality – Murder of Manjača camp detainees

3987. With respect to the alleged cover-up of the murder of six Manjača camp detainees sometime between 3 June and 18 December 1992, as set out in chapter 4.1.1 Schedule B.1.4 and 8.3.2, the Trial Chamber has taken judicial notice of Adjudicated Fact 488.<sup>14663</sup> It further received evidence from Witness RM-051, a VRS security officer;<sup>14664</sup> and Charles McLeod, a member of the ECMM in north-west Bosnia since July 1992.<sup>14665</sup>

3988. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Božidar Popović, the Manjača camp commander, ordered that death certificates giving a false account of the cause of death of detainees who were killed by being beaten inside Manjača camp be issued. Furthermore, on 30 August 1992, Popović falsely informed the ECMM that there had been six deaths in the camp up to that date but that they had all been due to natural causes. The Trial Chamber thus finds that Popović made efforts to conceal the murder of Manjača camp detainees from members of an international organization. The Trial Chamber further finds that on 8 July 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group concealed the murder of one Manjača camp detainee who had been shot and killed from the 1KK Command by falsely reporting to the command that the detainee had died of natural causes.

Banja Luka Municipality – conditions at Manjača camp

3989. With respect to the alleged cover-up of the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment of primarily Bosnian Muslims and some Bosnian Croats at Manjača camp between 3 June and 18 December 1992, as set out in chapter 4.10.2 Schedule C.1.2 and 8.9.2, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts. It further received evidence from Ewan Brown, a military analyst;<sup>14666</sup> Radimir Radinković, a VRS 1KK intelligence and security officer at Manjača camp as of May 1992;<sup>14667</sup> Boško Amidžić, Chief of Quartermaster Service in the 1KK from May 1992 and Assistant Commander for logistics in the 1KK from 14 February 1993;<sup>14668</sup> Adil Medić, a Muslim from Ključ and leader of the ‘Muslim Corps’ commission in charge of camp- and prisoner-related problems;<sup>14669</sup> Sakib Muhić, a Bosnian Muslim from Mahala in Sanski Most Town;<sup>14670</sup> Miloš Šolaja, Editor-in-chief within the 1KK Press Centre from 18 July 1992 until the end of the war;<sup>14671</sup> Bekir Delić, a Bosnian-Muslim from Sanski Most;<sup>14672</sup> Enis Šabanović, a Bosnian Muslim from Trnova in Sanski Most Municipality who was detained at Manjača camp from about 6 June to 24 November

3991. Radimir Radinković testified that the ICRC was regularly granted approval to visit Manjača camp, and journalists from various media and countries were occasionally granted such approval; Karadžić usually granted such approval.<sup>14683</sup> According to Boško Amidžić, the camp was regularly monitored by the ICRC, Merhamet, and

Caritas upon request from these organizations.<sup>14684</sup> The ICRC collected lists of detainees and the humanitarian organizations brought supplies, including eating utensils, dishes, dishwashing detergent, food, hygiene articles, and medicine.<sup>14685</sup> On several occasions, the witness personally accompanied the humanitarian workers during their visits to the camp.<sup>14686</sup>

3992. The Muslim lawyer Amir Džonlić visited Manjača camp with members of a local human rights organization in late May or early June 1992. Predrag Radić; General Momir Talić, Commander of the VRS 1KK; and Lieutenant Colonel Božidar Popović, head of Manjača camp, explained to Džonlić that the camp was under the control of the VRS 1KK, and that almost all of the detainees were POWs. Popović admitted that food at the camp was insufficient.<sup>14687</sup>

3993. Atif Džafić stated that at the end of June 1992, a delegation from Banja Luka visited the camp and questioned some of the detainees about the circumstances of their detention. Delegation representatives included members of the Banja Luka SDS, the Serb military and police, the ‘Serbian’ Red Cross, and ‘the Muslim Red Cross called Merhamet’; the latter included Adil Medić. Among the detainees selected to speak to the delegation, Omer Filipović spoke up and told the delegation about the living conditions in the camp. Following his story, the reporting ended and no one else was allowed to speak.<sup>14688</sup> Adil Medić confirmed that on 18 June 1992, he visited Manjača camp for the first time at the invitation of General Talić.<sup>14689</sup> During this visit, the witness was accompanied by Colonel Tepšić; Colonel Dikić, assistant to General Talić; and Popović.<sup>14690</sup> Based on conversations with detainees at the camp, the witness estimated that 1,200 detainees were kept in three stables.<sup>14691</sup> The witness met with two wounded detainees - Muhamed Filipović and Asim Egrić, both from Ključ – who, from his observations, had sustained injuries from beatings and bullets.<sup>14692</sup> Filipović complained about regular beatings, lack of food, shortage of clothing, and inadequate medical supplies in the camp.<sup>14693</sup> Amidžić testified that he, Tepšić, Lieutenant-Colonel

Andrić, and Captain Lukaić were present when representatives from Merhamet visited Manjača camp on 18 June 1992.<sup>14694</sup> According to a daily report from the Manjača Camp Operative Group to the 1KK of that day, the detainees told Merhamet representatives about the poor quality of the food, leaks in the living quarters, and about not being able to contact their families.<sup>14695</sup> However, the report stated that, in the assessment of the Manjača Camp Operative Group, the Merhamet representatives and the representatives of the detainees were ‘basically happy’ with the conditions prevailing at the camp.<sup>14696</sup>

3994. Medić testified that he later learned that Omer Filipović and another detainee named Esad Bender had been beaten to death on or around 28 or 29 July 1992.<sup>14697</sup> The witness claimed to know this based on the death certificates and pathological reports he obtained, and from subsequent discussions with other detainees.<sup>14698</sup> On 1 August 1992, Colonel Vukelić informed him that of the 2,000 detainees in the camp, less than 200 had anything to do with the armed conflict.<sup>14699</sup> The witness never saw a detainee dressed in uniform in the camp.<sup>14700</sup> While at the camp, he was also informed that of the persons detained at Manjača camp, 85 per cent were Muslim and 15 per cent were Croat.<sup>14701</sup>

3995. Ewan Brown testified that on 24 June 1992, two Merhamet representatives visited the camp and delivered food, some medication, clothing, footwear, and some personal hygiene items.<sup>14702</sup> They asked for a list of detainees, which they did not receive, and were informed that they were to apply to the corps command for such details. They were also not allowed to have contact with the detainees.<sup>14703</sup>

3996. From 14 to 16 July 1992, the ICRC visited Manjača camp and interviewed detainees without witnesses.<sup>14704</sup> The authorities refused to notify the ICRC of the identity of the detainees at the camp.<sup>14705</sup> Bekir Delić confirmed that the ICRC visited the camp between 7 and 14 July 1992.<sup>14706</sup> Džafić stated that for the visit of the ICRC on or about 14 July 1992, the detainees – whose clothes were tattered and falling apart – were given old JNA uniforms.<sup>14707</sup> The witness believed this was done to make them look like POWs.<sup>14708</sup> Following the visit of the ICRC around 14 July 1992, political leaders of the ARK in Banja Luka, including Vojo Kuprešanin, visited Manjača camp together with Popović, but in Delić's view this visit did not improve the conditions at Manjača camp.<sup>14709</sup>

3997. On 25 July 1992, the ICRC sent a report on the situation at Manjača camp to Karadžić, Biljana Plavšić, and Dragan Kalinić, Health Minister of the Bosnian-Serb Republic.<sup>14710</sup> In the report, the ICRC delegates noted that general living conditions, including hygiene and clothing, were 'absolutely insufficient'.<sup>14711</sup> The stables provided inadequate sanitary conditions and protection from the elements. Water supply was inconsistent and taps were provided inadequately; detainees only had the opportunity to shower twice a month, and facilities for washing clothes were non-existent.<sup>14712</sup> The delegates observed signs of anaemia in the detainees.<sup>14713</sup> The visit was also terminated prematurely when the ICRC delegates observed two detainees being subjected to ill-treatment.<sup>14714</sup> The delegates concluded that the camp should be closed, with civilian detainees released and military detainees transferred to adequate facilities.<sup>14715</sup> The delegates had submitted a list of 19 detainees who were either physically or mentally handicapped, wounded or who suffered from serious chronic or acute illness, such as tuberculosis; the delegates recommended these detainees be released immediately, stressing that there were many more and that this list was only the beginning.<sup>14716</sup>

3998. On 7 August 1992, Karadžić sent copies of the ICRC report on the situation in Manjača and Bileća to Prime Minister Branko Đerić, stating that he expected the Government to take prompt action to improve the living conditions in ‘the prisons on our territories that are being held by civil authorities’.<sup>14717</sup> Karadžić stated that in relation to the report, he had also sent a letter to Mladić.<sup>14718</sup> Karadžić also sent a letter to the president of the ICRC, condemning the local incidents provoked by ‘individuals and groups out of [his] control’.<sup>14719</sup> He accepted the recommendations of the ICRC concerning Manjača and Bileća – specifically the suggestion to release all persons older than 60 years of age from all the prisons – and stated that he had requested ‘from the commander of our Army Staff and from our Government’ to take action in accordance with the ICRC’s suggestions and to report back as soon as possible.<sup>14720</sup> Karadžić also stated the Serb government was ready to speed up the exchange of detainees through a system of decentralized exchange commissions. He suggested that the ICRC provide

4000. Sakib Muhić stated that after the ICRC was granted access to Manjača camp, the detainees were permitted to spend short periods of time outside. Around this time, there were many journalists visiting the camp and when they came, the guards allowed the detainees to spend some time outdoors in order to demonstrate to the journalists that they had freedom of movement within the camp.<sup>14723</sup>

4001. On 3 August 1992, pursuant to the agreement of the political leadership of the three Bosnia-Herzegovina peoples and relating to the preparation of POW camps for visits of foreign journalists and members of the ICRC, Mladić ordered that measures be immediately taken through the MUP and 'authorities' to arrange the POW camps in the various zones of responsibility in preparation for the visits. Visits were planned to take place at the Omarska, Trnopolje, and Manjača camps in the zone of the 1KK, and Lukavica prison in the SRK zone.<sup>14724</sup> Mladić ordered that all other camps in the zones of responsibility also be prepared.<sup>14725</sup> The recipient of the order, along with the MUP, was to provide accommodation for the journalists and escort them during their trip in the zone of responsibility and ensure their safety.<sup>14726</sup> Mladić also ordered the preparation of evidence of crimes committed by the 'enemy' to be presented to the teams, including video tapes, photographs, and other objects.<sup>14727</sup>

CSB, and the Security Organ of the 1KK Rear Command Post.<sup>14728</sup> Talić informed these commands that the VRS Main Staff Commander had provided his verbal approval for an ICRC team and reporters to visit the detention camps in Manjača, Trnopolje, Omarska, and Prijedor in the next two days. Talić instructed that all measures be taken to make conditions in these camps satisfactory, through ensuring, inter alia, functional medical care for detainees and records of deaths and findings on the cause of deaths.<sup>14729</sup> He further instructed that ‘representatives of the detainees for contact with the camp authorities’ be selected.<sup>14730</sup>

4003. On 13 August 1992, Dana Lukajić reported to the 1KK Command that the ICRC team had visited the Manjača camp on the same day and contacted the detainees of its choice without military organs being present.<sup>14731</sup> Due to its work, the team had probably obtained the information that two prisoners, Omer and Bender Filipović, had been physically maltreated, following which they had died.<sup>14732</sup> The ICRC also brought messages for detainees, and one of them indicated that detainees could be ‘bought’ for hard currency in Omarska.<sup>14733</sup>

4004. According to a report by the 1KK Command to the VRS Main Staff dated 13 August 1992, the ICRC had visited the camp that day.<sup>14734</sup> Brown testified that the ICRC returned to Manjača camp on 14 August 1992, with a delegation from the French Ministry of Health, headed by Minister Kouchner, and a number of foreign journalists.<sup>14735</sup> The ICRC also visited Manjača camp on 18, 24, and 26 August 1992 and delivered humanitarian aid, including food, water, and medical supplies to the camp.<sup>14736</sup>

4005. The UN Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, together with other UN representatives, visited Bosnia-Herzegovina from 21 to 26 August 1992.<sup>14737</sup> During this period, he tried to visit Manjača camp, reportedly the largest detention camp on Bosnian territory under the control of Serbs.<sup>14738</sup> Upon arrival at the camp, Mazowiecki requested permission to visit the detainees from the officer in charge. This request was denied because, according to the officer in charge, the detainees were 'tired of being visited by international missions' and it was too late in the day, even though it was more than an hour before sunset. Finally, the officer in charge indicated that the members of the mission were not allowed to visit the detainees because the mission had not requested permission from the central authorities to enter the Bosnian-Serb Republic. Mazowiecki reported that the treatment he received from the officer in charge gave him a vivid impression of the state of terror under which the detainees were presumably living. The officer in charge informed the members of the mission that there were 3,000 POWs who were held at the camp at that moment.<sup>14739</sup> According to Mazowiecki, well-informed sources estimated that the number of detainees was in all probability considerably higher than the official figures indicated. Even though it was unable to visit the camp, the mission did receive information, including photographs, from persons who had visited the camp a few weeks before and many detainees were in a poor state of health, with signs of malnutrition and, in some cases, torture. Mazowiecki also reported being informed that a detainee from the camp had recently been taken to the hospital and weighed only 34 kilograms.<sup>14740</sup>

4006. On 23 August 1992, Colonel Milutin Vukelić, the Assistant Commander of the 1KK, reported to the Bosnian-Serb Government, the VRS Main Staff, and the 1KK Command IKM that in accordance with a confidential order, the UN representative Tadeusz Mazowiecki had been prevented from visiting Manjača camp by the 1KK

4008. In a 24 August 1992 briefing by the organs of the VRS Main Staff attended by Mladić, the organ for reserve supplies reported that Mazowiecki ‘should have been allowed a visit’.<sup>14746</sup>

4009. According to Brown, a 1KK report dated 25 August 1992 noted that:

[...] in the territory and in the zone of combat operations visits by foreign journalists and delegations directed by the Banja Luka Press Centre are becoming increasingly frequent. Regarding the problems that arose in connection with the visit of UN envoy Tadeusz MAZOWIECKI [sic], a report was made, strictly confidential number 600, dated 23 August 1992, and General MLADIC’s remarks were conveyed to Corps Command organs. The commander of the prison camp, Lieutenant Colonel POPOVIC, has been informed of these views and he claims that during the latest visit by a Red Cross delegation there were no problems regarding the reception of aid, but he was unable to engage his physicians and quartermasters because they were on an official trip to Banja Luka.<sup>14747</sup>

4010. Ahmet Zulić stated that on 26 August 1992, Bernard Kouchner, a French minister, visited Manjača camp. Together with Božidar Popović, he entered the stable in which the witness was staying and wanted to talk to the detainees in German, French, or Italian, but none of the detainees dared to speak to him during the approximately ten-minute-long visit. Popović pointed to a group of men from Ključ who had arrived at the camp a few days prior, saying how nice the men looked and how they were not malnourished. Before Kouchner's visit, the detainees had to 'clean and straighten everything out'.<sup>14748</sup>

4011. On 1 November 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group reported to the 1KK Command that the ICRC visited the camp that day and provided 1,800 kilograms of bread and delivered messages to the detainees. The operative group was engaged in checking the incoming messages from the ICRC.<sup>14749</sup> The guard policeman Radenko Kaurin slapped two detainees in the presence of the ICRC because they took bread to eat while they were carrying bread baskets.<sup>14750</sup>

4013. With regard to visits to the camp by journalists, Miloš Šolaja testified that the Press Centre received all foreign journalists in the 1KK's zone of responsibility.<sup>14753</sup> Roy Gutman, Peter Maass of the Washington Post, and Chuck Sudetić of the New York Times also visited detainees at Manjača camp.<sup>14754</sup> Journalists of the Turkish Anadolu

Agency were also granted access to Manjača camp and visited.<sup>14755</sup> Brown testified that Roy Gutman, a US journalist working for Newsday, and a photographer also gained access to Manjača camp on 16 July 1992.<sup>14756</sup> Gutman interviewed a number of former detainees from Omarska, Trnopolje, and Manjača camps and published a number of articles in July and early August 1992, exposing the conditions at the three camps.<sup>14757</sup>

4014. On 8 August 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group reported to the 1KK Command that Manjača Camp had been visited that day by two teams of journalists, who were allowed to enter one of the cell blocks in order to inspect the state of the accommodation and to interview some detainees, including a member of the Croatian army and a Muslim priest.<sup>14758</sup> The visit was ‘directed, that is, scripted’ by 1KK Press Centre Head Major Milutinović, whereas Camp Commander Lieutenant Colonel Božidar Popović and the 1KK security organ was with the groups of journalists at all times during their visit.<sup>14759</sup>

4015. On 8 August 1992, the 1KK reported to the VRS Main Staff that two groups of foreign correspondents visited Manjača camp that day.<sup>14760</sup> It further reported that the correspondents were satisfied that Manjača was not a concentration camp and that they did not have any serious objections to the conditions in the camp.<sup>14761</sup>

4016. On 10 August 1992, the 1KK reported that a group of journalists from the US, UK, and France visited Manjača camp for one hour. On 12 August 1992, a group of seven journalists visited the camp and the camp’s daily report noted that they had ‘tried, as during all previous visits, to photograph and see only the bad side of the camp and the undernourished prisoners’.<sup>14762</sup>

4017. On 12 December 1992, three journalists visited Manjača camp and were interested in the accommodation, treatment, and reasons for the arrest of the detainees they spoke to.<sup>14763</sup>

4018. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that sometime in early June 1992, Predrag Radić; General Momir Talić, Commander of the VRS 1KK; and Božidar Popović, the Manjača camp commander told a Muslim lawyer who visited Manjača camp together with members of a local human rights organization that almost all Manjača camp detainees were POWs. The Trial Chamber recalls that the detainees at Manjača camp were predominantly civilians and that the VRS 1KK was responsible for detention at the camp (see chapter 4.1.2 Schedule C.I.2). The Trial Chamber thus considers that Talić, as well as camp commander Popović, knew that the majority of detainees were not POWs and that the information they provided was therefore purposefully misleading. Also, on 24 June 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group denied members of Merhamet contact with the detainees and did not provide them with a list of detainees which they had requested. The members of the operative group told Merhamet that such information was to be requested from the 1KK Command. Furthermore, during a visit of the ICRC which took place around mid-July 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group gave the detainees old JNA uniforms and refused to inform the ICRC of the identity of the detainees at the camp. Also, on 8 August 1992, the Manjača Camp Operative Group did not allow the visiting journalists to see a group of detainees who had recently been transferred from Omarska camp, while between 18 and 26 August 1992, it denied the ICRC access to the camp.<sup>14764</sup> On 23 August 1992, the 1KK Command, acting pursuant to instructions from the Bosnian-Serb Government and the VRS Main Staff, prevented the UN Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, from visiting Manjača camp. However, the Trial Chamber further finds that the 1KK permitted the ICRC and members of other local and international organizations, including Merhamet and the ECMM, to visit Manjača camp on several occasions between June and December 1992 and that on a number of these occasions, the ICRC registered detainees and interviewed them with respect to their treatment and the conditions of detention. International journalists also visited Manjača camp on a number of occasions between July and December 1992 and interviewed detainees at the camp. The visits usually occurred with Karadžić's approval and the members of the ICRC and other organizations, as well as the journalists were sometimes accompanied by members of the 1KK during their visits. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that, in some instances, the 1KK, the VRS Main Staff, and the Bosnian-Serb Government made efforts to conceal the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment at Manjača camp from journalists and representatives of international and local human rights organizations. It further finds that they also sometimes permitted such persons to visit Manjača camp and interview detainees at the camp.

4019. Mladić's alleged involvement in the concealment of the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats at Manjača camp will be further addressed in chapter 9.3.10.

Bijeljina Municipality – Batković camp

4021. The Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights visited Batković camp in October 1992 and reported that the approximately 1,000 Muslim prisoners there generally appeared to be in good health and did not complain of ill-treatment, although they complained that they did not know the reasons for their detention and slept on straw bedding on the floor of an unheated stable, where living conditions were intolerable in the cold.<sup>14774</sup>

4022. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that in October 1992, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights visited Batković camp. The ICRC also visited Batković camp on a number of occasions from late August or September 1992 onwards, and in some instances could speak to the detainees without the presence of camp guards. However, not all Batković camp detainees were registered with the ICRC.<sup>14775</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding in chapter 4.2.2 Schedule C.2.1 that a Serb doctor, accompanied by two nurses, only arrived at the camp on days the ICRC visited the camp. In addition, when representatives of the ICRC visited the camp, the camp guards temporarily removed from the camp the detainees who were younger than 18 and over 60 years of age, as well as those detainees who had been most severely beaten.<sup>14776</sup> Camp guards, as well as Serb policemen and Vlado Stević, a

<sup>14774</sup> P2813 (Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights report on the human rights situation in the territory of former Yugoslavia, 27 October 1992), paras 2, 15.

<sup>14775</sup> While the Trial Chamber received evidence from Milenko Todorović that all detainees were registered upon their arrival at Batković camp and the President of the POW commission, Ljubomir Mitrović, would then immediately notify the ICRC in Bijeljina, the Trial Chamber notes that Todorović was chief of the intelligence and security organ of the IBK only as of 16 November 1993. His evidence therefore does not contradict the evidence of Witness RM-088 that, in September 1992, a group of elderly, children, and former Muslim JNA soldiers, the presence of whom had not been reported to the ICRC when they arrived at the camp in August, were released and that he did not type a report about a former JNA soldier who died as a consequence of a beating in August 1992, as the former JNA soldier had never been registered with the ICRC. Under these circumstances, the Trial Chamber also rejects the Defence's submission that all detainees were registered by the ICRC upon arrival at Batković camp (see Defence Final Brief, para. 1630).

<sup>14776</sup> The Trial Chamber received evidence from Đorđo Krstić that no special preparations were made before the ICRC or foreign journalists visited Batković camp. However, the Trial Chamber notes that Krstić was the deputy warden of Batković camp from 11 January 1993 to 6 June 1994, so not throughout the whole period of existence of the camp. His evidence therefore does not contradict Adjudicated Fact 513.

military policeman from the Bijeljina barracks, disguised themselves as detainees so as to stand in for those detainees who had been temporarily removed or killed. Detainees were also hidden when journalists visited Batković camp.<sup>14777</sup> Considering that on 4 August 1992, Colonel Dragutin Ilić, Commander of the IBK, had ordered that Batković camp be prepared for a visit by foreign journalists and the ICRC,<sup>14778</sup> the Trial Chamber finds that these measures were taken pursuant to Ilić's order.

4023. The camp guards also instructed the detainees to report to the ICRC that the conditions at the camp were good and beat the detainees who did not comply and, on one occasion when an American news crew visited Batković camp in September 1992, Velibor Stojanović and Deputy Commander Mladen Tukodi told the detainees that they were not allowed to tell the reporters about the detainees who were dead or who had been beaten.

4024. Furthermore, the Batković camp command, including Tukodi, ordered detainees to include false information in reports sent to the ICRC. Detainees who had died because they were denied access to medical care were reported to have died of natural causes and if a detainee was killed, the report would state that he had been exchanged. In particular, when the ICRC enquired about the whereabouts of a murdered Bosnian-Croat detainee, as found in chapters 4.2.1 Schedule B.2.1 and 8.3.2, Tukodi ordered another detainee to add the murdered detainee's name to a list of people who had already been released. Furthermore, after the murder of two Bosnian-Muslim Batković camp detainees, as found in chapters 4.2.1 Schedule B.2.1, the camp command ordered a detainee to type a report for the ICRC stating that the two detainees had been exchanged; it was only after details about the incident came to the attention of the ICRC that the camp command confirmed that the two detainees had been killed.

4025. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Dragutin Ilić, the Batković camp guards, and the camp command, including Deputy Commander Tukodi, made <sup>14777</sup> With respect to the Defence's argument that the alleged hiding of detainees is not supported by the evidence, due to the 'almost constant presence' of the ICRC (see Defence Final Brief, para. 1637), the Trial Chamber rejects the argument as unmeritorious. The Trial Chamber's findings that detainees were hidden both when the ICRC and when journalists visited the camp is based on the unrebutted Adjudicated Fact 513 and the evidence of Tahir Ferhatbegović, Witness RM-088, and Mirsad Kuralić, which provides further details in this respect.

<sup>14778</sup> In light of the VRS Main Staff order to the IBK Command that a POW camp be set up for POWs in the village of Batković dated 12 June 1992, in evidence as exhibit P189, the Trial Chamber understands the 4 August 1992 order from Colonel Dragutin Ilić, Commander of the IBK, to the commander of an unspecified POW camp, in evidence as exhibit P6795, to have been addressed to the commander of Batković camp.

efforts to conceal the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment at Batković camp and the murder of a Bosnian-Croat Batković camp detainee from the ICRC and international journalists. The camp command also attempted to conceal the murder of two Bosnian-Muslim Batković camp detainees from the ICRC.

Foča Municipality – KP Dom Foča

4026. With respect to the alleged cover-up of the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment of non-Serb civilian men, mostly of Bosnian-Muslim ethnicity, at KP Dom Foča between 12 May 1992 and October 1994, as set out in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.1 and 8.9.2, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts.<sup>14779</sup> It further received evidence from Witness RM-046, Witness RM-086, and Witness RM-013, all Bosnian Muslims from Foča.<sup>14780</sup>

4027. Witness RM-046 testified that on 23 June 1993, the ICRC came to KP Dom to register the detainees, but a group of 12 detainees, mostly professionals and intellectuals, were hidden in the cellar of the bakery outside KP Dom because, according to the guards, they were meant for ‘retaliation’.<sup>14781</sup>

4028. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the ICRC visited KP Dom Foča on a number of occasions between 1992 and 1993. During these visits, the ICRC was able to talk to some of the detainees, in the presence of camp guards, including the head of guards and his deputy. However, during these visits, the camp guards hid a group of 25 detainees who were kept hidden until 1993, when they were finally registered by the ICRC. During an ICRC visit which took place on 23 June 1993, the camp guards hid a group of 12 detainees. The Trial Chamber further finds that only when British journalists announced that they would be visiting KP Dom did the camp guards tell the detainees to clean their rooms, give them haircuts, and allow them to shave and wash themselves. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the authorities in charge of KP Dom Foča, MoJ employees and other camp guards, made efforts to conceal the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment of some of the KP Dom Foča detainees from the ICRC and international journalists.

Foča Municipality – Foča high school

4029. With respect to the alleged cover-up of the cruel and inhumane treatment of Bosnian-Muslim civilian detainees at Foča high school in June and July 1992, as set out in chapters 4.3.2 Schedule C.6.5 and 8.9.2, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Witness RM-070, a Muslim woman from Foča Municipality.<sup>14782</sup>

4030. Based on the evidence of Witness RM-070, the Trial Chamber finds that before Serbian TV reporters came to Foča high school to interview the detainees about their living conditions, Mitar Sipčić from the Serb Crisis Staff in Foča, who was in charge of the policemen guarding the school in June 1992, told the detainees to tell the journalists that they were treated well. As a consequence, nobody dared to tell the journalists about the rapes that had occurred at the school. The Trial Chamber thus finds that Sipčić made efforts to conceal the cruel and inhumane treatment at the school from journalists.

Kotor Varoš Municipality – Murder at Grabovica School

4031. In relation to the alleged cover-up of the murder of approximately 150 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men in the sports hall of Grabovica School, at a field in Duboka, and in Maljava on 4 November 1992, as set out in chapter 4.7.1 Schedule A.4.4 and 8.3.2, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts. It further received evidence from Witness RM-009, a Bosnian Serb from Kotor Varoš;<sup>14783</sup> and Witness RM-802, a VRS officer,<sup>14784</sup> as well as documentary evidence.

4032. Witness RM-009 testified that sometime after October 1992, Duško Kerezović gave a verbal order for Serb-only members of the Sanitation Unit to take some vehicles to Grabovica because a large killing had occurred, and to tell Slavko Kuprešak to take his fire brigade truck there in order to wash the road.<sup>14785</sup> Kerezović also ordered Velibor Tepić to re-paint the walls of the school's sports hall.<sup>14786</sup> In all other instances, the Sanitation Unit had received written orders from Kerezović, but this time Kerezović's order was verbal and related specifically to an all-Serb work detail, which was understood to mean that Kerezović wanted to conceal the operation from the international community.<sup>14787</sup> According to the witness, a terrible crime had happened at Grabovica in which 160 to 163 unarmed civilians were killed.<sup>14788</sup> Members of the Sanitation Unit including Želimir Brkić, Mile Brborović, Velibor Katana, and Boško Filipović, arrived in Grabovica that morning around 9 a.m.<sup>14789</sup> There were bodies lying along the road as far as 100 metres away from the school.<sup>14790</sup> Members of the Sanitation Unit reported to Milivoje Kljajić, Commander of the Grabovica Platoon, in front of the school.<sup>14791</sup> Kljajić told them that bodies were located at the school, as well as in Duboka and Maljava, but that no list of the dead would be provided.<sup>14792</sup> Nedeljko Đekanović went to Grabovica School on 5 November 1992 to monitor the 'clearing up of the terrain and cleaning of the school'.<sup>14793</sup> According to the minutes of the 118th meeting of the War Presidency of Kotor Varoš on 6 November 1992, attended also by Slobodan Župljanin, Zdravko Pejić, and Čedo Đukić, the Kotor Varoš War Presidency was informed that Đekanović, the President of the War Presidency, monitored the clearing up of the terrain and the cleaning of the school in Grabovica.<sup>14794</sup>

4034. At Grabovica School, soldiers had loaded around 25 bodies from inside the school into a trailer.<sup>14797</sup> At this point, all of the bodies had been removed from the school's sports hall.

4035. After gathering corpses from Duboka, the members of the Sanitation Unit returned to the school, where they heard one of the Muslim victims from Večići, who was thought to be dead, calling out from under the bodies for water.<sup>14798</sup> Pero Zarić arrived and, when a member of the Sanitation Unit ordered that the wounded man be taken to the hospital, Zarić said, '[w]ell, here's water and here's the hospital for him,' and then shot the Muslim man dead at close range.<sup>14799</sup>

4036. Once the vehicles, which included three military trucks and two tractors with trailers, were fully loaded with approximately 165 bodies, a convoy was formed which included the excavator, which left Grabovica in the direction of Vrbanjci, passing women who spat on the vehicles, saying that they were very pleased with the killings.<sup>14800</sup> Kerezović ordered the convoy to bury the bodies at a location in Plitska, and members of the Sanitation Unit, with the help of 20 soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units who were drinking alcohol the entire time, buried the bodies in a mass grave.<sup>14801</sup> The burial was done in a hurry and at night so that the international community and the ICRC would not hear of it.<sup>14802</sup>

4037. The following day, pursuant to verbal orders of Kerezović, members of the Sanitation Unit added additional bodies to the mass grave and put more soil on the grave because dogs had started digging up some of the bodies.<sup>14803</sup> A few days later, Kerezović ordered members of the Sanitation Unit to pick up the remaining bodies in Maljava.<sup>14804</sup> The bodies were taken by members of the Sanitation Unit to Plitska where, in the presence of five or six soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units, they were buried in a mass grave. The Sanitation Unit then reported to Kerezović that the work had been completed.<sup>14805</sup>

4038. According to a report of the 1KK Command of 4 November, ‘a brutal massacre of the captured members of the Green Berets started because of the wounding of four and the killing of one soldier of the Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade and the burning of wounded soldiers on Gola Planina (Jajce)’.<sup>14806</sup> The 4 November 1992 report from the 1KK to the VRS Main Staff specified that those killed were part of a group of 200 members of the Green Berets who had been captured that day following a clash with Muslim forces in the area of Kotor Varoš, which had occurred because of a refusal to negotiate on moving out of the Večići area, and in which 40 Green Berets had been killed.<sup>14807</sup> The report goes on to state that ‘[m]easures to prevent further massacre were taken through the 22nd Light Infantry Brigade’.<sup>14808</sup> The report also states that the situation was calm in other areas under the control of the 1KK, ‘[w]ith the exception of Kotor Varoš, where we have taken serious intentions to prevent a genocide of Muslims. Women and children from the area have been allowed to pass through to Travnik’.<sup>14809</sup>

Witness RM-802 testified that this report did not accurately reflect what had actually happened in Grabovica and that the part about taking measures to prevent further massacres was likely meaningless and only included as a formality.<sup>14810</sup> According to another 1KK Command report dated 4 November 1992, sent by Colonel Milutin Vukelić to the VRS Main Staff, Green Berets pulling out from Večići fell into an ambush of the 1KK. Forty of them were killed during the clash, 150 members, mostly women and children, surrendered, and another 20 members of the ABiH were captured.<sup>14811</sup> On 5 November 1992, the 1KK submitted yet another report to the VRS Main Staff which stated that ‘following the death of one soldier and the wounding of several others, more than 150 extremists died in combat’.<sup>14812</sup> Witness RM-802 testified that this report was inaccurate with respect to the combat in which 150

'extremists' died, and neither was there any fighting at that time nor had so many fighters been killed.<sup>14813</sup>

4039. The Trial Chamber also considered additional evidence of Witness RM-009, which has been placed in the confidential annex in Appendix D.

4040. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that around 5 November 1992, pursuant to a verbal order from Duško Kerezović, members of the Sanitation Unit, with the help of 20 soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units, buried the bodies of some of the approximately 150 unarmed Bosnian-Muslim men in two mass graves at Plitska. The men had been murdered the previous day in and around Grabovica School. The burial was carried out hurriedly and at night. Pursuant to Kerezović's order, only Serb members of the Sanitation Unit were to participate in the operation. Based on the circumstances in which the order was given, and the manner in which it was carried out, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence's argument that the order that the terrain be cleared at Grabovica was not an attempt to conceal what had occurred.<sup>14814</sup> The Commander of the Grabovica Platoon Milivoje Kljajić and military police member Zoran Kovačević were present at Grabovica School when the members of the Sanitation Unit arrived to pick up the bodies. Kljajić indicated that no list of the dead was to be provided. The operation was monitored by Nedeljko Đekanović, the President of the Kotor Varoš War Presidency. The Trial Chamber finds that Kerezović had also ordered Slavko Kuprešak to wash the road in Grabovica with his fire brigade truck and Velibor Tepić to re-paint the walls of the sports hall of Grabovica School. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Kerezović, members of the Sanitation Unit, 20 soldiers from the Grabovica and Vrbanjci units, and Đekanović made efforts to conceal the murder at Grabovica School from the international community. The Trial Chamber further finds that on 4 November 1992, the 1KK made efforts to conceal the murder from the VRS Main Staff by falsely reporting that captured members of the Green Berets had been killed that day following the wounding of four and the killing of one soldier of the Kotor Varoš Light Infantry Brigade and the burning of wounded soldiers on Gola Planina, while the following day, the 1KK falsely reported to the VRS Main Staff that the same victims had died as a result of combat operations.

Kotor Varoš Municipality – Murder in Vrbanjci

4041. In relation to the alleged cover-up of the murder of at least 30 Bosnian Muslims, including 15 Bosnian Muslims who were detained in Alagić café, on 2 July 1992, during the attack on Vrbanjci in retaliation for an ambush of VRS forces by armed Bosnian Muslims, as set out in chapter 4.7.1 Unscheduled murder incidents, the Trial Chamber received evidence from Witness RM-009, a Bosnian Serb from Kotor Varoš.<sup>14815</sup>

4042. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that on 3 July 1992, members of the Sanitation Unit buried the bodies of some of the Bosnian Muslims who had been murdered the previous day during the attack on Vrbanjci. The burial was carried out pursuant to an order from Duško Kerezović, who had received specific orders in this respect from Sretko Majstorović, the Minister of War for Kotor Varoš. Given the fact that the order specified that only Serb members of the Sanitation Unit were to participate in the operation, the Trial Chamber finds that Kerezović, acting pursuant to Majstorović's order, and the members of the Sanitation Unit made efforts to conceal the murder from the public.

Prijedor Municipality – Murder of Keraterm camp detainees

4045. In relation to the alleged cover-up of the unlawful detention and the cruel and inhumane treatment of approximately 3,300 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats at Omarska camp between 27 May and 16 August 1992, as set out in chapters 4.10.2 Schedule C.15.2 and 8.9.2, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of a number of Adjudicated Facts.<sup>14819</sup> It further received evidence from Edward Vulliamy, a journalist for The Guardian who covered events in Bosnia-Herzegovina between 1992 and 1995;<sup>14820</sup> Milovan Milutinović, Chief of the Press Centre and the Information Service at the 1KK between 1992 and 1994 and head of the VRS Main Staff Information Service and Centre for Information and Propaganda Activities between 1994 and 1996;<sup>14821</sup> Witness RM-065 and Witness RM-026, both Bosnian Muslims from Prijedor Municipality;<sup>14822</sup> Miloš Šolaja, Editor-in-chief within the 1KK Press Centre from 18 July 1992 until the end of the war,<sup>14823</sup> as well as documentary evidence.<sup>14824</sup>
